An armed ``gang`` from Uganda infiltrated the Rugendabari region close to the border overnight last Saturday [16 March], stabbing three civilians including the local agricultural engineer to death, the radio also said. The group of some 20 men all wore Ugandan Army uniforms and looted the homes of their victims, the radio said.

Rwandan President Juvenal Habyarimana last week offered an amnesty to the rebels, who invaded from Uganda last October. Many of them were Ugandan Army deserters from Rwanda's minority Tutsi clan. Hundreds of thousands of Tutsis have grown up in exile since the majority Hutus took power amid tribal bloodshed in the late 1950s, before independence.
