A BRITISH nun was last night free after a 10-week ordeal as soldiers occupied her convent in Rwanda. phans freed by French special forces who flew them to safety in Zaire yesterday.

Sister Susan McLean, 42, and her fellow missionaries were subjected nightly to mock executions and threatened with death if they offered sanctuary to desperate civilians. The sisters were forced to turn away people begging for sanctuary, even though this meant condemning many to death in the war. The nuns are likely to be flown to Paris.

She was among 43 nuns and or-
