[3] La jurisprudence de la Chambre d'appel soit confirme essentiellement l'approche des jugements rendus par les Chambres de première instance, admettant la responsabilité par omission dans le cadre de l'aide et de l'encouragement prévus par l'article 6 (1), 7 (1) des deux Statuts, soit envisage la responsabilité par omission directement en appel. C'est ainsi que la Chambre d'appel dans Blaskic a considéré spécifiquement l'affirmation de la Chambre de 1ère instance sur l'aide et l'encouragement par omission en laissant ouvert seulement l'aspect de la source de l'obligation (Judgement, 29 July 2004, para 47). Dans Ntagerura aussi on a eu l'occasion, en appel même, d'occuper de la responsabilité selon l'art. 6 (1), mais on s'est limité à comme une forme d'assistance ou d'encouragement (voire d'incitation[4]) à la commission du crime par l'auteur principal. Les omissions peuvent également engager la responsabilité d'un individu dans le cadre d'une entreprise criminelle conjointe (ECC)[5]. Dans ce cas, l'individu serait responsable d'une commission[6].

Ce sont en l'espèce les deux formes de responsabilité par omission que plaide le Procureur.

4. Je ne vois pas que "liability for an omission may arise in a third, fundamentally different context: where the accused is charged with a duty to prevent or punish others from committing a crime", ni que "the culpability arises not by participating in the commission of a crime, but by allowing another person to commit a crime which the Accused has a duty to prevent or punish"[7] (sauf le contexte de la responsabilité du supérieur, à laquelle d'ailleurs la majorité de la Chambre n'entend pas se référer[8]).

5. A mon avis, l'expression Failure of Duty to Prevent or Punish, ne se référant pas à la disposition de l'art. 6 (3), ne vise pas un contexte différent par rapport aux contextes relatifs aux autres omissions plaidées, mais décrit des infractions particulières, toute omission coupable n'étant qu'un manquement au devoir d'agir. En effet, si les actions comportant une responsabilité pénale consistent dans la violation d'une règle juridique portant interdiction de faire, les omissions sources de responsabilité consistent toujours dans la violation d'une règle juridique portant obligation d'agir[9].

6. S'il est vrai que l'expression en question présente, surtout en ce qui concerne le manquement au devoir de punir, une certaine ambiguïté par rapport à la responsabilité selon l'Article 6 (3), par la charge plaidée on envisage la punition manquée des auteurs des crimes comme une facilitation, un encouragement à la commission de crimes ultérieurs pour lesquelles la responsabilité de l'Accusé faire état de l'accord des parties sur le fait « qu'un accusé /peut/ être tenu pénalement responsable d'une omission sur la base de l'art. 6 (1) du Statut » (par. 334). Dans Blaskic, encore, la Chambre d'appel a considéré l'accusé responsable de traitements inhumains pour des manquements à une obligation d'agir, excluant sa responsabilité pour des actes positifs se rapportant au même chef et qui avait été retenue par la Chambre de première instance. Pour économie du discours je ne me réfère pas à d'autres décisions et jugements, en 1ère instance et appel, où les omissions ont été bien considérées comme forme de responsabilité selon les articles 6 (1) et 7 (1) des Statuts. Je ne partage donc pas l'avis de la majorité de la Chambre qu'en plus des omissions en présence de l'accusé ou en stricte connexion avec des actes positifs, "other examples of aiding and abetting through failure to act are not to be easily found in the annals of the ad hoc Tribunals" (Mpambara Jugdment, para. 23).

[4] "Instigation can take many different forms; it can be expressed or implied, and entail both acts and omissions". Blaskic Judgement TC 3 March 2000, para 270.

[5] La Chambre d'appel dans l'affaire Kvocka a approfondi les distinctions à faire par rapport à la mens rea et à l'effet substantiel entre une omission comme simple forme d'aide et encouragement et une omission dans le contexte d'une ECC (Judgement AC, 28 February 2005, para. 90).

[6] Je ne vois pas que "it is hard to imagine that total passivity could demonstrate the requisite intent for co-perpetratorship" (pararagraph 24 du Jugement) : cela dépend seulement des circonstances concrètes. La « passivité » coupable représente l'actus reus (violation d'un devoir d'agir), la mens rea est un autre élément à prouver : et on peut bien partager la mens rea des autres participants à la ECC même en omettant simplement de remplir un devoir d'agir.

[7] Mpambara Judgment, TC 12 September 2006, p.13, para. 25.

[8] V. à ce propos note 1 ci-dessus. Mais le langage utilisé dans le passage cité semble justement évoquer la responsabilité du supérieur.

[9] Sur la source de l'obligation d'agir la jurisprudence des deux Tribunaux se divise. Il y a des Chambres qui, suivant la décision d'Appel Tadic dans laquelle pour la première fois on s'est occupée de cette question, voient cette source seulement dans le droit pénal, tandis que d'autres Chambres prennent en considération une « obligation légale d'agir quelconque ». La dernière approche, en tout cas suivie le plus souvent. Malheureusement la question n'a pas été abordée sinon indirectement par la Chambre d'Appel dans l'Affaire Ntagerura. Ici, se trouvant confrontée à une décision de 1ère instance qui reprenait sur le point l'approche qu'on trouve dans Tadic sur la source pénale de l'obligation d'agir, la Chambre d'appel a décidé de ne pas approfondir cet aspect et de se limiter à considérer la question de la capacité d'agir, qui avait été à la base de l'opinion individuelle d'un Juge de 1ère instance. La Chambre a donc conclu dans le sens que « le Procureur n'a pas indiqué les possibilités dont disposait Bagambiki pour s'acquitter de ses obligations dans le cadre de la législation nationale rwandaise », en ajoutant que « même si le fait de ne pas s'être acquitté de l'obligation incombant à un préfet rwandais d'assurer la protection de la population dans sa préfecture était susceptible d'engager sa responsabilité en droit pénal international, le Procureur n'a pas établi que l'erreur qu'aurait commise la Chambre de première instance a invalidé sa décision ». A mon avis, le droit pénal, interne ou international, peut prévoir des conséquences en termes de responsabilité individuelle pour violation d'obligations prévues par d'autres branches du droit, comme c'est le cas pour les obligations posées à la charge des agents d'Etats.

serait encore engagée. Et cela pourrait bien être le cas surtout dans une situation, comme dans la présente affaire, d'attaques continues qui ont eu une stricte connexion tant spatiale que temporelle et même personnelle entre eux (la même Commune, une période de temps très court, parfois les mêmes attaquants). On se trouverait donc toujours dans le contexte de l'aide et encouragement selon l'art. 6 (1)[10].

7. Je regrette encore de ne pas pouvoir partager l'avis de la majorité de la Chambre que parmi les omissions plaidées par le Procureur dans la présente affaire comme forme de participation de l'Accusé à une ECC de la première catégorie ou comme aide ou encouragement donnés aux auteurs des crimes et que la Chambre considère dans ses conclusions, on ne pourrait pas considérer[11] Failure of Duty to Prevent or Punish, parce que la défense n'aurait pas été adéquatement informée à temps de cette « particulière omission »[12].

8. A mon avis, si la défense n'a pas pu exercer ses droits pour ne pas avoir reçu une information adéquate du prétendu manquement par l'Accusé au devoir d'empêcher les crimes et d'en punir les auteurs, on doit retenir qu'elle n'a même pas reçu une telle information en ce qui concerne les autres omissions plaidées, pour lesquelles la majorité de la Chambre ne relève aucun défaut de l'Acte d'accusation. Mais, pourtant, toute omission doit être plaidée selon les éléments qui la caractérisent, y compris l'obligation dont la violation comporterait une omission coupable selon le Statut.

9. Si je partage pour l'essentiel, la reconstruction par la majorité de la Chambre des défauts que l'Acte d'accusation contre l'accusé Mpambara présentait et auxquels les successives écritures n'avaient pas réussi à remédier efficacement (mais cela par rapport à toute omission plaidée et non seulement au manquement au devoir de prévenir et punir), je suis toutefois de l'avis que l'Accusé n'a subit aucun préjudice à son droit de se défendre.

10. En effet, selon l'opinion de la Chambre d'appel, l'obligation qui est faite au Procureur d'informer l'accusé clairement et en détail des charges alléguées à son encontre, doit être considérée non de façon isolée, mais en fonction du droit de l'accusé à assurer sa défense. Dès lors, il est nécessaire d'évaluer si le Procureur en a donné une information adéquate par rapport à la compréhension qu'en a eu la Défense. En effet, s'il est vrai qu'« aucune déclaration de culpabilité ne peut être prononcée lorsque le manquement à l'obligation d'informer dûment la personne poursuivie des motifs de droit et de fait sur lesquels reposent les accusations dont elle est l'objet a porté atteinte à son droit à un procès équitable », il n'en est pas moins vrai que la Chambre doit apprécier concrètement si l'accusé était ou non « in a reasonable position to understand the charges against him or her ». Encore, selon la Chambre d'appel, si la Chambre de 1ère instance « juge l'acte d'accusation

[10] En principe, le manquement à un devoir d'agir comme fondement de la responsabilité pénale selon les articles 6 (1) et 7 (1) des deux Statuts s'exprime par une conduite précédente à la commission du crime et non pas par une conduite successive, telle que le manquement au devoir de punir. En effet, cette dernière infraction acquiert une considération autonome exclusivement dans le contexte de la responsabilité du supérieur selon les articles 6 (3) et 7 (3). Cela n'exclut toutefois pas la possibilité de considérer le manquement par un accusé au devoir de punir l'auteur d'un crime, selon les circonstances du cas, sous la responsabilité pour aide ou encouragement. Le manquement à ce devoir peut bien représenter un manquement au devoir d'empêcher des crimes ultérieurs et donc à en aider ou encourager la commission. C'est ce qu'aussi la Chambre 1ère instance dans l'Affaire Blaskic envisage, implicitement confirmée dans son opinion par la Chambre d'appel : « the failure to punish past crimes, which entails the commander's responsibility under Article 7 (3), may, pursuant to Article 7 (1) and subject to the fulfilment of the respective mens rea and actus reus requirements, also be the basis for his liability for either aiding and abetting or instigating the commission of future crimes" (Judgement TC, 29 July 2004, para. 337).

[11] Mpambara Judgment (TC) 12 septembre 2006, p 13, para. 35: "The Chamber will, however, consider the evidence of omissions adduced at trial to the extent that they may be probative of the accused's participation in a joint criminal enterprise or having aided and abetted another in the commission of a crime". Mais, on verra qu'on a fini par considérer aussi la charge contestée par la majorité de la Chambre.

[12] "There is no mention of any duty to prevent or punish crimes. It bears repeating that the prosecution is permitted to bring potentially incompatible charges against the Accused. The defect here is not the incompatibility, but the failure to distinctly explain that the omissions alleged against the Accused constituted a breach of his duty to prevent or punish the crimes of others" (Mpambara Judgement (TC), paragraph 34).

vicié parce qu'il est vague ou ambigu, elle doit rechercher si l'accusé a néanmoins bénéficié d'un procès équitable ou, en d'autres termes, si le vice constaté a porté préjudice à la défense »[13].

11. Une telle vérification doit donc se faire à la lumière des droits que la défense a concrètement exercé pendant le procès. Si, pour une raison ou une autre, ces droits ont été effectivement exercés malgré la faiblesse des informations fournies par le Procureur quant aux charges retenues contre l'accusé, il serait même contraire à l'intérêt de la justice que la Chambre décide de ne pas considérer ces charges. Ces charges doivent naturellement être considérées dans les limites de l'exercice concret des droits de la défense par rapport à chaque événement et à chaque fait matériel allégués dans l'Acte.

12. En l'espèce, à la lumière des preuves présentées par la Défense tout le long du procès (y compris le témoignage de l'accusé), je suis de l'avis qu'elle a effectivement exercé ses droits par rapport à toutes les omissions alléguées par le Procureur, y compris le « manquement de l'accusé au devoir tant d'empêcher que de punir » invoqué dans le cadre de la responsabilité pour participation à une ECC ou pour aide ou encouragement prévu à l'article 6 (1) du Statut[14].

13. D'ailleurs, dans le but de vérifier si l'accusé pouvait en être retenu responsable, la Chambre a pris soin de considérer toutes les omissions alléguées au cours du procès, y compris celle qui est contestée par la majorité de la Chambre pour manque d'information adéquate (failure of duty to prevent and punish).

14. La Chambre a donc conclu, pour chaque attaque et charge alléguées à l'encontre de l'accusé, que les omissions n'étaient pas prouvées au-delà de tout doute raisonnable, ou qu'elles ne démontraient ni la participation à une ECC ni une assistance ou un encouragement aux attaques, raison du fait que certains éléments de ces conduites n'avaient pas été prouvés au-delà de tout doute raisonnable. Et je partage entièrement ces conclusions.

[14] La Chambre a entendu les témoins de la défense évoquer les appels par l'accusé à la pacification et les assemblées convoquées dans ce but, les secours apportés par l'accusé avec le Père Santos aux réfugiés. Ils ont parlé aussi des enquêtes menées par l'accusé pour trouver les auteurs des crimes et du fait qu'il n'ait pas été à même de les porter à bien pour manque de moyens. Tous les témoins de la défense ont parlé de la continue et inutile demande d'aide par l'accusé auprès du sous-préfet et donc de l'indisponibilité de moyens suffisants pour pouvoir contraster les attaques et en punir les auteurs sur un territoire communal très étendu, dont la sécurité était assurée seulement par 6/7 policiers. L'accusé même a déclaré que si ces policiers avaient été utilisés pour arrêter les criminels et garder leur prison au lieu d'être affectés par lui à la sécurité des réfugiés, encore si faible, tous les réfugiés auraient été tués, tandis qu'il avait réussi à épargner beaucoup de vies. On lui a entendu dire qu'arrêter les attaquants aurait représenté un « suicide ». Ce sont là seulement certains des arguments portés par la défense pour contester les charges. Je renvoie à ce propos à ces témoignages ainsi que rapportés dans le Jugement.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA (the "Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber III, composed of Judge Andrésia Vaz, presiding, Judges Karin Hökborg and Gberdao Gustave Kam (the "Chamber");

BEING SEIZED of The Prosecutor's Oral Motion for Site Visits in Rwanda, moved at the hearing of 23 March 2006;

CONSIDERING the positive response from the Defence;

CONSIDERING the Oral Decision of 24 March 2006;

CONSIDERING the lists of sites to be visited in Rwanda submitted by the parties;

HEREBY DECIDES, pursuant to Rule 73 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules").

Introduction

1. The Accused, Athanase Seromba, is under trial for genocide, or alternatively for complicity in genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide and extermination as a crime against humanity, which crimes are stipulated in Articles 2 and 3 of the Statute of the Tribunal. These charges are in connection with events that occurred in Nyange parish, located in Kivumu commune, Kibuye préfecture.

2. In his oral address, the Prosecutor moved the Chamber for leave to visit a number of sites in Rwanda, arguing that it would contribute to a better understanding of the facts of the present case. In this regard, the Prosecutor submits a list of sites to be visited in Rwanda. The Defence does not challenge the Prosecutor's request and also submits its own list.

Deliberations

3. Rule 4 of the Rules provides that a Chamber or a Judge may exercise their functions away from the Seat of the Tribunal, if so authorized by the President, in the interests of justice.

4. The Tribunal's jurisprudence considers that the relevance of site visits must be tested against the particular circumstances of each case and their instrumentality in the discovery of the truth.[1] The number of sites to be visited as well as the related expenses to be borne by the Tribunal should be taken into account.

5. The Chamber finds that the sites to be visited, particularly those in Nyange, are relevant both to the charges against the Accused and to the witness statements. The Chamber is of the view that site visits will be instrumental in the discovery of the truth in the present case.

6. Furthermore, the Chamber notes that the visits, which have limited duration and cover a number of sites, will be carried out without excessive costs to the Tribunal. The Chamber therefore finds that the Prosecutor's request should be granted and that it is in the interests of justice.

FOR THESE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

- GRANTS the Prosecutor's Motion;

- ORDERS site visits in Rwanda;

- REQUESTS the President of the Tribunal to authorize the Chamber to exercise its functions away from the seat of the Tribunal from 8 to 11 April 2006;

- REQUESTS the Registrar to give effect to the President's authorization by facilitating implementation of the present decision.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber III (the "Chamber") composed of Judges Andrésia Vaz, presiding, Karin Hökborg and Gberdao Gustave Kam;

BEING SEIZED of the "Prosecutor's Motion for Disclosure of Signed Witness Statements", filed with the Registry on 10 March 2006;

NOTING the Defence response entitled « Mémoire en réponse à la requête du Procureur tendant à voir ordonner la communication des déclarations signées des témoins de la Défense », filed at the Registry on 15 March 2006;

HEREBY decides the Motion pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules").

Submissions of the Parties

1. The Prosecutor submits that the witness statements disclosed to him by the Defence do not constitute "written statements" as defined by Rule 73 ter (B) in that they do not bear the signatures of the witnesses. He alleges that the original statements are available and that, by failing to disclose them, the Defence is in breach of the Decision of 13 April 2005.[1]

[1] The Prosecutor v. Athanase Seromba, Case N°ICTR-2001-66-T, « Décision relative à la requête du Procureur aux fins de communication des déclarations des témoins de la Défense », 13 April 2005.

2. The Prosecutor further argues that in the absence of the originals, the Trial Chamber is not in a position to assess the authenticity of the statements. He also emphasizes that, for his part, he disclosed the signed statements of his witnesses to the Defence and that failure to disclose the signed statement of Defence witnesses is a breach of the principle of equality of arms. He therefore prays the Trial Chamber to order the Defence to disclose the signed witness statements.

3. The Defence argues that the Prosecutor's request is unfounded, pointing out inter alia that Rule 73 ter (B) of the Rules does not require statements disclosed to the Prosecutor to bear the witnesses' signatures. The Defence further states that in Nahimana, the Judge recalled the Defence's obligation of disclosure without specifying that the copies of statements disclosed to the Prosecutor, be signed by the Defence witnesses.[2] Consequently, the Defence prays the Chamber to dismiss the Prosecutor's motion.

Deliberations

4. Under Rule 73 ter in fine, The Trial Chamber may order the Defence to provide the Prosecutor with copies of the statements of each witness whom the Defence intends to call to testify.

5. The Chamber recalls its Decision of 13 April 2005 ordering the Defence to disclose unredacted Defence witness statements to the Prosecutor prior to the commencement of its case.[3]

6. The Trial Chamber notes that in Niyitegeka, the Appeals Chamber held that the most appropriate format of a witness statement is that which bears the signature of the witness. In the same ruling, the Appeals Chamber further asserted that the signature is the act whereby the witness acknowledges that the statements attributed to him are correct.[4]

7. The Trial Chamber finds that in the instant case the Defence has disclosed to the Prosecutor only unsigned witness statements. It notes also that the Defence does not deny the existence of written statements signed by its witnesses. Accordingly, it considers the disclosure by the Defence to the Prosecutor to be incomplete. The Chamber is therefore of the view that there is reason to declare the Prosecutor's Motion for disclosure of signed Defence witness statements well-founded. Consequently, it believes that it is for the Defence to cure that defect by disclosing the signed Defence witness statements to the Prosecutor.

FOR THESE REASONS, THE TRIAL CHAMBER

- GRANTS the Prosecutor's Motion:

- ORDERS the Defence to disclose the signed witness statements to the Prosecutor.

75. The Appeals Chamber of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States, between 1 January and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively) is seized of an interlocutory appeal filed by Athanase Seromba[1] against a decision of the Bureau of 25 April 2006, denying his request, Athanase Seromba, Case N°ICTR-01-66-AR, Requête d'appel de la Défense contre la décision du Bureau du Tribunal rendue le 25 avril 2006 relative à la récusation des Juges Vaz, Kam et Hökborg, filed 26 April 2006 ("Seromba Appeal"). The Prosecution responded in The Prosecutor v. Athanase Seromba, Case N°ICTR-01-66-AR, Prosecutor's Response to Seromba's Appeal of the Decision of 26 April 2006 of the ICTR Bureau, filed 27 April 2006 ("Prosecution Response"). Mr. Seromba filed his reply in The Prosecutor v. Athanase Seromba, Case N°ICTR-01-66-AR, Mémoire complémentaire de la Défense, contenant réplique à la reponse du Procureur sur l'appel interjeté contre la décision du bureau en date du 25 avril 2006, filed 2 May 2006 ("Seromba Reply") and Bordereau de pièces jointes au Mémoire complémentaire de la Défense du père Seromba, filed 8 May 2006. The Appeals Chamber has disregarded the Prosecution's additional filing of 3 May 2006, entitled Prosecution's Supplementary Response to Seromba's Appeal of the Decision of 26 April of the ICTR Bureau. There is no right of sur-reply, and the submission is unnecessary to the disposition of the appeal.

pursuant to Rule 15 of the Tribunal's Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules"), to disqualify the Trial Judges in his case for lack of impartiality.[2]

Background

76. On 24 April 2006, Mr. Seromba filed a request with the Tribunal's Bureau to disqualify the Trial Judges in his case.[3] He argued that the Judges had a "personal interest" in convicting him, as illustrated by several decisions rendered during the course of the trial which, in his view, were erroneous or resulted in an inequitable treatment between Prosecution and Defence witnesses.[4] The Bureau denied Mr. Seromba's request on 25 April 2006, after examining each instance allegedly reflecting a lack of impartiality.[5] On appeal, Mr. Seromba argues that the Bureau erred in law in according the Trial Judges a presumption of impartiality and points to the instances allegedly reflecting the Trial Chamber's bias.[6]

77. In its response, the Prosecution disputes the admissibility of this appeal, arguing that no right of appeal to the Appeals Chamber exists from a decision taken by the Bureau.[7] Mr. Seromba argues, however, that his appeal is admissible because the Bureau's decision has all the characteristics of a judicial decision.[8] He emphasizes the importance of the right of appeal, particularly in matters related to the impartiality of Judges.[9] He contends that Rule 15 does not expressly preclude appeal and, in any event, does not envision the Bureau's consideration to be both of first and last resort.[10] In Mr. Seromba's view, the Statute envisions the Appeals Chamber as the only body competent to consider an issue in the final instance.[11] He asks the Appeals Chamber to read Rule 15 broadly, as it has in construing the grounds of disqualification under the Rule, in order to admit his appeal.[12]

Discussion

78. The Statute and Rules of the Tribunal do not provide for an interlocutory appeal to the Appeals Chamber of a decision taken by the Bureau pursuant to Rule 15 (B).[13] Rather, the Appeals Chamber's consideration of whether a Trial Judge should have been disqualified is limited to an appeal against a conviction or where the issue properly arises in an interlocutory appeal certified by a Trial Chamber.[14]

79. Rule 15 (B) envisions a specific two-stage process of consideration for a request to disqualify a Judge. As the Rule clearly states, an application for disqualification is to be made to the Presiding Judge of the Chamber seized of the proceedings, which in this case is Judge Khan, the Presiding Judge of Trial Chamber III.[15] The Presiding Judge is then to confer with the Judge in question. If the party disputes the Presiding Judge's decision, the Bureau shall determine the matter in a de novo review.[16]

80. The Appeals Chamber observes that Mr. Seromba did not follow this procedure and filed his claim directly with the Bureau,[17] thereby depriving himself of the review procedure envisioned by the Rule. Although it would have been within the discretion of the Bureau to dismiss Mr. Seromba's request as improperly filed,[18] the Appeals Chamber cannot conclude that it erred in considering the matter in the first instance.

81. For the foregoing reasons, as there was no right of appeal in this instance, the Appeals Chamber DISMISSES this appeal.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA ("the Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber III (the "Chamber"), composed of Judges Andrésia Vaz, presiding, Karin Hökborg and Gberdao Gustave Kam;

SEIZED of the Defence Motion entitled "Defence Motion for Certification of Appeal Against the Oral Decisions Rendered by the Trial Chamber on 26 April 2006…", filed with the Registry of the Tribunal on 2 May 2006 (hereinafter the "first Motion");

Also SEIZED of the Defence Motion entitled "Defence Motion for Certification of Appeal Against the Order of 27 April 2006 Relating to the Filing of Closing Briefs and Closing Arguments of the Parties", filed with the Registry of the Tribunal on 2 May 2006 (hereinafter the "second Motion");

CONSIDERING the Prosecutor's Response, entitled "Prosecutor's Response to Seromba's Motions for Certification of Appeals", filed with the Registry on 3 May 2006 (hereinafter the "Response");

DECIDES as follows, on the basis of the Statute of the Tribunal (hereinafter the "Statute") and Rule 73 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (hereinafter the "Rules").

Introduction

1. The Accused Athanase Seromba is charged with genocide, or in the alternative, complicity in genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide and crimes against humanity for extermination.[1] His trial commenced on 20 September 2004.[2] The Prosecutor concluded the presentation of evidence on 25 January 2005.[3] The Defence, after numerous delays mainly due to its own action,[4] only commenced the presentation of its evidence on 31 October 2005.[5]

2. On 23 March 2006, the Chamber commenced a session on the presentation of evidence by the Defence with the last Defence witnesses. By an Oral Decision of 24 March 2006, the Chamber allowed the Defence to vary its list of witnesses, by adding notably Witness PS2.[6] On 20 April 2006, the Chamber ordered that the testimonies of Witness PS2 be presented via video-link, since the said witness was not in Arusha for administrative reasons.[7] During the hearing of 21 April 2006, the Chamber, in order to avoid an interruption in the hearings and in order to take account of the fact that the session was scheduled to end on 27 April 2006, decided to hear the testimony of the Accused before that of Witness PS2.[8] On 24 April 2006, the Defence filed a Motion for review of that Decision.[9] The Chamber, by an oral decision rendered that same day, denied this request.[10] Following this decision, the Defence seized the Bureau of the Tribunal of a motion for disqualification of the Judges.[11] The Chamber therefore adjourned the proceedings pending the decision of the Bureau.[12] By a Decision dated 25 April 2006, the Bureau dismissed the request for disqualification of the Judges.[13]

3. At the hearing of 26 April 2006, the Chamber decided to continue without the testimony of Witness PS2, considering that Defence Counsel's refusal to examine Witness PS2 was tantamount to waiving the right to hear the witness.[14]

4. Lastly, at its hearing of 27 April 2006, the Chamber noted the persistent refusa1 of the Accused to appear for trial for his testimony and interpreted this as waiver of his right to testify before the chamber.[15] The Chamber then noted that, since the Defence had no further witnesses to hear, the defence evidence was now closed, and ordered the parties to present their Closing Arguments on 27 June 2006.[16] It is in this context that the Defence filed the two Motions for Certification of Appeal referred to above.

Submissions of the Parties

The Defence

5. In its first Motion, the Defence argued that it had not renounced the testimony of Witness PS2. It contended in particular that waiver was a voluntary act, "necessarily taken on the initiative of its author, which cannot be attributed to the latter either by a third person, or by a court".[17] It maintains that the Decision of 26 April 2006 deprives it of its right to present its evidence, as provided for under Rule 85 (A) of the Rules, while also denying the Accused the right to a fair trial guaranteed by Article 19 of the Statute. It further argues that Article 20 of the Statute, which gives the accused "the right to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his or her behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him or her",[18] has been breached.

6. The Defence further submits that the Decision of 26 April 2006 has caused it "serious prejudice".[19] To support this allegation, it argues notably that the testimony of Witness PS2 was crucial, because it was intended to contradict the acts alleged in the Indictment, namely the Accused's direct involvement in the death of Anicet Gatare.[20]

7. From the foregoing, the Defence concludes that the Decision of 26 April 2006 involves an issue that may affect the fair conduct of the proceedings and the outcome of the trial and for which an immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber could materially advance the proceedings. Consequently, the Defence prays the Chamber to certify the appeal against this decision pursuant to Rule 73 (B) of the Rules.[21]

8. In its second Motion, the Defence argues that the Order of 27 April 2006 failed to take account of the pending appeal by the Accused against the decision of the Bureau.[22] The Defence submits that, even though this appeal has no formal suspensive effect, the Chamber should have conformed with the practice in "all modern judicial systems", by refraining from continuing the proceedings until the Appeals Chamber had rendered its decision on the appeal.[23] It adds further that the Chamber, by considering that the Accused had renounced his right to testify in his own defence, had deprived the latter of his right to a fair trial and therefore violated Articles 19 and 20 of the Statute. On that issue, it argues particularly that waiver is "a voluntary act which must necessarily and expressly be articulated by the person concerned".[24] It further submits that the Order represents a particularly serious breach of the equality principle, since it has denied the Accused the opportunity to conclude his evidence on the same terms as the Prosecution had been able to do.[25]

9. The Defence further contends that the Order of 27 April 2006 flouts the Decision rendered on 29 September 2004, whereby the Chamber decided to disregard the objections raised by the Defence while at the same time reserving to the latter the right to recall for further cross-examination the Prosecution witnesses designated by the pseudonyms YAU, YAT, CBI and CBS.[26] It argues that, by "prematurely" concluding the presentation of Defence evidence and ordering the Defence to file its Closing Brief by 16 June 2006, the Order caused prejudice to the Defence. It thus submits that the Closing Brief can be filed only after the Defence has gathered all the exculpatory evidence by "the mechanisms" of examination and cross-exanimation.[27] The Defence therefore considers that it was not afforded full exercise of its right to present its case. It argues that the Order of 27 April 2006 involves "an issue that may affect the fair conduct of the proceedings or the outcome of the trial, and for which an immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber will materially advance the proceedings".[28] Consequently, the Defence prays the Chamber to certify its appeal against the Order of 27 April 2006 pursuant to Rule 73 (B) of the Rules. Furthermore, it prays the Chamber to order that Prosecution Witnesses YAU, YAT, CBI and CBS should be recalled for further cross-examination at a date to be determined by the Chamber.[29]

The Prosecutor

10. The Prosecutor submits that the Defence voluntarily declined to examine Witness PS2.[30] He explains that Co-Counsel stated at the hearing of 26 April 2006 that he was not prepared to examine Witness PS2, despite the efforts and costs incurred by the Tribunal in organizing the hearing of the said witness. He considers that this attitude on the part of the Defence amounted to an implicit renunciation of Witness PS2's testimony, as part of the strategy adopted by the Defence despite the Chamber's ruling that no stay of proceedings was granted and of the fact that the wish of the Defence to see the Accused testify last had been satisfied.[31]

11. The Prosecutor submits, further, that the Defence should have examined Witness PS2 if the latter's testimony was as important as it claims. He also emphasizes that the importance of Witness PS2's testimony does not prove that the Defence failed to waive the examination of Witness PS2.[32]

12. The Prosecutor submits furthermore that the request for certification of appeal against the Order of 26 April 2006 fails to meet the requirements of Rule 73 (B) of the Rules for certification of appeal. In support of this contention, he submits that the issue of the waiver by the Defence of Witness PS2's testimony would not significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of the proceedings or the outcome of the trial and that its immediate resolution would not materially advance the proceedings.[33]

13. Regarding the request for certification of appeal against the Order of 27 April 2006, the Prosecutor submits that the Defence argument that the Chamber had deprived the Accused of his right to testify in person is mistaken. He contends that the Defence voluntary declined to call and examine the Accused in full knowledge of its waiver of his right to testify.[34] He argues, citing the transcripts of the hearing,[35] that the Chamber simply noted this waiver.[36]

14. The Prosecutor submits that the Defence alternative request to recall for cross-examination Prosecution Witnesses YAU, YAT, CBI and CBS is dilatory. He contends that this request was not only submitted after the close of evidence but also that it was submitted late, since it was filed 19 months after the Chamber's referenced oral ruling of 29 September 2004.[37]

15. For the foregoing reasons, the Prosecutor emphasizes that the request for certification of appeal against the Order of 27 April 2006 fails to meet the requirements of Rule 73 (B) of the Rules. To that end, he submits that the issue of the Defence's refusal to examine the Accused as well as the Defence request to recall some Prosecution witnesses would not significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of the proceedings or the outcome of the trial nor would its immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber materially advance the proceedings.

16. In conclusion, the Prosecutor asks the Trial Chamber to deny the two Defence motions, pointing out that dates have already been fixed for filing the parties Closing Briefs and Arguments.[38]

Deliberations

Findings of the Chamber on joinder of the proceedings

17. The Chamber notes that the two motions for certification of appeal filed by the Defence have a common objective, which is to challenge the final decision of the Chamber ruling the Defence evidence closed,[39] after having noted the failure of the Defence to examine Witness PS2 and the Accused. The Chamber is of the opinion that the two proceedings should be joined in the interests of the sound administration of justice.

The Trial Chamber's findings on the recall of Prosecution witnesses YAU, YAT, CBI and CBS for further cross-examination

18. The Chamber recalls that at its hearing of 29 September 2004 it decided to disregard the objection to disclosure raised by the Defence regarding the testimonies of certain Prosecution witnesses, while reserving the right for the Defence, if necessary, to seize the Chamber of a request to cross-examine the witnesses in question on the basis of the new documents disclosed by the Prosecutor.[40]

19. The Chamber further recalls that the case-law of the Tribunal only allows a witness to be recalled in the most compelling of circumstances[41] and on presentation of a good cause by the demanding party.[42] In the instant case, the Chamber notes that the Defence merely requested that Witnesses YAU, YAT, CBI and CBS should be recalled without giving any justification.

20. In light of the foregoing, the Chamber considers that it is necessary to rule that the Defence motion to recall the above-mentioned witnesses lacks merit.

The Chamber's findings on the requests for certification of appeal

21. The Chamber notes that pursuant to Rule 73 (B) of the Rules two requirements should be met for a certification of appeal to be granted: the applicant must demonstrate (i) that the impugned decision involves an issue that would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of the proceedings, and (ii) that its immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber may materially advance the proceedings.

22. The Chamber recalls that in the instant case the Defence was allowed considerable time to present its evidence. Also, contrary to the Defence claims, the Chamber is of the opinion that the Accused had had plenty of time to prepare its defence and present its evidence.[43] It notes further that Rule 85 (A) of the Rules empowers the Chamber to change the order of appearance of witnesses, even where the Accused decides to testify in his own defence, and that the Accused was in fact ultimately given the opportunity to testify last. The Chamber accordingly considers that the objections raised by the Defence in relation to the Oral Decision of 26 April 2006,[44] rendered by the Trial Chamber under its discretionary power, and to the Order of 7 April 2006[45] are merely dilatory. For that reason, the Chamber is of the opinion that the said objections would not affect the fair conduct of the proceedings or its outcome.

23. The Chamber also notes that Rule 90 (F) of the Rules gives broad powers to the Chamber, which exercises control over the mode and order of interrogating witnesses and presenting evidence as well as the order in which they shall intervene in order to avoid needless consumption of time, notably by using dilatory tactics. Thus, while al1 its witnesses had been called except for Witness PS2 and the Accused, the Defence, despite the efforts made by the Chamber, refused to conduct the examination-in-chief, leaving the Chamber with only one alternative, that of closing the Defence evidence.

24. Lastly, the Chamber recalls that the evidence closed on 27 April 2006, with the parties then being requested to present their Closing Briefs and Arguments at the hearing of 27 June 2006. The Chamber therefore cannot see how the immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber of the objections raised by the Defence could materially advance the proceedings.

25. In light of the foregoing, the Chamber is of the opinion that the requirements for the certification of appeal have not been met in the instant case. Consequently, it considers that it is necessary to find that the requests for certification of appeal filed by the Defence lack merit.

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, THE CHAMBER

Chapter I : Introduction

1. This Judgement is rendered by Trial Chamber III (the "Chamber") of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (the "Tribunal"), composed of Judge Andrésia Vaz, presiding, Judge Karin Hökborg and Judge Gberdao Gustave Kam, in the case of the Prosecutor v. Athanase Seromba.

2. The Tribunal is governed by its Statute (the "Statute")[1] annexed to Security Council Resolution 955, and by its Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules").[2]

[1] United Nations Document S/RES/955 (1994), 8 November 1994.
[2] The Rules were adopted on 5 July 1995 by the Judges of the Tribunal and amended most recently on 7 June 2005. The Statute and the Rules are available on the Tribunal site: www.ictr.org.

3. The Tribunal has jurisdiction to prosecute persons responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law committed in the territory of Rwanda and Rwandan citizens responsible for such violations committed in the territory of neighbouring States. Its jurisdiction is limited to acts of genocide, crimes against humanity and serious violations of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and Additional Protocol II,[3] committed between 1 January 1994 and 31 December 1994.[4]

4. The Chamber recalls that in the present case, it has already taken judicial notice of the fact that widespread killings occurred in Rwanda in 1994,[5] and that this fact is no longer subject to reasonable dispute. The Chamber further recalls that it has also taken judicial notice of the fact that during the events referred to in this Indictment, Tutsi, Hutu and Twa were identified as ethnic or racial groups.[6]

5. In addition, it notes that the Appeal Chamber recently stated in Karemera that the genocide perpetrated in Rwanda is a fact of common knowledge.[7] The Trial Chamber nevertheless emphasizes that taking judicial notice of facts of common knowledge does not relieve the Prosecution of its burden to prove that the Accused was criminally responsible for the specific events alleged in the Indictment.[8]

6. The Accused, Athanase Seromba, was born in 1963 in Rutziro commune, Kibuye préfecture, Rwanda. Trained at the Nyakibanda major seminary,[9] he was ordained a priest in July 1993.[10] In April 1994, he was a priest in Nyange parish, Kivumu commune.

7. In the Indictment dated 8 June 2001 (the "Indictment"), registered with the Tribunal Registry on 5 July 2001,[11] the Prosecutor preferred four charges against Athanase Seromba:

8. Count 1: Genocide:[12] The Prosecutor of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda charges Athanase Seromba with genocide, a crime stipulated in Article 2 (3) (a) of the Statute, in that on or between 6 April 1994 and 20 April 1994, in Kivumu commune, Kibuye préfecture, Rwanda, Seromba was responsible for killing or causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the Tutsi population, with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a racial or ethnic group; and pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute: by virtue of his affirmative acts, in planning, instigating, ordering, committing, or otherwise aiding and abetting the planning, preparation or execution of the crime charged.

9. Count 2: Complicity in genocide:[13] The Prosecutor of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda charges Athanase Seromba of complicity in genocide, a crime stipulated in Article 2 (3) (e) of the Statute, in that on or between the dates of 6 April 1994 and 20 April 1994, in Kivumu commune, Kibuye préfecture, Rwanda, Athanase Seromba was an accomplice to the killing or causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the Tutsi population, committed with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a racial or ethnic group; and pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute: by virtue of his affirmative acts, in planning, instigating, ordering, committing, or otherwise aiding and abetting the planning, preparation or execution of the crime charged.

10. Count 3: Conspiracy to commit genocide:[14] The Prosecutor of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda charges Athanase Seromba of conspiracy to commit genocide, a crime stipulated in Article 2 (3) (b) of the Statute, in that on or between 6 April 1994 and 20 April 1994, in Kivumu commune, Kibuye préfecture, Rwanda, Athanase Seromba, a priest responsible for Nyange Parish, did agree with Grégoire Ndahimana, bourgmestre of Kivumu commune, Fulgence Kayishema, a police inspector of Kivumu commune, Télesphore Ndungutse, Gaspard Kanyikuriga and other persons not known to the Prosecution, to kill or cause serious bodily or mental harm to members of the Tutsi population, with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a racial or ethnic group; and pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute: by virtue of his affirmative acts, in planning, instigating, ordering, committing, or otherwise aiding and abetting the planning, preparation or execution of the crime charged.

11. Count 4: Crimes against humanity (extermination):[15] The Prosecutor of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda charges Athanase Seromba with extermination as crime against humanity as stipulated in Article 3 (b) of the Statute, in that on or between 7 April 1994 and 20 April 1994, in Kibuye préfecture, Rwanda, Athanase Seromba was responsible for killing persons, or causing persons to be killed, during mass killing events as part of a widespread or systematic attack against a civilian population on political, ethnic or racial grounds; and pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute: by virtue of his affirmative acts, in planning, instigating, ordering, committing, or otherwise aiding and abetting the planning, preparation or execution of the crime charged.

12. The full text of the Indictment is attached to this Judgement.[16]

13. The Accused, Athanase Seromba, who went into exile in Florence, Italy, surrendered to the authorities of the Tribunal on 6 February 2002 without the warrant of arrest[17] issued by the Tribunal against him being executed by the Italian authorities who had received notification thereof on 10 July 2001.[18] The Accused made his initial appearance before Justice Navanethem Pillay on 8 February 2002 and entered a plea of not guilty.[19] His trial started on 20 September 2004 and was ended on 27 June 2006.[20]

Chapter II : Factual findings

1. Preliminary matters

1.1. Defects in the Indictment

1.1.1. The Law applicable to motions on defects in the form of the Indictment

14. The Chamber notes that under Article 72 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence, defects in the form of the Indictment must, in principle be raised during the pre-trial phase of the proceedings,[21] unless leave is granted by the Chamber to a party to do so at a later stage in the proceedings.

15. In the present case, the Chamber finds that the Defence failed to comply with the aforementioned procedural requirement by alleging defects in the Indictment in its final trial brief, i.e. after the close of hearing, rather than during the pre-trial phase. The Chamber further notes that until the close of hearing, the Defence neither sought nor obtained leave from the Trial Chamber to file an application alleging defects in the form of the Indictment.

16. The Chamber recalls that, as to whether a trial chamber may, after the close of hearing, rule that an indictment was defective, the Appeals Chamber stated in Ntagerura that it could not do so without first giving the parties the opportunity to be heard, which entails reopening the hearing.[22]

17. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber is of the opinion that an amendment of a defective indictment may be allowed even at the stage of deliberations of the Trial Chamber only if the Trial Chamber has first ordered a reopening of the hearing. Consequently, the Chamber considers that the issue here is to determine whether the Defence arguments submitted in support of its allegations of defects in the Indictment are such as would justify an amendment of the Indictment for the sake of fairness of the trial. In such a case, the Chamber would have to reopen the hearing.

18. In addressing this issue, the Chamber will examine in turn the arguments advanced by the Defence in its final trial brief,[23] even if that may appear redundant.

1.1.2. Examination of Defence arguments

The Defence allegations with respect to paragraph 5 of the Indictment

19. The Chamber notes the Defence submission that the Prosecutor merely states that Athanase Seromba, "a priest responsible for Nyange parish […] and others not unknown to the Prosecution", prepared and executed a plan of extermination of the Tutsi population, without specifying the nature of the said plan, the date and location of its conception, the persons who allegedly conceived it, the methods used to execute it, or the exact role allegedly played by the Accused in its conception, elaboration and execution.

20. The Chamber also notes the Defence allegation that, by merely stating that after the death of the Rwandan President on 6 April 1994 attacks were perpetrated against the Tutsi in Kivumu commune, causing the death of several of them, the Prosecutor does not provide sufficient information as to identify the perpetrators of the attacks, the planners of the attacks, the location where such attacks occurred, the manner in which they were executed or even as to whether Athanase Seromba participated in them.

21. The Chamber considers the aforementioned Defence allegations irrelevant, as the issues raised have been pleaded with sufficient particularity. The Court consequently finds that these allegations fail to prove the existence of defects in the Indictment.

The other Defence allegations

22. The Defence also alleged a lack of precision in paragraphs 7, 8, 11, 14, 15, 16 and 17 of the Indictment which alleged respectively that: the Accused drew up a list of refugees; several meetings were held, and the Accused attended them; the Accused expelled Tutsi employees from the parish; the doors of the church were closed; and a meeting was held on 14 April 1994. On these different points, the Chamber considers that the Defence allegations are unfounded, insofar as the material facts are set forth both in the Indictment and in the Prosecutor's pre-trial brief which was disclosed to the Defence in a timely manner, to enable the Defence to prepare for trial.

[22] Ntagerura, Appeal Judgement, 7 July 2006, para. 55: "In the present matter, the Appeals Chamber considers that, once the Trial Chamber decided to reconsider its pre-trial decisions relating to the specificity of the Indictments at the stage of deliberations, it should have interrupted the deliberation process and reopened the hearings. At such an advance stage of the proceedings, after all the evidence had been heard and the parties had made their final submissions, the Prosecution could not move to amend the Indictment. On the other hand, reopening the hearings would have allowed the Prosecution to try to convince the Trial Chamber of the correctness of its initial pre-trial decisions on the form of the Indictment, or to argue that any defects had since been remedied. The Appeals Chamber finds that the Trial Chamber erred in remaining silent on its decision to find the abovementionned parts of the Indictments defective until the rendering of the Trial Judgement."
[23] Defence Closing Argument, pp. 40-42.

1.1.3. Findings of the Chamber

23. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber considers that the arguments raised by the Defence do not permit the conclusion that the Indictment contains defects that might have warranted an amendment. The Chamber therefore dismisses the Defence allegations that the Indictment is defective and accordingly, finds that there are no grounds for reopening the hearing.

1.2. Evidence of the good character of the Accused

24. In its final trial brief, the Defence submitted that evidence of the good character of an accused may be relevant in determining whether the accused could have committed the crimes with which he is charged.[24] The Prosecution did not contest this point.

25. It is the Chamber's opinion that the evidence to be considered during deliberations, for determining probative value, is, in principle, the evidence which the parties presented at the hearing, in accordance with the provisions of Rules 89 to 98 bis.

26. The Chamber notes that evidence of the good character of the accused prior to the events for which he is indicted is, generally, of limited probative value in international criminal law.[25] Rather, evidence of prior good character is taken into consideration at the time of sentencing.[26] The Chamber, however, observes that such evidence may be relevant if it is shown to be particularly probative in relation to the charges against the accused.[27]

27. In the present case, the Chamber finds that the Defence only adduced evidence of the Accused's good character after the hearing had been declared closed, thus making of impossible for the Prosecution to present arguments on this point. Furthermore, the Chamber finds that by merely submitting that the Accused's conduct had "[…] had never been viewed with disfavour by the faithful of Nyange parish prior to the events of 6 April 1994 […]",[28] the Defence has failed to show that evidence of the Accused's good character is particularly probative to the charges against him.

28. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber will not accept evidence of the Accused's good character at this stage, but will possibly take it into consideration at the time of sentencing.

1.3. General allegations in the Indictment

29. The Chamber finds that judicial notice has already been taken of the facts alleged in paragraph 1 of the Indictment, namely, that the population of Rwanda was divided into three ethnic groups: Tutsi, Hutu and Twa.[29] The Chamber therefore, considers it to be a general allegation.

30. The Chamber finds that paragraph 24 of the Indictment only provides a general description of the attacks against refugees and the intentions of the attackers, without charging Accused Athanase Seromba with any specific act or event. Consequently, the Chamber considers this allegation to be general.

31. The Chamber finds that the arrival of a bus, alleged in paragraph 18 of the Indictment, is of no relevance to the crimes charged against Accused Athanase Seromba. Consequently, the Chamber considers it to be a general allegation.

32. The Chamber finds that the allegations made in paragraphs 5, 33, 34, 35 and 45 of the Indictment allude to a plan of extermination involving the Accused, even though he is not charged with any specific act. Consequently, the Chamber considers them as general allegations.

33. The Chamber finds that the allegation in paragraph 32 of the Indictment that the Accused embezzled all the assets of the parish is not supported by evidence. Consequently, the Chamber considers it to be a general allegation.

34. The Chamber finds that the allegation contained in paragraph 50 of the Indictment falls within the general context of the events which occurred in Nyange in April 1994. Consequently, the Chamber considers it to be a general allegation.

35. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber does not deem it necessary to consider such allegations in its factual findings.

2. Kivumu commune, Nyange parish and the duties exercised by the accused

36. Kivumu commune is located in Kibuye préfecture, Republic of Rwanda.[30] In 1994, this commune had a population of about 53,000 inhabitants, including approximately 6,000 Tutsi.[31]

37. Nyange parish is located in Nyange secteur, Kivumu commune. The Nyange church measured 55 metres x 19 metres (55m x 19m).[32] The church had a seating capacity of at least 1,500.[33]

38. The Chamber notes that at the time of events referred to in the Indictment, Athanase Seromba was a priest in Nyange parish, where he had been assigned as a vicar.[34] Several witnesses testified that the parish priest of Nyange, Father Straton, had already left this parish at the time of the events which occurred during April 1994.[35] These same witnesses also testified that Seromba had assumed the daily management of the parish, while waiting to take up his duties in the parish of Crête Zaïre Nil, where he had been posted since 17 March 1994.[36] The Chamber further notes, in light of those testimonies and the factual findings made above, that Seromba acted in a number of ways which show that he was responsible for the daily management of Nyange parish during the April 1994 events.[37] Accordingly, the Chamber is of the view that Accused Seromba was acting as Nyange parish priest during the April 1994 events.

3. Events from 6 to 10 April 1994 in Kivumu commune

3.1. The Indictment

39. The Indictment alleges as follows:

> "6. After the death of the Rwandan President, on 6 April 1994, attacks against the Tutsi began at Kivumu commune, causing the deaths of some Tutsi civilians, including Grégoire Ndakubana, Martin Karakezi and Thomas Mwendezi.
> 7. To escape the attacks directed against them, Tutsis from the different sectors of Kivumu commune fled their homes to seek refuge in public buildings and churches, including the Nyange church. The Bourgmestre and communal police gathered and transported the refugees from the different sectors of Kivumu commune to Nyange parish.
> 8. Athanase Seromba questioned the refugees transferred to the Parish about those not yet present, then noted the names of the remaining refugees on a list he gave to the Bourgmestre Grégoire Ndahimana for the purpose of looking for and bringing them to the Parish.
> 9. A Tutsi named Alexis Karake, his wife and his children (more than six) were brought from Gakoma cellule to Nyange church through that list.
> 39. On or about 12 April 1994, the Bourgmestre Grégoire Ndahimana ordered members of the communal police to search for Tutsi civilians from the list prepared by Athanase Seromba, as described above, and bring them to the church."

3.2. The allegation that attacks were perpetrated against the Tutsi in Kivumu commune, resulting in the death of certain Tutsi civilians, including Grégoire Ndakubana, Martin Karekezi and Thomas Mwendezi

3.2.1. The evidence

Prosecution witnesses

40. Witness CDL, a Hutu,[38] testified that in the night of 7 to 8 April 1994, an attack led by Ndungutse was launched against the Ndakubana Tutsi family.[39] CDL further testified that in the night of 9 to 10 April 1994 at Nyange centre, a trader and an agricultural monitor named Martin were killed.[40] Lastly the witness testified that communal authorities, namely the Bourgmestre, the IPJ (judicial police inspector) and other communal officials violated the very law that they were supposed to enforce.[41]

41. Witness CBJ, a Tutsi,[42] stated that the massacres which occurred in Murambi cellule where he resided, commenced on 7 April 1994. He also explained that in the night of 7 April 1994, members of the Rudakubana family were killed by a teacher named Télesphore Ndungutse. He further testified that between 7 and 9 April 1994, Martin, a Tutsi who hailed from Ngobagoba secteur, Gasake commune was killed during an attack launched by a businessman, Gaspard Kanyarukiga.[43]

42. Witness CBN, a Tutsi,[44] testified that a certain Thomas was killed during the attacks against the Tutsi shortly after the death of the President.[45]

Defence witnesses

43. Witnesses FE31, FE13, FE56 and CF14 testified that Hutu assailants attacked the Ndakubana Tutsi family.[46] FE13 and CF14 stated inter alia that following this incident, insecurity increased throughout the commune in the night of 7 to 8 April 1994.[47] They further explained that during the same night, family members of Thomas Mwendezi, a Tutsi, were killed during an attack in Kigali secteur.[48]

3.2.2. Findings of the Chamber

44. The Chamber finds the testimonies of Witnesses CDL, CBJ and CBN to be credible with regard to the murder of Ndakubana. Not only are they consistent, they are also corroborated by the evidence of Defence witnesses. Consequently, the Chamber finds that it has been proven beyond a reasonable doubt that attacks were perpetrated against the Tutsi in Kivumu commune, resulting in the death of some of them, including Grégoire Ndakubana, Martin Karakezi and Thomas Mwendezi.

3.3. The allegation that Tutsi sought refuge in public buildings and churches, including the Nyange church.

3.3.1. The evidence

Prosecution witnesses

45. Witnesses YAU, a Tutsi woman,[49] and CBS, a Tutsi man,[50] testified that upon arriving at the church on 12 April 1994, they found other refugees there, the majority of whom were Tutsi.[51]

46. Witness CBI, a Tutsi,[52] testified that several persons arrived at the parish on board vehicles, including a white Toyota driven by a certain Yohana or Jean, also called Jigoma.[53] The witness also testified that some officials were involved in transporting refugees to the parish. Some of the officials he cited were Grégoire Ndahimana, Clément Kayishema, Gaspard Kanyarukiga and Télesphore Ndungutse.[54]

47. Witness CBN, a Tutsi,[55] stated that he sought refuge in Nyange church as from 12 April 1994.[56] He added that several persons arrived at the parish on board a vehicle belonging to a certain Rwamasirabo.[57]

48. Witness CBJ[58] testified that he found Tutsi refugees at Nyange parish upon his arrival there on 10 April 1994. He further testified that in the evening of 10 April 1994, Athanase Seromba asked a night watchman named Canisius Habiyambere and the major seminarian, Apollinaire Hakizimana, to count the refugees who were going to spend the night there. Lastly, Witness CBJ testified that these were 48 of them.[59]

49. Witness CBK, a Hutu,[60] explained that Tutsi who were attacked by the Hutu sought refuge in Nyange parish, which they considered to be a "safe haven". He further stated that the first refugees arrived in the parish on or about 8 April 1994.[61]

50. Witness CDL, a Hutu,[62] testified that the Tutsi willingly sought refuge at the Nyange parish or at the communal office.[63]

Defence witnesses

51. Witness BZ3, a Hutu,[64] testified that he met refugees in Nyange church when she attended the morning mass on 11 April 1994.[65] The witness also stated that the refugees also attended the mass,[66] adding that they were not many.[67] According to the witness, the Tutsi sought refuge in the church because the Hutu were burning down their houses.[68] Witness BZ3 also testified that she saw refugees heading towards the communal office while returning home after mass.[69] She added that when they arrived there, they were directed towards the church.[70] Lastly the witness testified that she saw several persons being led to the communal office on board a vehicle belonging to Aloys Rwamasirabo and driven by Jigoma.[71]

52. Witness CF14, a Hutu,[72] testified that he saw no refugees at the communal office on 12 April 1994, but however did learn that the bourgmestre had "transported" other persons very early that morning to the parish. believed that this location could secure them protection against attacks as in the past. Lastly, the witness testified that the Tutsi went to the church on their own volition.[76]

3.3.2. Findings of the Chamber

54. The Chamber finds that all the statements of both Prosecution and Defence witnesses are consistent with respect to the fact that Tutsi who lived in Kivumu commune voluntarily sought refuge in public buildings, such as the communal office, or in churches, including the Nyange parish church. The Chamber therefore considers that this fact has been established beyond all reasonable doubt.

3.4. The allegation that Athanase Seromba provided the Bourgmestre of the commune with a list of Tutsi for the purpose of looking for and bringing them to Nyange church

3.4.1. The evidence

Prosecution witness

55. Witness CBI[77] stated that he gave to Athanase Seromba, at his request, the names of several persons of the Tutsi ethnic group who lived in Nyange and who were not present at the parish. He also testified that the Accused prepared a list which he subsequently handed to Grégoire Ndahimana, the bourgmestre of the commune.[78] Some of the names Witness CBI testified to having disclosed to Seromba are Antoine Karake, Aloys Rwemera and those of his family members: Épimaque Ruratsire and Vénust Ryanyundo.[79] The witness further testified that on 13 April 1994, Antoine Karake arrived at Nyange church on board a vehicle that had been confiscated.[80]

56. During cross-examination, Witness CBI testified that he arrived at Nyange church on Tuesday, 12 April 1994 in the evening,[81] adding that he found approximately 1,000 persons there who had come to seek refuge. He also stated that he met Athanase Seromba the day following his arrival and that Athanase Seromba asked him if there were still persons remaining in certain secteurs of the commune. The witness stated that he answered in the affirmative, disclosing the names of certain persons.[82] Asked by Defence Counsel how the witness have determined that these persons were not in a crowd that he had himself estimated at around 1,000 persons, the witness responded that there was a difference between "counting people and recognising them", adding subsequently that he had noticed that these persons were absent simply because he knew them.[83]

57. Witness PA1, a Hutu,[84] testified that he arrived in Nyange parish on Sunday, 10 April 1994.[85] He stated that he had never heard about a list of persons of Tutsi origin.[86]

58. Witness FE32 is a Hutu who testified openly as Anastase Nkinamubanzi. He stated that during the events of April 1994, he was working for the Astaldi company, which was responsible for the construction of the Rubengera-Gisenyi road.[87] He also stated that the driver of the bulldozer which demolished Nyange church.[88] He testified that he was a Rwandan court sentenced him to life imprisonment for this act.[89] Finally, the witness testified that a Tutsi list never existed.[90]

59. Witness FE27, a Hutu,[91] testified that he was not aware of the existence of any list of persons prepared by Athanase Seromba, adding that if such a list existed he would have been informed of it.[92]

3.4.2. Findings of the Chamber

60. The Chamber notes that Witness CBI is the only Prosecution witness who testified that Athanase Seromba prepared a list of Tutsi which he allegedly handed to the bourgmestre, so that the Tutsi could be sought out and brought to Nyange parish. The Chamber finds implausible Witness CBI's testimony that upon arrival in Nyange parish on 12 April 1994, he could immediately determine the absence of 10 people from a crowd of 1,000 persons. In fact, the witness merely stated that he noticed the absence of these persons simply because he knew them, even however specifying the observations or reasons that must have led him to such a conclusion. The Chamber therefore finds that Witness CBI is not credible. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not established beyond a reasonable doubt that Athanase Seromba prepared a list which he handed to the bourgmestre in order to seek out the persons on the list and bring them to Nyange parish.

62. Witness YAT, a Tutsi,[93] testified that a parish council meeting was held at the presbytery on or about 10 April 1994,[94] which was attended by Athanase Seromba, Kabwana, Bourgmestre Ndahimana, Criminal Investigation Police Inspector, Fulgence Kayishema, Inspector Aloys Uwoyiremye and other members of the parish council.[95] He explained that it was an extraordinary meeting held to address the state of insecurity that prevailed in the commune following the death of President Habyarimana and the attacks being perpetrated against the Tutsi.[96] Witness YAT also testified that during the meeting Seromba stated his opinion that President Habyarimana had been killed by the Inkotanyi and that the issue of persons killed was a political problem which did not fall within the jurisdiction of the parish council as such.[97] The witness also stated that that parish council meeting was the last he attended.[98]

63. Witness YAT further stated that Fulgence Kayishema informed him on 11 April 1994 that a meeting was held on 10 April 1994 in Nyange parish during which the decision to kill Tutsi was taken. He added that Kanyarukiga, Athanase Seromba, Bourgmestre Ndahimana and Kayishema were present at the meeting.[99]

Defence witness

64. Witness FE27 testified that during the meeting of 11 April 1994, Bourgmestre Grégoire Ndahimana stated that he met with Athanase Seromba the day before this meeting and that Seromba had spoken to him of Tutsi who had sought refuge in Nyange church.http://www.ictr.org/ENGLISH/cases/Seromba/judgement/061213-judgement.htm_ftn100#_ftn100[100]

4.2.2. Findings of the Chamber

65. The Chamber notes that the Defence has not adduced any evidence to contradict Witness YAT's testimony that a parish council meeting was held in Nyange church on 10 April 1994. In fact, Defence Witness FE27 in no way contradicted Witness YAT when he testified to having heard the bourgmestre inform participants in the 11 April 1994 meeting that he had met with Athanase Seromba the previous day, i.e. 10 April 1994. The Chamber is of the view that such a meeting could been part of the 10 April 1994 parish council meeting referred to by Witness YAT, who testified that he was a member of the council, a point which was not challenged by the Defence. The Chamber also finds that details provided by Witness YAT about the meeting are consistent. The Chamber therefore considers his testimony that a parish council meeting was held on 10 April 1994 to be credible. However, Witness YAT's testimony that a second meeting was held on 10 April 1994 in Nyange parish cannot be deemed credible, as the information which was disclosed to him is not supported by any other evidence. Finally, as regards Witness FE27, who did not testify specifically about the parish council meeting of 10 April 1994, the Chamber nevertheless finds his testimony that a meeting was held at the parish on 10 April 1994 to be credible, as it is corroborated by that of Witness YAT.

66. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber finds that the Prosecution has established beyond a reasonable doubt that a parish council meeting was held on 10 April 1994 in Nyange parish in which Witness YAT, Athanase Seromba and other persons participated.

4.3. The 11 April 1994 Meeting at the Communal Office

4.3.1. The evidence

Prosecution witnesses

67. Witness CNJ, a Hutu,[101] testified that his uncle informed him that a meeting was held at the communal office on 11 April 1994, during which decisions were taken, including the decision to assemble the Tutsi at the Nyange church.[102] He also testified that since he did not attend the meetings, he was not in a position to state precisely when the decision to destroy the church had been taken.[103]

68. Witness CDL, a Hutu,[104] explained that security committee meetings were held in the communal office or at the parish, adding that the meetings were held regularly at the instance of the bourgmestre.[105] He also stated that department heads and religious authorities were invited to participate in the meetings.[106] The witness finally stated that Athanase Seromba participated in the 11 April 1994 meeting of the security committee.[107]

69. Witness FE13 stated that the 11 April 1994 meeting was chaired by Bourgmestre Grégoire Ndahimana,[108] who informed those in attendance that the meeting would be dealing with security issues and the fate of Tutsi refugees.[109] He added that only an exceptional situation could justify the holding of any such meeting.[110] The witness further explained that, in general, meetings dealing with security issues were also attended by conseillers de secteur, who were to convey recommendations to the authorities,[111] the IPJ (Criminal Investigations Officer) in charge of security in the commune and the president of the canton tribunal.[112] He also mentioned that many Tutsi, including Charles Mugenzi, head of the Nyange health centre, Boniface Gatare, a youth counsellor in the commune and Lambert Gatare, a political party official, also attended the meeting.[113] Finally, Witness FE13 stated that decisions taken at the meeting include the decision to assemble Tutsi refugees at Nyange parish[114] and to make a request for military reinforcements from Kibuye préfecture.[115]

70. Witness FE27, a Hutu,[116] testified that he attended the meeting of 11 April 1994, held in the communal office. He indicated that this meeting, which usually dealt with problems related to the economic development of the commune, was transformed into a security committee meeting on the initiative of the bourgmestre.[117] The witness added that Athanase Seromba did not participate in this meeting.[118] He further stated that during the meeting Bourgmestre Ndahimana read out a letter sent to him by Seromba, in which the latter informed him that he would not attend, but would adhere to the decisions the meeting would take.

71. Witness CF23, a Hutu,[119] testified that the 11 April 1994 meeting was convened by the bourgmestre of the commune, Ndahimana. He added that the purpose of this meeting was to review the situation, to take all the necessary measures to stop the killings and lastly to discuss the organisation of receiving refugees into Nyange parish.[120] He indicated that Tutsi, including Charles Mugenzi and Boniface Gatare, actively participated in this meeting.[121] The witness emphasised that participants in this meeting were opposed to the killings. He also stated that Athanase Seromba did not attend the meeting, but had written a letter to the bourgmestre which was read out at the meeting.[122] In that letter, the witness continued, Seromba asked the commune authorities to ensure the protection of refugees, as well as their food supply, suggesting to the authorities that they solicit the assistance of the Caritas. Finally, Witness CF23 explained that at the end of the meeting, the bourgmestre requested gendarme reinforcement from Kibuye préfecture as had been recommended to him by those in attendance.[123]

4.3.2. Findings of the Chamber

72. The Chamber finds that the testimonies of CNJ and CDL are not reliable. It notes that CNJ's testimony is hearsay. As to CDL, the Chamber observes that nothing in his testimony shows that he personally attended the meeting of 11 April 1994. In fact, when Counsel for the Defence put a question to him with respect to the 13 April 1994 meeting, the witness stated as follows: "I think that I have already said in my testimony there are certain events which I heard and saw myself, [...] and other events that were reported to me; in particular, this meeting".[124] Furthermore, the witness was unable to state convincingly why he failed to mention the presence of the clergy in his prior statements, whereas he does so in his testimony before the Chamber. In fact, when asked by Counsel for the Defence why he did not mention, before the Rwandan courts, the names of the clergy when he was giving the names of participants in security meetings, the witness stated that when he began to testify in 1999, he was unable to "say everything in one go because at the time it was not easy to understand the reasons and to say the whole truth".[125]

73. Witnesses FE27 and CF23 cannot be considered credible on this point, as their testimonies are inconsistent with their prior statements. With respect to FE27, the Chamber notes that in his 25 January 2002 statement, he stated: "Father Seromba also attended the meeting for the issue of gathering of the refugees at the church to ensure their security was considered".[126] The witness confirmed that he signed the prior statement and made the statements therein.[127] On the other hand, he admitted that he lied to members of the "truth" committee "because they were telling me that if I were to say that Father Seromba was at the meeting I was going to be released".[128] As for CF23, the Chamber notes that in his 14 August 2002 pre-trial statement, this witness stated as follows: "[...] several persons attended that meeting, I remember recognising [...] Reverend Father Seromba [...]".[129] The witness testified that he had only signed the last page of his 14 August 2002 statement, even though his signature appears on each of the pages of the statement.[130] The witness also challenged the validity of the statement, pointing out that the excerpts which were read out to him did not reflect what he had said and that he gave credence only to the documents he wrote himself, such as his confessional statements.[131] Finally, the witness stated at trial that he had referred to Seromba's letter in his statement to the investigators of the Tribunal. The Chamber notes, however, that such reference is not contained in the statements.[132]

74. The Chamber finds Witness FE13 credible because of the duties he performed at the commune,[133] his presence at the meeting and the account he gave of the meeting. Moreover, FE13's testimony concerning the reading of the letter from Athanase Seromba during the meeting has been corroborated by the testimonies of Witnesses FE27 and CF23.

75. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber finds that it has been proven beyond a reasonable doubt that a meeting known as "security meeting", was held in the communal office on 11 April 1994. It finds, however that it has not been established beyond a reasonable doubt that Athanase Seromba attended this meeting.

4.4. Arrival at Nyange church of gendarmes coming from Kibuye préfecture

4.4.1. The evidence

Prosecution witness

76. Witness CDL, a Hutu,[134] testified that he saw gendarmes on 10 or 11 April 1994. He stated that he was unaware of the circumstances surrounding the arrival of the gendarmes, who according to him, came together with the bourgmestre. The witness also testified that he did not know whether the gendarmes had come at the request of Athanase Seromba. He did, however, remark that a gendarme was constantly at Seromba's side during the April 1994 events.[135]

Defence witnesses

77. Witness FE55, a Hutu,[136] testified that during the 11 April 1994 meeting, the decision was taken to seek gendarme reinforcements from Kibuye préfecture to ensure the security of refugees in Nyange parish.[137]

78. Witness BZ1, a Hutu,[138] testified that there were about four armed gendarmes stationed at the parish. He further testified that the gendarmes arrived there on or about 13 April 1994, shortly before the situation worsened.[139]

79. Witness PA1[140] testified that four gendarmes arrived in Nyange parish on Tuesday, 12 April 1994.[141]

4.4.2. Findings of the Chamber

80. The Chamber notes that the statements of Prosecution Witness CDL and Defence Witnesses FE55, BZ1 and PA1 are consistent with respect to the presence of gendarmes in Nyange parish at the time of the April 1994 events, although they differ slightly as to the date of arrival on the location. The Chamber further notes that Witness FE55 also stated that the arrival of the gendarmes was the result of a decision taken at the 11 April 1994 meeting, referred to as a "security meeting". This contention is corroborated by Witness FE13 and CF23 in their respective testimonies.[142]

81. In view of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that CDL, FE55 and BZ1 are credible witnesses. Consequently, the Chamber considers that it has been established beyond a reasonable doubt that on 11 April 1994 gendarmes from Kibuye préfecture arrived at Nyange church.

5. Events of 12 to 14 April 1994 at Nyange Parish

5.1. The Indictment

82. The Indictment alleges as follows:

> "12. From about 12 April 1994, refugees were confined by the gendarmes and surrounded by the militiamen and Interahamwe armed with traditional and conventional weapons. Father Athanase Seromba did prevent the refugees from taking food and instructed the gendarmes to shoot any "Inyenzi" (reference to Tutsi) who tried to take some food from the Presbytere or the parish banana groves. He refused to celebrate mass for them and stressed that he didn't want to do that for the Inyenzi.
> 13. On or about 12 April 1994, Father Athanase Seromba expelled from the Parish four Tutsi employees (Alex, Félécien, Gasore and Patrice). He forced them to leave the parish, while Interahamwe and militiamen were beginning the attacks against refugees of the parish.
> 14. Father Athanase Seromba knew that removing the employees would cause their death. In fact, only one of them (Patrice) was able to return to the parish, seriously wounded, which did not prevent Athanase Seromba from preventing his access to the church. He was killed by the Interahamwe and the militiamen
> 38. On or about 12 April 1994, Father Seromba chaired a meeting in his parish office, with, among others, Grégoire Ndahimana and Fulgence Kayishema. Immediately after this meeting, Fulgence Kayishema said that Kayiranga (a prosperous Tutsi businessman) must be found and brought to the church.
> 40. The second step of the plan consisted of keeping the refugees inside the church, surrounding the Church with Interahamwe and militiamen and inflicting on the refugees conditions of life calculated to weaken them physically. The plan also included regular attacks by Interahamwe and militiamen of the refugees to defeat their endurance.
> 41. To this end, from about 12 April 1994, gendarmes confined the refugees at the Nyange church, which was surrounded by Interahamwe and the militiamen.
> 42. Athanase Seromba prevented the refugees from having access to sanitary places in the parish or from taking food, ordering gendarmes to shoot any Inyenzi who tried to take food from the Presbytere or the banana groves of the parish.

[141] Transcript, 20 April 2006, p. 16 (closed session).
[142] See Section 4.3.1.

43. On or about 12 April 1994, in the afternoon, Father Athanase Seromba chaired a meeting with Grégoire Ndahimana and Fulgence Kayishema. Soon after, the bourgmestre Ndahimana declared, "We choose the richest to be killed, the others can go back to their houses".

5.2. Encirclement of refugees by militia and Interahamwe armed with traditional and conventional weapons

5.2.1. The evidence

Prosecution witnesses

83. Witness CBS[143] testified that the church was surrounded by gendarmes.[144] Witness CBK[145] testified that the church was encircled by attackers.[146]

Defence witnesses

84. Witness PA1[147] testified that the evening of 11 April 1994, "a lot of people" surrounded the church where the refugees were.[148] Witness FE56, a Hutu,[149] testified that Kayishema had Nyange church surrounded by "people".[150] He further testified added that soldiers were positioned near the doors of the presbytery, in order to block the entrance.[151]

5.2.2. Findings of the Chamber

85. The Trial Chamber notes that, with the exception of Witness CBS who testified that only gendarmes surrounded the church, the fact that from 12 April 1994, militiamen and other Interahamwe surrounded Nyange church where the refugees were confined is corroborated both by Prosecution Witness CKB and Defence Witnesses PA1 and FE56. Consequently, the Chamber considers this fact established beyond a reasonable doubt.

5.3. Athanase Seromba's order prohibiting the refugees from seeking food in the banana plantation of the parish and his alleged order to gendarmes to shoot any "Inyenzi" who attempted to pick any bananas

5.3.1. The evidence

Prosecution witnesses

86. Witness CBS[152] stated on three occasions that Athanase Seromba prevented the refugees from getting food from the parish banana plantation.[153] He explained, inter alia, that on Wednesday, 13

April 1994, some teachers, who were among the Tutsi refugees, asked for food from Seromba, but Seromba refused to give it to them. Following this refusal, certain refugees went on their own initiative into the banana plantation of the parish to harvest bananas, which they roasted in the parish courtyard.[154] The witness further explained that upon seeing the refugees, Seromba prohibited them from returning to the banana plantation and also gave orders to the gendarmes to shoot at any refugee who ventured there, treating the refugees as "Inyenzi". Finally the witness stated that he was near Seromba when the latter made these remarks.[155]

87. Witness CBJ[156] also testified that the refugees had asked Athanase Seromba for food and that Seromba refused to give it to them. He also explained that he, together with other refugees, went to harvest bananas in the parish banana plantation. When Seromba saw the bananas, he became angry and scolded them for not showing him respect by going into the banana plantation. Seromba then addressed the gendarmes in these terms: "Whoever goes back to the banana plantation to cut the bananas, you should shoot at the persons."[157]

88. Witness CBN, a Tutsi,[158] stated on two occasions that Athanase Seromba prohibited refugees from getting food from the banana plantation on 14 April 1994, adding that Seromba ordered the gendarmes to shoot at any refugee who returned there.[159]

Defence witness

89. Witness CF23[160] stated twice during his testimony that Athanase Seromba never prohibited refugees from entering the banana plantation and that he saw refugees in the banana plantation when he personally went there on 13 April 1994.[161] He also testified that, on the same date, he spotted refugees moving about freely in the churchyard and even going to cut bananas.[162] The witness finally stated that he was not present on the location on 14 April 1994.[163]

5.3.2. Findings of the Trial Chamber

90. The Trial Chamber considers Witness CBS' description of the location and the banana plantations to be reliable.[164] Furthermore, his testimony at cross-examination is consistent with his testimony-in-chief. Moreover, there are not any major inconsistencies between his prior statements and his testimony before the Trial Chamber.[165] In this regard, the Trial Chamber considers that the failure to mention the events in issue in his 14 February 1999 statement[166] cannot be perceived as an inconsistency, insofar as no question on the said events was put to him at the time he made the statement. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber notes that the witness was at the location at the time the [165] There is a minor inconsistency between the witness's testimony and his 17 August 2000 statement (Statement of witness CBS to Tribunal investigators on 17 August 2000 (Statement not tendered as Prosecution exhibit)), p. 3; read out to the witness: Transcript, 6 October 2004 p. 28 (open session). In his statement, the witness states that refugees had delegated a group of teachers to go and ask for food from Athanase Seromba, whereas in his testimony, the witness testified that it was the teachers who took the initiative to meet Seromba. During cross-examination, Counsel for the Defence asked the witness to explain this inconsistency, referring erroneously to the statement of 15 November 1995. The witness then explained that there was a transcription error, adding that the refugees had never sent a delegation and that the teachers themselves took the initiative to meet the priest (Transcript, 6 October 2004, pp. 27-29 (open session)).

[166] Statement of Witness CBS to the Rwandan judicial authorities on 14 October 1999 (D-19).

events occurred. From the foregoing, the Chamber finds Witness CBS reliable both with respect to the prohibition and the order that Seromba allegedly gave to the gendarmes.

91. The Chamber finds that Witness CBJ is also reliable on these two points. In fact, it finds no contradiction between the prior statements of the witness and his testimony before the Chamber. In this regard, that the events in issue are not mentioned in the statements the witness made on 23 March 1997[167] and 24 June 1997[168] can be explained by the fact that no question in relation thereto was put to him at the time he made the statements. The Chamber observes that only minor inconsistencies relating to the number of Hutu attackers,[169] the number of Tutsi refugees in the church[170] and the number of Tutsi in Kivumu commune[171] were noted, and are not such as would impugn the credibility of witness CBJ.

92. The Trial Chamber also considers that the contradictory testimony given by Witness FE36[172] does not impugn the credibility of Witness CBJ. No question was put to Witness CBJ on FE36's account of the events. The Chamber also notes that Witness FE36 is not credible, as he admits having lied before the Chamber.[173] In this connection, the Chamber notes, in particular, that Witness FE36 testified that CBJ stated that his entire family had been killed, whereas CBJ had, in fact, only stated that certain members of his family were dead.[174]

93. The Trial Chamber considers that the testimony of CBN is not reliable on this point. What the witness said during his examination contradicts a statement made on 17 August 2000.[175] In the statement, the witness on the contrary claimed that the prohibition against entering the banana plantation was made by a gendarme in the presence of Athanase Seromba. Furthermore, the discussion between Seromba and the gendarmes allegedly did not take place in front of the church but in the banana plantation. The witness testified that the true account was that given before the Trial Chamber, and that the earlier account is the result of a misunderstanding, as it was Seromba who gave the order not to go into the banana plantation, which order was subsequently repeated by the gendarme.[176]

94. With respect to Defence Witness CF23, the Chamber notes that he acknowledged not having been present at the location on 14 April 1994. Moreover, the Chamber finds the witness's testimony that the refugees could move freely between the churchyard and the banana plantation to be hardly consistent with reality, especially as on 13 April 1994, the day he alleges to have witnessed this event, the church was already surrounded by numerous militiamen and other Interahamwe, whose violent attacks on the previous days justified the choice of the church as a sanctuary for refugees. In the light of the foregoing observations, the Chamber finds that Witness CF23 is not credible.

95. In view of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that it has been proven beyond a reasonable doubt that between 13 and 14 April 1994, Athanase Seromba prohibited refugees from going into the Parish banana plantation to get food, and that he also ordered gendarmes to shoot at any refugees who ventured there.

96. The Chamber finds on the other hand that the Prosecutor did not adduce evidence in support of the allegation that Seromba prohibited Tutsi refugees from getting food at the presbytery. The Chamber therefore finds that this fact was not proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

5.4. Refusal of Athanase Seromba to celebrate mass for "Inyenzi"

5.4.1. The evidence

Prosecution witnesses

97. Witness CBN[177] testified that on 14 April 1994 Athanase Seromba was approached by several Tutsi refugees, including some teachers, namely Bonera, Ruteghesa and Rwakayiro, who asked him to celebrate a mass for them.[178] The witness further testified that Athanase Seromba refused to celebrate the mass, arguing that he couldn't "waste his time".[179] The witness also explained that such refusal went against the wishes of the refugees who wanted the mass to be said.[180] He further explained that a Tutsi refugee then announced to other refugees that they should pray together, as Seromba had refused to say a mass for them.[181] Finally, the witness stated that Seromba was in front of the church when he expressed his refusal.[182]

98. Witness CBI[183] testified that, on or about 13 April 1994, Athanase Seromba entered the church to remove chalices, which he took to the presbytery, "on the first floor of his residential quarters".[184]

99. Furthermore, Witness CBJ[185] testified that there was no mass celebrated in Nyange parish on Sunday, 10 April 1994, explaining that it was not possible to celebrate mass because the "situation was rather critical".[186] The witness also testified that on 14 April 1994, Athanase Seromba removed priests' cassocks and chalices filled with communion from the church. Finally, the witness stated that he learned subsequently that Seromba had taken the objects with him to the presbytery.[187]

100. Witness CBK[188] testified that masses were celebrated in the old meeting hall during the events which occurred in Nyange parish in April 1994.[189]

Defence witness

101. Witness PA1[190] testified that as of 11 April 1994, the decision was taken to no longer celebrate mass in Nyange church because of the huge number of refugees and the presence of animals there, adding that masses were celebrated in the oratory, located in the presbytery.[191]

102. When Counsel for the Defence asked if the removal by Athanase Seromba of Communion hosts and sacerdotal ornaments had met with resistance on the part of the refugees, Witness PA1 answered: "There were no problems whatsoever. We believe that the sacrament is something that is highly respected by Catholics, and the sacred vases could not have stayed there because of the respect due to such ornaments. So there was no opposition. We believed it was our mission to have all our sacraments respected and put them in a safe place."[192]

5.4.2 Findings of the Chamber

103. The Chamber finds Witness CBN credible. There are only minor inconsistencies between his trial testimony and prior statements as to the exact location where Athanase Seromba expressed his refusal to celebrate the mass[193] and what he said on this occasion.[194] The Trial Chamber does not consider such inconsistencies to be crucial, given the lapse of time since the occurrence of the events, on the one hand, and the numerous references by witnesses to Seromba's refusal to celebrate mass for Tutsi refugees.[195]

104. Moreover, the Chamber notes that Witnesses CBI, CBJ and CBK testified that Athanase Seromba removed objects that are useful for celebrating mass between 10 and 13 April 1994.

105. The Chamber considers that the testimony of PA1, member of a religious order, clearly shows that from 11 April 1994, no mass was celebrated in Nyange church. On this point, Witness PA1 is corroborated by Witness CBI, as the Trial Chamber considers it in significance that CBI, unlike PA1, gave the date of the decision to no longer celebrate mass in church as being rather 10 April 1994. The Chamber considers, therefore, that these two witnesses are credible on this point. The Chamber is also of the view that Witness PA1 is credible with respect to the fact that sacred objects (Communion hosts and sacerdotal ornaments) were removed from the church.

106. That the refugees did not put up any resistance, as asserted by Witness PA1, to the removal by Seromba of sacred objects does not, in the opinion of the Chamber, exclude in any way the possibility that the refugees requested that a mass be said for them. In this regard, the Chamber is aware of the fact that Tutsi refugees in Nyange church knew that they were in constant danger of death during the events of April 1994, given that members of their ethnic group were being persecuted throughout the Rwandan territory. Under these circumstances, the Chamber considers it highly probable that the most fervent among them could have requested that Seromba celebrate a mass for them. The Chamber further considers that Seromba's removal of sacred objects could be interpreted as a denial of the refugees' request, particularly in view of the fact that he continued to celebrate mass in the oratory as from 11 April 1994. Consequently, the Chamber finds Witness CBN credible as to his testimony that refugees presented a mass request to Seromba which he turned down.

107. In view of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that it has been established beyond a reasonable doubt that Athanase Seromba refused to celebrate mass for Tutsi refugees in Nyange church.

5.5. Dismissal of four Tutsi employees (Alex, Félécien, Gasore and Patrice) from the parish by Athanase Seromba and the death of Patrice who was refused access to the presbytery by Seromba

5.5.1. The evidence

Prosecution witness

[192] Transcript, 20 April 2006, p.11 (closed session).
[193] Transcript, 20 April 2006, p. 60 (open session).
[194] Transcript, 15 October 2004, pp. 61-62 (open session).
[195] Transcript, 18 October 2004, p. 3 (open session).

108. Witness CBK[196] testified that after the death of the Rwandan President, Alex, Félécien, Gasore and Patrice, all of whom were Tutsi and employees in Nyange parish, told him that they had been suspended from work by Athanase Seromba, whereupon they left the parish.[197]

109. Witness CBK explained that these employees returned to the parish on 13 April 1994, but were turned back by Athanase Seromba, who informed them that there was no refuge for them there.[198] The witness also observed that the security situation had worsened considerably, such that any Tutsi who went outside ran the risk of being killed.[199] He further testified that he saw Patrice in the rear courtyard of the presbytery, wounded in both the arms and the legs, adding that he approached Seromba and asked him to help Patrice. According to the witness, Seromba refused; rather, he asked Patrice to leave the premises. Noticing that Patrice delayed complying with his order, Seromba asked the gendarmes to forcefully expel him. Finally, the witness testified that he subsequently saw the lifeless body of Patrice in the rear courtyard of the presbytery.[200]

110. Witness NA1, born of Hutu and Tutsi parents,[201] testified that he arrived at Nyange church on 15 April 1994.[202] He also indicated that he had previously worked in Nyange parish between 1992 and 1993.[203] The witness explained that when he returned to this parish in April 1994, he observed that none of the employees of the parish had been dismissed. He added that he met Alexis on site, who even greeted him.[204]

111. During cross-examination, Witness NA1 explained, inter alia, that he had no idea which employees were to be found among the refugees. He also stated that he was not there to take a census of the parish,[205] nor was he in any position to know who was an employee of the parish and who was not.[206]

5.5.2. Findings of the Trial Chamber

112. The Trial Chamber finds Witness CBK credible. No contradiction exists between his testimony and his prior statements. The Chamber also considers witness CBK's account of how athanase Seromba turned back Tutsi employees to be consistent and plausible, particularly in view of the circumstances which prevailed in Nyange parish in April 1994.

113. Furthermore, the Chamber is of the view that NA1's is not reliable on this point. The Chamber notes that Witness NA1 only arrived in Nyange parish on 15 April 1994 and, therefore, could not properly testify on events he did not witness. Furthermore, it observes that the witness spoke in general terms, as his testimony focussed simply on staff changes which were made between the time he left Nyange in 1993 and when he returned in April 1994. Finally, as the witness himself admits, he was in no position to identify employees present at the time he arrived at the church, due to the very large number of refugees and attackers that were on the premises.[207]

114. In view of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that it has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt that on 13 April 1994, art the time when the security situation in Kivumu commune had become precarious, Athanase Seromba dismissed four Tutsi employees from the parish, including a certain Patrice, who, upon returning the following day, was killed by attackers after having been turned back from the presbytery by Seromba.

5.6. The meeting in the parish office on 12 April 1994

5.6.1. The evidence

Prosecution witness

115. Witness CBJ[208] testified that on 12 April 1994, he saw Athanase Seromba engaged in discussion on the balcony of the "second floor" of the presbytery with Grégoire Ndahimana, Gaspard Kanyarukiga, Fulgence Kayishema and Télesphore Ndungutse.[209] He added that the discussion lasted between 15 and 20 minutes.[210] He finally stated that these persons did not go into any room or hall to hold discussions.[211]

5.6.2. Findings of the Chamber

116. The Chamber finds that CBJ's testimony is insufficient to prove that a meeting presided over by Seromba took place in the parish office on 12 April 1994. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not proved this fact beyond a reasonable doubt.

6. Events of 14 to 15 April 1994 in Nyange Parish

6.1. The Indictment

117. The Indictment alleges as follows:

> "15. On or about 13 April 1994, the Interahamwe and militiamen surrounding the parish, launched an attack against the refugees in the church. The refugees defended themselves by pushing the attackers out of the church, to a place named "la statue de la Sainte Vierge". The attackers in turn, threw a grenade causing many deaths between the refugees. The survivors quickly tried to return to the Church, but Father Athanase Seromba ordered that all doors be closed, leaving many refugees (about 30) outside to be killed.

> 16. On or about 14 April 1994, in the afternoon, Father Seromba met Fulgence Kayishema and Gaspard Kanyarukiga in his Parish office. Soon afterwards, Fulgence Kayishema went to bring some fuel, using one of the Kivumu commune official vehicles. That fuel was used by the Interahamwe and militiamen to burn down the church, while the gendarmes and members of the communal police threw grenades.

> 17. On that same day, Athanase Seromba chaired a meeting in his Parish Office with Fulgence Kayishema, Grégoire Ndahimana, Gaspard Kanyarukiga and others unknown to the Prosecution. Immediately after this meeting, following a request by refugees for protection, bourgmestre Grégoire Ndahimana replied that this war was caused by the Inyenzi who killed the President.

18. On or about 15 April, a bus transporting armed Interahamwe and a priest named Kayirangwa, arrived in Nyange parish, from Kibuye prefecture. Soon thereafter, Father Seromba held a meeting with priest Kayirangwa, Fulgence Kayishema, Kanyarukiga and others unknown to the Prosecution.

19. After this meeting, Father Athanase Seromba ordered the Interahamwe and militiamen to launch attacks to kill the Tutsi, beginning with the intellectuals. Following his orders, an attack was launched against the refugees by the Interahamwe, militiamen, gendarmes and communal police officers, equipped with traditional weapons and firearms, causing the deaths of numerous refugees.

20. On or about 15 April, in the afternoon, the attacks intensified against the refugees of the Church. The Interahamwe and militiamen attacked with traditional arms, and poured fuel through the roof of the church, while gendarmes and communal police officers launched grenades and killed the refugees.

21. During these attacks, Father Seromba handed over to the gendarmes a Tutsi teacher named Gatare who was killed immediately. This act encouraged and motivated the attackers.

22. Again during these attacks, some refugees left the church for the Presbytere. Father Seromba found them and informed gendarmes about their hiding place. Immediately thereafter, they were attacked and killed. Among the victims were two Tutsi women (Alexia and Meriam).

25. During the attacks described above, Athanase Seromba, Grégoire Ndahimana, Fulgence Kayishema, Télesphore Ndungutse, Judge Joseph Habiyambere, assistant bourgmestre Védaste Mupende, and other authorities not known to the Prosecution, were supervising the massacres.

46. The massive attack against the Tutsi refugees was conducted on or about 15 April 1994 under the supervision of Father Seromba, Fulgence Kayishema, Grégoire Ndahimana, Télesphore Ndungutse, Gaspard Kanyirukiga and others unknown to the Prosecution.

48. On or about 13 April, the Interahamwe and militiamen surrounding the parish launched an attack against the refugees in the church. The attackers having been pushed away and out of the church, to a placed named "la statue de la Sainte Vierge". The attackers threw a grenade causing many deaths among the refugees. The survivors quickly tried to return to the church, but Father Athanase Seromba ordered that all doors be closed, leaving many refugees outside (about 30) to be killed".

118. Witnesses CNJ,[212] CBR,[213] CBJ,[214] CDK,[215] CBS[216] and CDL[217] stated that a confrontation took place between the attackers and Tutsi refugees in the morning of 15 April 1994, near the Caritas restaurant. They, inter alia, explained that the assailants attacked the refugees with stones and traditional weapons, and that the refugees managed to push them back right up to the Codecoki. The attackers only regained control when a reservist named Théophile Rukara climbed on the roof of a house and began throwing grenades, wounding and killing many Tutsi refugees. The refugees then retreated towards Nyange church in order to avoid fighting the attackers.[218] Witness CBR, in particular, added that communal officials, including Ndahimana, Fulgence Kayishema, Habiyambere, Védaste Muraginabugabo and Gaspard Kanyarukiga[219] were present at the scene of fighting and encouraged the attackers to attack the refugees.[220]

Defence witnesses

119. Witnesses FE31,[221] BZ14,[222] BZ1[223] and BZ4[224] stated that grenades were thrown at Tutsi refugees during the attack which occurred in the morning of 15 April 1994. They also mentioned that following the grenade attack, which left some of them dead, the refugees fell back and barricaded themselves inside the church to better protect themselves.[225]

6.2.2 Findings of the Chamber

120. The Trial Chamber notes that Prosecution and Defence witnesses alike confirmed that in the morning of 15 April 1994, an attack was launched against Tutsi refugees which met with stiff resistance, and that the attackers subsequently used grenades, causing the death of several refugees. The Chamber therefore finds that these facts have been proven beyond a reasonable doubt.

121. Witness CBJ[226] testified that in the evening of 14 April 1994, Athanase Seromba, accompanied by gendarmes, asked Tutsi refugees to go inside the church, and then locked them inside.[227] He also testified that the following morning, Seromba, still accompanied by gendarmes, returned to open the doors of the church.[228] Witness CBJ also explained that during the attacks of 15 April 1994, the Tutsi refugees themselves took the decision to barricade themselves inside, abandoning outside the church some people "who did not succeed to do so", and so they were killed.[229]

122. Witnesses CBK,[230] CDL[231] and CNJ testified that during the attack of 15 April 1994, the refugees barricaded themselves inside the church for protection.[232]

Defence witnesses

123. Witnesses BZ4,[233] FE56,[234] BZ14[235] and FE34[236] testified that following the attacks of 15 April 1994, the refugees retreated towards the church and barricaded themselves inside.[237]

6.3.2. Findings of the Chamber

124. The Chamber notes that both the Indictment and the Prosecutor's pre-trial brief contain the allegation that Athanase Seromba ordered that the church doors be locked, leaving about 30 refugees outside, who were then killed. The Chamber notes, however, that these two pleadings are inconsistent as to the date of the events. While the Indictment alleges that the events occurred on or about 13 April 1994, the pre-trial brief refers to 14 April 1994.

125. The Chamber, moreover, considers that although Witness CBJ alleges that Athanase Seromba locked the doors of the church in the evening of 14 April 1994 and opened them again in the morning of 15 April 1994, he does not blame Seromba for the death of the Tutsi refugees who were killed on account of the fact that they could not gain access to the inside of the closed church. The Chamber also notes that the same witness testified that on 15 April 1994, refugees who were already inside the church took the decision to barricade themselves, abandoning some of their own who were left outside at the mercy of the attackers. The Chamber finally notes that Prosecution and Defence witnesses alike confirm the fact that it was the refugees themselves who took the decision to barricade the doors of the church on 15 April 1994.

126. In the light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber is of the view that the available evidence is consistent with respect to the dates of the events and the sequence thereof. The Chamber therefore finds that the Prosecution has not proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Athanase Seromba locked the doors of the church, leaving outside approximately 30 refugees who were subsequently killed.

127. Witness CBI[238] testified that several communal authorities, including Fulgence Kayishema, regularly came to the church while he was still there, adding that the authorities visited Athanase Seromba[239] to seek information on what was happening in the rear courtyard of the presbytery.[240] During cross-examination, Witness CBI stated that the meetings which planned the "killing" of Tutsi were also being held at Seromba's home.[241] Questioned by Defence Counsel as to what he meant by "meeting", the witness responded in these terms: "And you can conclude that it was a meeting when people are together."[242]

128. Witness CBJ[243] testified that the gendarmes, after discussing with Athanase Seromba, travelled to the Codecoki, in the centre of Nyange. He added that when Athanase Seromba returned to the presbytery after the Codecoki meeting, the Interahamwe, armed with spears, machetes, swords and bamboo pickets, began killing refugees.[244] He further testified that a meeting was held on 14 April 1994 in Nyange parish which was attended by Seromba, Bourgmestre Grégoire Ndahimana, Criminal Investigations Officer Fulgence Kayishema, Télesphore Ndungutse, the businessman Gaspard Kanyarukiga, Brigadier Christophe Mbakirirehe and other persons whom the witness stated he was unable to identify.[245] The witness explained that he observed the holding of this meeting from the church tower where he was with members of the charismatic group.[246] During cross-examination, Witness CBJ reiterated that participants in this meeting planned the killing of Tutsi.

129. Witness CDK[247] testified that he spotted Athanase Seromba in the vicinity of the church, in the company of Fulgence Kayishema, Grégoire Ndahimana, Gaspard Kanyarukiga and Télesphore Ndungutse.[248] The witness also stated that he saw them emerge at approximately 11 a.m. from the office of the Codecoki where they had just held a meeting. The witness testified that he did not participate in the meeting, adding that he was in front of Gaspard Kanyarukiga's pharmacy at the time of this event.[249] He finally stated that after the meeting, Athanase Seromba returned in the direction of the church, accompanied by Grégoire Ndahimana, Fulgence Kayishema and Télesphore Ndungutse, while Gaspard Kanyarukiga rejoined the population gathered near the statue where they were waiting for him.[250]

130. Witness CBK[251] testified that between 13 and 16 April 1994, Athanase Seromba organised several meetings in Nyange parish attended by Gaspard Kanyarukiga, Fulgence Kayishema, Grégoire Ndahimana, Ndungutse and Rushema. The witness also testified that the meetings were often held in a room located "on the upper floor of the presbytery building".[252]

131. Witness CBN[253] stated that he saw Athanase Seromba welcome several authorities including Bourgmestre Ndahimana, Kanyarukiga and Criminal Investigations Officer Kayishema.[254] Witness CBN also testified that he was informed that communal conseillers held meetings.[255]

132. Witness CBS[256] alleged that the authorities had come to Nyange parish to meet Athanase Seromba. Among them, the witness cited Bourgmestre Ndahimana, Criminal Investigations Officer Kayishema, Brigadier Mbakirirehe, a teacher, Télesphore Ndungutse, and a businessman, Kanyarukiga.[257]

Defence witnesses

133. Witness PA1[258] testified that no meeting was held at the presbytery by Athanase Seromba and the communal authorities for the purpose of exterminating the refugees.[259] He pointed out he, together with other religious persons, had asked Seromba to contact the bourgmestre so as to be apprised of the situation which prevailed in Nyange parish on Friday, 15 April 1994. On his return from this mission, Seromba explained to them that he could not meet the bourgmestre, as he was absent attending a burial.[260] Witness PA1 further testified that Grégoire Ndahimana and Fulgence Kayishema came to the parish in the evening. The witness stated that the clergymen asked the authorities to tell them what to do with the corpses strewn in the churchyard.[261] The bourgmestre then promised to send bulldozers the following day to bury the bodies.[262] The witness finally testified that it was not possible that Seromba could organise these meetings without him knowing about it, since they were always together.[263]

134. Witness BZ3[264] stated that there was no "relationship" between Athanase Seromba and the authorities.[265] He furthermore stated that he had never heard of any meetings between Seromba, Fulgence Kayishema, Grégoire Ndahimana and Télesphore Ndungutse prior to 16 April 1994.[266]

135. Witness CF23[267] testified that meetings of Nyange commune were always held at the communal office[268] and that he was always kept informed of them. He also added that no meeting of the communal authorities took place in Nyange parish. He furthermore indicated that no official meeting of the communal authorities had on its agenda the extermination of the Tutsi.[269]

6.4.2. Findings of the Chamber

136. The Chamber finds that the statements of Prosecution Witnesses CBI, CBJ, CBK, CDK and CBS are consistent with respect to the fact that Athanase Seromba held meetings or discussions with the communal authorities. In this regard, it notes that the testimony of Defence Witness PA1 corroborates the testimony of these witnesses when he states, inter alia, that Seromba had been asked to contact the bourgmestre to find a solution concerning the corpses that were strew all over the church courtyard. The Chamber, however, considers that the testimonies of CBI, CBJ, CBK, CDK and CBS do not lead to the conclusion that any meeting attended by Seromba or any discussion he may have had with the communal authorities was for the purpose of planning the extermination of the Tutsi. In fact, none of these witnesses participated in such meetings or discussions. Therefore, the Chamber considers that reference by some of them to an extermination plan is nothing more than a reflection of their own opinions.

137. The Chamber notes that Witness PA1 was heard on 8 October 2003 within the framework of a Letter Rogatory. At the hearing, the witness admitted that he was not always with Athanase Seromba at the presbytery, adding that it was highly probable that certain persons came to the presbytery without him being informed.[270] The Chamber finds this statement inconsistent with PA1's testimony that he was always alongside Seromba. The Chamber therefore concludes that this witness is not credible.

138. The Chamber is also of the view that the testimonies of BZ3 and CBN are not reliable, as they are hearsay.

139. The Chamber also considers that the evidence given by Witness CF23 is not probative, as he recounts that meetings were held by the communal authorities in the commune office, without any reference to the presence of Athanase Seromba at the meetings.

140. In view of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has established beyond a reasonable doubt that meetings or discussions were held between Athanase Seromba and commune authorities. On the other hand, the Chamber finds that it has not been established beyond a reasonable doubt that the purpose of the meetings or discussions was to plan the extermination of the Tutsi.

6.5. That Athanase Seromba ordered the Interahamwe and militia to attack refugees

6.5.1. The evidence

Prosecution witnesses

141. Witness CDK[271] testified that he saw Gaspard Kanyarukiga, Télesphore Ndungutse and Fulgence Kayishema give orders and instructions to the attackers on 15 April 1994.[272]

142. Witness CBR[273] testified that Athanase Seromba was not the one leading the attackers on 15 April 1994. However, he added that before the attackers received any instructions from the authorities, the latter first held discussions with Seromba. He stated however that he was not privy to the discussions.[274] The witness also testified that Fulgence Kayishema stated that it was necessary to attack the Inyenzi who were located in Nyange church.[275]

143 Witness CNJ[276] testified that when he arrived in Nyange parish with his group, Fulgence Kayishema and Grégoire Ndahimana welcomed them. They told them to cover themselves with banana leaves to distinguish themselves from the Tutsi. The witness further testified that Fulgence Kayishema directed them to a location where they were to assist others in fighting the Tutsi.[277] Witness CNJ admitted that they were pushed back as far as the pharmacy belonging to Kanyarukiga. Kayishema then told them to go back up and throw stones at the Tutsi.[278]

144. Witness YAU[279]testified that when the Interahamwe arrived in the courtyard of the church, Athanase Seromba told them not to attack the refugees immediately, as there were few of them.[280] Seromba allegedly told them to stop the fighting because, in his words, "you are in inadequate numbers".[281] The witness further testified that Seromba ordered the Interahamwe to start by killing the intellectuals.[282] Furthermore, he claimed that during the same day, Seromba addressed an Interahamwe woman, saying to her: "find all these people who are hiding in here and take them out and kill them!".[283]

Defence witnesses

145. Witness NA1[284] testified that during the 15 April 1994 attack, Athanase Seromba was always with him and other persons in the presbytery. He also stated that while they were in the living room of the presbytery, Kayiranga came to inform them about the massacre of refugees who remained outside the buildings.[285]

146. Witness BZ1[286] testified that, on 15 April 1994, the attackers were led by communal authorities, including the bourgmestre, the Criminal Investigations Officer and an MRND official, who worked in close collaboration with these authorities. He stated that he at no time saw Athanase Seromba or other clergymen on 15 April 1994.[287]

147. Witness FE31[288] testified that he arrived at Nyange church in the morning of 15 April 1994, between 10 a.m. and 10.30 a.m.[289] The witness stated that he saw Fulgence Kayishema, a communal police officer, a businessman, Anastase Rushema, Léonard Abayisenga, Théophile Rukura, Boniface Kabalisa, Ephrem Nzabigerageza and other persons holding a meeting, but did not hear what they discussed.[290] He, furthermore, indicated that these persons were leading the attack.[291] Witness FE31 also stated that Athanase Seromba was not present at this meeting,[292] as he did not see him at the location that day.[293] The witness stated, inter alia, as follows: "We were [sic] attacked because we were incited to do so by the authorities … [Seromba] could not be attacked and be leading the attack, whereas he was targeted by the assailants."[294]

148. Witness FE36[295] testified that Télesphore Ndungutse was behind the killings perpetrated in Nyange parish.[296]

149. Witness FE55[297] testified that on 15 April 1994, Gaspard Kanyarukiga solicited the recruitment of persons from Kibilira "to attack the church". He also allegedly stated that everything had to be done to kill the Tutsi, including destroying the church, if necessary.[298] The witness finally testified that on the same day he saw Fulgence Kayishema distributing whistles from his vehicle, inciting the Hutu to kill Tutsi refugees in Nyange parish.[299]

150. Witness FE56[300] explained that on 15 April 1994, Fulgence Kayishema wanted to expel the refugees from the church. The witness also stated that Télesphore Ndungutse gave him a watering can containing fuel and ordered him to spray it on the windows of the church.[301] According to the witness, the objective was to frighten the refugees, so that they would be forced to come out of the church, which was surrounded on the orders of Fulgence Kayishema.[302] The witness testified that Télesphore Ndungutse and Fulgence Kayishema supervised the attacks.[303] He explained that these persons went to negotiate with Astaldi company to obtain trucks for the transport of attackers from Kibilira to Nyange parish.[304] Witness FE56 finally testified that he did not see Athanase Seromba in Nyange parish on 15 April 1994.[305]

6.5.2. Findings of the Chamber

151. The Chamber notes that Witness YAU is the sole Prosecution witness who stated that Seromba ordered Interahamwe to start by killing Tutsi intellectuals on 15 April 1995. The Chamber observes, however, that the circumstances under which this witness may have heard Athanase Seromba give such an order do not clearly emerge from his testimony. Consequently, the Chamber finds that Witness YAU is not reliable.

152. The Chamber notes that the testimonies of CDK, CBR, CNJ, NA1, BZ1, FE31, FE36, FE55 and FE56 are consistent with respect to the fact that it was the communal authorities who led the attackers, made up of Interahamwe and militiamen, and gave them orders to attack the refugees.

153. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Athanase Seromba ordered the Interahamwe and militiamen to attack the refugees.

6.6. That the Interahamwe and militia, assisted by gendarmes and communal police officers, launched attacks against the refugees and attempted to burn down the Nyange church

6.6.1. The evidence

Prosecution witnesses

154. Witness CBI[306] testified that on 15 April 1994, most of the assailants were carrying traditional weapons, while their leaders were carrying guns.[307] He also testified that this attack caused numerous deaths among the refugees, leaving the church courtyard strewn with their dead bodies.[308]

155. Witness CBR[309] testified that the attacks continued in the afternoon of 15 April 1994,[310] adding that the attackers attempted to burn down the church by spraying it with petrol and using banana leaves and "sticks of dynamite".[311]

156. Witness CDK[312] stated that another attack occurred during the afternoon of 15 April 1994, while the church was still surrounded by the attackers. He testified that communal police officers and gendarmes opened fire in the direction of the church and attempted to burn it down using gasoline and dynamite.[313] Finally, the witness estimated that more than 100 persons were killed in that attack.[314]

157. Witness CBK[315] testified that on 15 April 1994 there was a "large scale" attack against refugees in Nyange church. The witness stated that the attackers had increased in number and were armed with spears, machetes, small hoes and sharpened and wooden sticks. He added that the refugees defended themselves using stones and were forced to barricade themselves inside the church to protect themselves. The witness also testified that Fulgence Kayishema, Télesphore Ndungutse and Grégoire Ndahimana attempted to burn down the church by spraying petrol on it and throwing grenades against the doors.[316]

158. Witness CBT[317] testified that during the 15 April 1994 attack, Faustin sprayed petrol on the church, adding that the attackers climbed on the roof of the church from where a grenade was thrown.[318]

159. Witness CDL[319] testified that during the 15 April 1994 attack, the objective of the attackers was to enter the church. He explained, inter alia, that they initially attempted to break down the doors of the church using dynamite and that when they failed, they unsuccessfully tried to burn it down using gasoline.[320]

6.6.2. Findings of the Chamber

160. The Chamber finds that all the testimonies of Prosecution witnesses are consistent with respect to the fact that the attackers launched an attack against the refugees in Nyange church on 15 April 1994 and that they also attempted to burn down the church on the same day.

161. The Chamber notes that the Defence adduced no evidence to refute this allegation.

162. In view of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecutor has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that on 15 April 1994, the Interahamwe and militiamen, assisted by gendarmes and communal police officers, launched attacks against Tutsi refugees and attempted to burn down Nyange church.

6.7.1. The evidence

Prosecution witnesses

163. Witness CDL[321] testified that Athanase Seromba was present at the 15 April 1994 attack and that he was standing in front of the parish secretariat.[322] The witness further testified added that he saw Seromba again later in the day when Seromba was standing in front of the priest's residence.[323] The witness also stated that Seromba advised the attackers to attack Tutsi who were inside the church rather than those who were inside the presbytery.[324] The witness furthermore stated that the bourgmestre and Ndungutse informed him that they had discussed with Seromba, who wanted them to bury the numerous bodies strewn all over the church courtyard. In fact, Witness CDL stated, inter alia, as follows: "So Father Seromba deemed it necessary to first bury the bodies and then to resume the killings afterwards."[325] The witness explained that Seromba did nothing to protect the refugees.[326]

164. Witness CBR[327] explained that during the 15 April 1994 attack, when there were no longer any refugees outside the church, the attackers wanted to attack the refugees hidden in the presbytery courtyard. He testified that Kayishema and Ndungutse led these attacks. He stated that Seromba and the gendarmes prevented the attackers from entering the presbytery courtyard. He explained that Kayishema and Ndungutse held a discussion with Seromba and subsequently told the attackers that Seromba had asked them to stop the killings and to "first" remove the bodies and debris lying on the ground. The witness alleged that Seromba made the following remarks: "Listen, look around, first of all, clear this filth." He also stated that Kayishema and Ndungutse uttered the following remarks: "Seromba did not even allow us to enter the courtyard of the presbytery before we removed the filth." The witness furthermore indicated that he was standing 10 metres away from Kayishema, Ndungutse and Seromba when they were discussing. He also stated that the numerous bodies were removed in less than an hour, using a bulldozer belonging to Astaldi company. He alleged that Seromba did nothing to protect the refugees or to oppose the attack.[328] During cross-examination, Witness CBR confirmed that he had personally heard Seromba refer to the bodies as filth.[329] The witness further testified that the attacks resumed after the bodies had been removed.[330] Finally, he testified that he never saw Seromba lead the attackers on 15 April 1994 or 16 April 1994, while indicating that "before the authorities gave us any instructions, whatsoever, they had to discuss with the pastor".[331]

165. Witness CNJ[332] stated that during the 15 April 1994 attack, the attackers pursued the refugees who were trying to hide in the presbytery and that Athanase Seromba prevented them, saying "first of all, remove the dead bodies that were in front of the secretariat". The witness stated that he personally heard Seromba utter these words,[333] and that the attacks resumed after the bodies had been removed. Witness CNJ stated as follows: "We removed the dead bodies, and afterwards we went into the back courtyard, the place where he was stopping us from entering before we removed the dead bodies."[334]

166. Witness CBJ[335] explained that following the 15 April 1994 attacks, Athanase Seromba congratulated some of the assailants by throwing down bottles of beer to them from the "second floor" of the presbytery. The witness testified that he saw Seromba later in the evening at the secretariat, holding a discussion with the Interahamwe and the gendarmes. Seromba allegedly asked them to bring a mechanical digger to remove the bodies strewn on the ground in front of the church.[336] Witness CBJ furthermore testified that when the killings began on 15 April 1994, he saw Seromba on the "second floor" of the presbytery, in the company of Édouard Nturiye, Emmanuel Kayiranga and the grand séminariste Apollinaire Hakizimana watching the massacres that were taking place.[337]

167. Witness CDK[338] testified that he saw Athanase Seromba in company with Kanyarukiga and Kayishema in Nyange parish towards 2 p.m. The witness explained that the three of them were standing in front of the office of the Parish secretariat and that he was at a short distance from them at that time.[339]

Defence witnesses

168. Witness BZ1[340] testified that he never saw Athanase Seromba at the time the attacks were perpetrated in the church up until the collapse of the bell tower.[341] He claimed to have seen Seromba for the last time during a mass celebration which took place on 11 April 1994.[342]

169. Witness BZ4[343] stated that he never saw Athanase Seromba in the company of the attackers.[344] The witness also testified that he did not see Seromba on 15 and 16 April 1994.[345]

170. Witness FE31[346] testified that he did not see Athanase Seromba at the locus of the 15 April 1994 attack.[347] The witness stated that the assailants attacked Seromba and that Seromba could not have led an attack, whereas he was himself being targeted by the assailants.[348]

171. Witness FE35[349] testified that he did not see the priest during the 15 April 1994 attack. He stated that he only saw employees of the commune and members of the general public.[350]

172. Witness PA1[351] stated that he did not come out of the presbytery following the attacks which occurred upon the arrival of the bus on 15 April 1994. The witness testified that Seromba came out outraged by the fact that "people" were being killed. He added that he did not remember the time during which Seromba remained outside the presbytery.[352] He explained that he witnessed a meeting between Seromba, Kariramba, Kayiranga, Nturiye, the bourgmestre and Kayishema during which the question of numerous bodies which were strewn on the ground in the parish courtyard was being addressed. The witness stated, inter alia, that the priest requested the bourgmestre "to do something" with a view to burying the bodies. The bourgmestre then told them that he would contact the person in charge of the site in order to obtain a bulldozer for that purpose.[353]

173. Witness YA1, a Hutu,[354] testified that he saw no clergymen on 15 April 1994.[355]

174. Witness NA1[356] explained that on 15 April 1994, at approximately 6 p.m., the priests met in the presbytery and asked Athanase Seromba to contact the bourgmestre of the commune and inform him of the progress of events. The witness stated that when Seromba returned to the presbytery, he explained that he was unable to meet the bourgmestre, as the latter had gone to attend a burial.[357] Witness NA1 furthermore stated that he learned later in the evening that the bourgmestre had come to the parish that same evening and that he had told the priest that on the following day he would take necessary measures to bury the bodies. The witness finally stated that he did not attend this meeting, and therefore, did not see the bourgmestre in the parish during the evening of 15 April 1994.[358]

6.7.2. Findings of the Chamber

175. The Chamber notes that the testimony of Witness CDL is hearsay. Consequently, his allegations that Athanase Seromba ordered assailants to attack the refugees inside the church and to remove the bodies prior to resuming the killings are not credible.

176. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Athanase Seromba supervised the 15 April 1994 attacks in Nyange parish.

177. The Chamber notes, furthermore, that three Prosecution witness, Witnesses CDL, CBR and CNJ stated in similar testimonies that, during the 15 April 1994 attack, Athanase Seromba prevented attackers from entering the courtyard of the presbytery where refugees were hiding. Witness CDL explained, inter alia, that Seromba held discussions with the bourgmestre and Ndungutse, while Witness CBR referred rather to a meeting between Seromba, Kayishema and Ndungutse. Witness CNJ claimed that Seromba personally addressed the attackers.

178. The Chamber notes that Witness CDL's evidence on the content of the meeting is hearsay, whereas Witnesses CBR and CNJ stated that they personally heard the remarks made by Athanase Seromba. Contrary to the first two witnesses, CNJ did not state that Seromba referred to the bodies as filth. Furthermore, Witnesses CBR and CNJ alleged that the massacres resumed after the bodies had been removed.

179. The Chamber considers Witness CBR to be credible. In fact, during cross-examination, Witness CBR confirmed what he had said in the examination-in-chief.[359] Counsel for the Defence challenged Witness CBR on his assertions that he heard Kayishema and Ndungutse say that Athanase Seromba had asked for the bodies to be removed and that he had personally heard Seromba say these words.[360] Witness CBR explained that there was no discrepancy between the two assertions. He stated that he heard the priest utter those words and that the authorities conveyed to the attackers what the priest had told them.[361]

180. Witness CNJ gave a consistent account of the events which occurred on 15 April 1994, except with respect to the time of his arrival at the location[362]. The Chamber finds that no evidence casts doubt on the credibility of his factual evidence.

181. Witness CBJ also stated that Athanase Seromba requested that the bodies be removed, although he estimated this event as having occurred in the evening of 15 April 1994. No other evidence supports his own evidence that Seromba congratulated the assailants. The Chamber therefore declines to admit CBJ's evidence on this point.

182. The Chamber finds that the evidence given by CBR, CBJ, CBI and CDK is consistent with respect to the presence of Athanase Seromba on the site during the 15 April 1994 attacks.

183. The Chamber finds that BZ1's evidence on this point is not reliable. In fact, after first declaring in the examination-in-chief that he had not seen Athanase Seromba on 15 April 1994, the witness subsequently admitted during cross-examination the following: "At any rate, I am telling you that these people were speaking to him. I can't say that I certainly saw him, but when they were speaking to him, I could hear what they were saying. In fact, I could say I had a glance of him…"[363]

184. The Trial Chamber finds the testimony of BZ4 unreliable, as he testified that he did not stay in Nyange parish for a long time on 15 April 1994.[364]

185. The Chamber holds that Witness FE31 is not credible on this point. In fact, after first declaring that Athanase Seromba was not present during the 15 April 1994 attack, he subsequently stated that the assailants attacked Seromba. However no other witness stated that Seromba was attacked on 15 April 1994.

186. Furthermore, the Chamber notes that Witness F31 stated that he arrived at the church at approximately 10.30 a.m.,[365] went to the statue of the Virgin Mary, and then returned to the church courtyard, where he remained only for 10 minutes, without going inside the presbytery.[366] The Chamber points out that the witness claimed in his previous statements that he was not present in Nyange parish on 15 April 1994. In fact, during cross-examination, the Prosecutor read out Question 6, appearing on the statement made by the witness to the Rwandan authorities on 14 January 2000 as follows: "You are accused of having participated in the bloody attack on the church. That was in broad daylight, and many people saw you. What is your response?" The Chamber notes that the witness answered as follows: "It is a pure lie. I never went there."[367] The Prosecutor also read out the answer which the witness gave to Question 7 as follows: "I never went to the church. If I had gone there, people would have seen me."[368] The Prosecutor finally read out to Witness FE31 an excerpt from his statement to the Rwandan authorities on 19 November 1999: "What are your grounds of defence in respect of the acts for which you are accused by the legal officer?; Answer: I did not commit these offences. I stayed in the house. I did not go anywhere. I did not go to the church."[369] In view of the foregoing, the Chamber finds that Witness FE31's statements are inconsistent.[370]

[370] Transcript, 29 March 2006, pp. 65-68 (open session).

187. The Chamber also finds Witness FE35 unreliable, having stated that he did not see Athanase Seromba during the attacks. Incidentally, the Chamber notes that his evidence that he left the church sometime between 1 and 4 p.m. is vague.[371]

188. The Chamber considers PA1's evidence inconclusive. In fact, he testified on what Athanase Seromba did or said when he left the presbytery, even though he did not follow Seromba to personally ascertain his conduct. The Chamber therefore finds PA1's evidence unreliable.

189. The Chamber also considers NA1's evidence to be inconclusive, as he did not attend the meeting during which the bourgmestre allegedly promised the priests, in the evening of 15 April 1994, that he would bring in some bulldozers to remove the bodies.

190. The Chamber considers that Witness YA1 is not credible. In fact, his testimony is full of contradictions: at times he claims to have been present at the 15 April 1994 events, standing near the statue of the Virgin Mary. On other occasions, he states that he did not go to the parish on 15 April 1994.[372]

191. In view of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that it has been proven beyond a reasonable doubt that on 15 April 1994, Athanase Seromba asked the assailants, who were preparing to attack the Tutsi in the presbytery courtyard, to stop the killings and to first remove the bodies. The Chamber also finds that the attacks against Tutsi refugees resumed after the bodies had been removed.

6.8. That numerous Tutsi refugees, including the teacher called Gatare, and two Tutsi female refugees, Alexia and Meriam, were killed

6.8.1. The evidence

Prosecution witnesses

192. Witness CBT[373] testified that around noon, on 15 April 1994, he saw Athanase Seromba on the staircase, in front of the secretariat, in the company of a teacher called Anicet Gatare.[374] The witness stated that Seromba accompanied Anicet Gatare up to the door of the secretariat where he handed him over to three gendarmes who were on duty. He further stated that the gendarmes took away Anicet Gatare and killed him with one bullet.[375] He explained that during this incident, Seromba was on the veranda of the parish secretariat.[376] He also testified that after handing over Anicet Gatare to the gendarmes, Seromba returned to the "inner courtyard".[377]

193. Witness CBJ[378] testified that he knew Meriam during his sojourn at Nyange church from 10 to 16 April 1994. He added that Meriam was among a group of privileged Tutsi to whom Athanase Seromba had provided accommodation inside the presbytery until 14 April 1994. The witness also pointed out that following the 14 April 1994 meeting, the purpose of which, in his view, was to plan the killing of Tutsi, all the persons to whom accommodation had been provided in the presbytery were sent away by Seromba.[379] He also testified that the refugees came out after the doors of the church were opened on the morning of 15 April 1994. Among other things, he recounted how Meriam returned to the presbytery to avoid the Interahamwe who had started attacking the refugees. Witness CBJ furthermore explained that these attacks occurred between 1 p.m. and 3 p.m., and that Seromba, once again, sent away all the persons of Tutsi origin, including Meriam, who were in the rear courtyard of the presbytery. He further recounted how Meriam was "beaten up" in front of the secretariat and dragged on the ground up to the front of the church by Muringanyi while Fulgence Kayishema held her by the head and was banging it against the ground in the courtyard.[380] The witness stated that he personally saw the naked, mortal remains of Meriam.[381] He also stated that on the same day, at approximately 7 p.m., he heard Seromba call his night watchman, Canisius Habiyambere, and order him to search the rear courtyard of the presbytery to see whether any Tutsi were hidden there.[382] Finally, Witness CBJ testified that he saw a gendarme in front of the corridor near the ground floor shoot Anicet Gatare at point-blank range who, struck by a bullet in the chest, died thereafter.[383]

194. Witness CBK[384] testified that he saw numerous victims among whom he was able to identify Adrienne, a religious novice from Nyinawajambo commune, Anicet Gatare, a teacher, Boniface Gatare, a youth counsellor in Kivumu commune and Kanamugire, a MINITRAP employee.[385] The witness stated that Anicet Gatare was killed by gendarmes on 13 April 1994. He recounted how he learned from gendarmes that Anicet Gatare had offered them money so as to be killed by shooting, as he did not want to be killed with a machete.[386] Witness CBK also stated that Fulgence Kayishema killed Meriam by banging her head against bricks,[387] while Seromba, who was present on site, did nothing to prevent the killing.[388]

Defence witnesses

195. Witness BZ1[389] testified that when Anicet Gatare saw the attackers arriving, he asked a gendarme to kill him in order to avoid an atrocious death. He testified that the attackers accused Athanase Seromba of complicity with the Inkotanyi because he did not want to hand over persons found in the parish to the attackers.[390]

196. Witness BZ2[391] testified that he learned that many persons, including his friend, Meriam and a teacher named Anicet Gatare had died in Nyange parish.[392]

197. Witness FE31[393] testified that he was told that Anicet Gatare asked the gendarmes to shoot him, to avoid death by machete. The witness also stated that he was unaware that he had been handed over to the gendarmes, adding that the attackers found Anicet Gatare on site and killed him by striking him with a machete.[394]

198. Witness FE55[395] testified that Meriam and Anicet Gatare were killed on Friday, 15 April 1994.[396]

6.8.2. Findings of the Chamber

199. The Chamber notes that Witnesses CBT, CBJ, CBK, BZ2 and FE55 confirmed the death of Tutsi refugees Anicet Gatare and Meriam. The Chamber further notes that Witnesses BZ1 and FE31 only referred to the death of Anicet Gatare. The Trial Chamber finally observes that no witness in the present matter made reference to the death of Alexia. Consequently, the Chamber is of the view that the murders of Meriam and Anicet Gatare have been proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

200. With respect to the murder of Anicet Gatare, the Chamber notes that the statements of Witnesses CBT and CBJ are not consistent as to the circumstances of his death. The Trial Chamber, however, accepts the evidence of Witnesses CBK, BZ1 and FE31 that Anicet Gatare was killed by a gendarme who agreed to shoot him in exchange for a sum of money, so as to avoid being killed with a machete.

201. With respect to the murder of Meriam, the Chamber accepts CBJ's testimony that Athanase Seromba turned back several refugees from the presbytery, including Meriam, and that Meriam was subsequently killed by the attackers. The Chamber finds CBJ's testimony credible. The Chamber further observes that Witness CBK gave a consistent account of the circumstances surrounding the death of Meriam. The Chamber finds this witness credible.

202. In the light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not proven beyond a reasonable doubt that Athanase Seromba handed over Anicet Gatare to the gendarmes. The Trial Chamber is, however, of the view that it has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Seromba turned back several refugees, including Meriam, from the presbytery.

7. Events of 16 April 1994 In Nyange Parish

7.1. The Indictment

203. The Indictment alleges as follows:

> "23. Many refugees were killed during these attacks. A bulldozer was used by three employees of Astaldi company (Mitima, Maurice and Flanbeau) to remove the numerous corpses of the victims from the Church. Two additional drivers were requested from Fulgence Kayishema to complete the removal. One of them, Evarist Rwamasirabo, who had refused to participate, was killed immediately.
> 26. When the corpses of victims were removed from the church, Védaste Mupende ordered the driver (Athanase alias 2000) to demolish the Church. The latter refused since the church was the house of God.
> 27. Immediately thereafter, Védaste Mupende, Fulgence Kayishema and Grégoire Ndahimana requested the intervention of Athanase Seromba, who came and ordered Athanase alias 2000 to destroy the church, telling him that Hutu people were numerous and could build another one.
> 28. Athanase bulldozed the church and its roof collapsed, killing more than 2,000 Tutsi refugees gathered inside. The few survivors were attacked by the Interahamwe, anxious to finish them off.
> 29. On or about 16 April 1994, after the destruction of the church, the authorities held a meeting in the Parish. Soon after, Father Seromba ordered the Interahamwe to clean the "rubbish". The bodies of victims were placed into common graves.

30. The transfer of corpses into common graves took about two days, under the supervision of Athanase Seromba, Fulgence Kayishema, Grégoire Ndahimana and others unknown to the Prosecution.

47. After the complete destruction of the church, Father Athanase Seromba met with Fulgence Kayishema, Grégoire Ndahimana, Gaspard Kanyirukiga and the drivers of the caterpillar bulldozer and sat drinking beer together.

49. On or about 15 April 1994, Father Athanase Seromba ordered or planned, abetted and encouraged the destruction of the church with more than 2,000 Tutsi trapped inside, causing their deaths".

7.2. The presence of a bulldozer in the church courtyard

7.2.1. The evidence

Prosecution witnesses

204. Witnesses CBK,[397] CDK[398] and CBT[399] mentioned the presence of a bulldozer in Nyange parish.[400] Witnesses CBJ,[401] CBR[402] and CDL,[403] for their part, testified to the presence of two bulldozers.[404]

Defence witnesses

205. Witnesses BZ1,[405] BZ3,[406] BZ4,[407] BZ14,[408] CF14,[409] CF23,[410] FE27,[411] FE32,[412] PA1[413] and YA1[414] testified to the presence of a bulldozer at Nyange church.[415] Witnesses FE35,[416] FE34,[417] FE56[418] and NA1[419] rather testified that there were two bulldozers there.[420]

7.2.2. Findings of the Chamber

206. The Chamber notes that 13 witnesses testified to having seen a bulldozer at Nyange church, while 7 others mentioned the presence of two bulldozers. It is the Chamber's opinion that the discrepancy between the witness accounts is due to the difficulty they had in identifying the type of vehicles present at Nyange church. The Chamber therefore finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that there was at least one bulldozer at Nyange church on 16 April 1994.

7.3. Murder of Driver Evarist Rwamasirabo

7.3.1. The evidence

Defence witnesses

207. Witness FE32, one of the drivers of the bulldozer that demolished Nyange church,[421] testified that on 16 April 1994, towards 9.30 a.m., Fulgence Kayishema visited him at his home.[422] He explained that Fulgence Kayishema was looking for drivers of Astaldi company and asked them why they were so reluctant to "help the others". The witness further recounted how they answered to him that they had not come to kill "people". He stated that Fulgence Kayishema harassed them and that they were forcefully led to the church by gendarmes.[423] The witness testified that Kayishema told them that they had to help the "others" to bury the bodies. The witness explained that following a quarrel, a gendarme shot Evariste Ntahomvukiye in the head, causing his death.[424] The witness explained that this murder occurred on the Gitarama main road leading up to the church, between the statue of the Virgin Mary and[425] the Caritas main office.[426]

7.3.2. Findings of the Chamber

208. The Chamber considers that Witness FE32 is not credible on this point. In fact, the Chamber notes that he is the only witness who made mention of this murder, whereas it occurred in a public place. Furthermore, the Chamber observes that the witness showed an inclination to use the alleged death of Evariste Ntahomvukiye to support the argument that he only demolished the church under duress.

209. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber considers that the Prosecution has not established the murder of Evarist Rwamasirabo.

7.4. The order given by Athanase Seromba to demolish the church

Prosecution witnesses

210. Witness CBJ[427] testified that a meeting was held at the Codekoki on 16 April 1994, attended by Athanase Seromba, Businessman Gaspard Kanyarukiga, Criminal Investigations Officer Fulgence Kayishema, a teacher, Télesphore Ndungutse, Judge Habyambere, Businessman François Gashugi and many others who worked with these persons. He explained that the attackers who stood close by the Codekoki building were waiting for the signal to launch attacks,[428] adding that he observed this meeting while he was in the church bell tower.[429] Witness CBJ stated that he saw Seromba in front of the office of the priest's secretariat at the time when the bulldozers started to move on 16 April 1994. He also testified that he saw Interahamwe and the bulldozer driver, Anastase, penetrate into the courtyard of the presbytery and re-emerge. He stated that he was witness to discussions between Anastase and Seromba, an account of which he gives as follows:

> "[…] he spoke to him saying, 'Really, father, do you accept that I should destroy this church?' I saw Father Athanase Seromba nod. The driver spoke to him again, to Father Seromba. And then for a third time, 'Father, do you accept that I should destroy this church', and Father Seromba answered in these words, 'Unless you, yourselves, are Inyensi, destroy it. All we want is to get rid of the Inyenzi. As for the rest of it, we the Hutus are many. If we get rid of the Inyenzi, we will build another church. We will build a new church'."[430]

211. Witness CBJ explained that following this meeting, he saw Athanase Seromba pull out an object from his pocket and hand it to the bulldozer driver. The driver then started demolishing the church.[431]

212. Witness CBK[432] testified that he saw Athanase Seromba, Kayishema, Ndahimana, Kanyarukiga and other persons holding a meeting at the secretariat in the morning of 16 April 1994. He testified that he heard Kayishema say that the church tower had to be destroyed because there were Tutsi intellectuals hiding there. He mentioned that he was at least three metres away from the place where the meeting was being held. He explained that after this conversation, Seromba and those persons climbed to the "upper floor of the building".[433]

213. Furthermore, Witness CBK stated that the bulldozer driver was called Anastase, and that Athanase Seromba was present when he arrived with the bulldozer. On four occasions, he related the following conversation between the driver and Seromba:

> "[…] he asked Father Seromba thrice: 'Should we destroy this church?' And then Father Seromba answered, 'Destroy the church. We, the Hutu, are many in number and, furthermore, in the house of God. Demons have gotten in there … that we, the Hutus, were many in number and that we were going to build another'".[434]
> "Anastase asked Seromba: 'Do you want me to destroy this church?' And he put the question to him three times. And he told him, 'Destroy it.' [...] Furthermore, he stated that: 'We, the Hutus, are many and we can build another church'."[435]
> "[…] the driver who came to destroy the church asked him on three occasions, three times, if he should destroy the church. Now, he said, 'Destroy it!'".[436]

"It was Anastase who asked Father Seromba whether the church would be destroyed. and Seromba told him: 'you can destroy it. There are many of us. We can rebuild it. When there are demons in the church, it should be destroyed'."[437]

214. According to witness CBK, the ex-bourgmestre of Gisovu commune, the Criminal Investigations Officer of the commune, the deputies of the bourgmestre and the communal police officers of Kivumu commune were present during this conversation. The driver then began demolishing the church. The witness further stated that Athanase Seromba did nothing to prevent the demolition of the church. At the time when the church was being destroyed, the witness was with Seromba in front of the church secretariat. He testified that he told Seromba that he was afraid, and that Seromba reassured him by saying that only the Tutsi were targets of these killings.[438]

215. Furthermore, Witness CBK testified that it was Kayishema who gave the order to bring in the bulldozer.[439] The witness alleges that Athanase Seromba was responsible for the destruction of the church, considering the comments that he made to the bulldozer driver.[440] He stated that he saw Seromba watching the killings that continued after the collapse of the church tower.[441]

216. Witness CNJ[442] testified that Athanase Seromba collaborated with the attackers, although he did not give the order to destroy the church.[443] He also referred to the comments that the authorities made in relation to Seromba and the destruction of the church: "Seromba was coming, that was to decide as to whether the church was going to be totally destroyed or whether he had another solution, to enable people to get into the church".[444] He explained that after this conversation, Kayishema went to the rear of the church, close to the presbytery, and returned five minutes later accompanied by Seromba. According to the witness, Seromba approached the bulldozer and greeted the authorities who were standing close to it. The witness explained that Kayishema gave the bulldozer driver the order in the presence of Seromba, to start destroying the church. The witness specified that he was approximately two metres away from the scene. Seromba then said to the driver: "Watch out, make sure the wall doesn't fall on you." He stated that he was standing approximately four metres away from Seromba when Seromba said those words. He testified that these events occurred between 9 a.m. and 10 a.m.[445] The witness finally stated that on 16 April 1994, Seromba moved forward with the authorities to follow the movements of the bulldozers as they were destroying the church.[446]

217. Witness CDL[447] testified that he was witness to a discussion between the bourgmestre and Athanase Seromba in the morning of 16 April 1994, towards 7.30 a.m. He explained that after the discussion, the bourgmestre held conversations with other commune authorities, including Ndungutse, Habiyambere, Kayishema and police officers and reservists. He further explained that various authorities took the decision to use bulldozers to destroy the church, and that, subsequently, these authorities went to see Seromba who was standing in front of the secretariat and told him that they no longer had any means, other than the bulldozers, to destroy the church, so as to reach the refugees. Seromba then said to them: "If you have no other means, bring the bulldozers then, and destroy the church." The witness stated that he was not far from the place where Seromba said those words.[448] He explained that the decision to destroy the church had been taken by these authorities and that Seromba accepted the decision.[449]

218. Witness CDL further testified that Athanase Seromba advised bulldozer drivers to start demolishing the church from the side of the sacristy.[450] The witness also reported the following: "As I have already said, he was showing the fragile or weak part that one needed to start in order to kill the Tutsis, and he was talking – they were talking with the father. Nothing was done without his consent. At least, he did not show any desire to come to the assistance of the refugees in question".[451]

219. Witness CBR[452] testified that on 16 April 1994 he saw Ndahimana, Kayishema, Kanyarukiga, Ndungutse, Habiyambere and Murangwabugabo, enter the courtyard of the presbytery and emerge from there several moments later in the company of Athanase Seromba.[453] The witness stated that Athanase Seromba was not the one leading the attackers on 16 April 1994, adding that: "[b]efore the authorities gave us any instructions, whatsoever, they had to discuss with the pastor. I couldn't tell you what they were saying because they were on one side. So our authorities, the leaders, before they gave us any instructions, they had to speak with the father, be it on the 15th or the 16th. Before we did anything whatsoever, the authorities had to speak with the father."[454]

Defence witnesses

220. Witness FE32, the bulldozer driver who demolished the Nyange church,[455] testified that Védaste Murangwabugabo and Anastase Rushema led the operations on 16 April 1994. He stated that it was Kayishema, and not Athanase Seromba, who forced him to demolish the church. He explained that he reiterated to Rushema on three occasions that it was forbidden to destroy a church. The witness explained that went ahead to demolish the church after having been threatened with death. He testified that when he had started destroying the church, Seromba actually ran up to complain to Rushema, saying: "I forbad you yesterday to kill people here and you have just demolished the church." The witness stated that he did not see Seromba again during the destruction of the church. According to him, Seromba was powerless in the face of such a situation.[456] The witness also mentioned that he was not informed of any meeting during which the decision to bring the bulldozers was taken, adding, finally, that he was a "mere driver", and could not be aware of the holding of any such meeting.[457]

221. Witness BZ1, a Hutu,[458] stated that he never saw Athanase Seromba from the moment when the attacks were perpetrated at the church up until the collapse of the bell tower.[459] He stated that he saw Seromba for the last time when Seromba said mass on 11 April 1994, and that he no longer saw him thereafter.[460]

222. Furthermore, Witness BZ1 stated that he arrived at the scene when the bulldozer was destroying the bell tower. According to him, the bulldozer had been brought to bury the bodies that were lying there. Subsequently, the objective of bringing the bulldozers was changed; it was, now, to demolish the church.[461] The witness claimed that it was the communal authorities, namely Kayishema, Ndungutse and Ndahimana who sent for a bulldozer on day the church was destroyed.[462] The witness testified to having heard the following: "the people said, '[t]here were people inside the church. We can get to them [sic]. So a decision was made to demolish the church. The order was given to the bulldozer driver to demolish the church'."[463]

223. Furthermore Witness BZ1 denies having joined the group of attackers during the attacks against the Tutsi and the destruction of the church. He testified that he went to the location to attend the tragic events which were occurring there.[464] He stated that he did not see Athanase Seromba on 15 and 16 April 1994.[465]

224. Witness BZ4[466] stated that he arrived at Nyange parish on the morning of 16 April 1994, more specifically at the Nyange commercial centre.[467] He testified that he heard that people held a discussion and thought that the bulldozer could be used for the destruction of the church. The witness further testified that Fulgence Kayishema was cited as the person who had asked the driver, Nteziryayo, to use the bulldozer to destroy the church where the refugees were hiding.[468]

225. Witness BZ4 stated that he saw neither Athanase Seromba nor any other cleric at the scene when the church was being destroyed, and that he never heard that it was Seromba who had ordered the destruction of the church.[469] He added that he left the location after the destruction of the church.[470] He also mentioned that he did not see Seromba on 15 and 16 April 1994.[471]

226. The witness further stated that he arrived at the scene during the morning, but could not give the exact time of his arrival, or that of the bulldozer at the church. The witness, however, added that he was present at the location when the bulldozer arrived.[472] He testified that he travelled to Nyange on the day the church was demolished in order to see how the situation was unfolding, adding that he did not participate in the attacks.[473]

227. Witness CF23[474] stated that the bulldozer was driven by Anastase Nkinamubanzi and other Zaïrois drivers.[475] He stated that Anastase Rushema and Ndungutse were co-ordinating the demolition activities.[476] The witness testified that by the time he arrived at the church its destruction was already underway, adding that he remained there for only a few minutes, before deciding to return home.[477]

228. Witness FE35, a Hutu,[478] testified that he had never heard that Athanase Seromba had met with communal authorities to plan the demolition of the church.[479] The witness further testified that the bulldozer drivers had been requisitioned by Anastase Kayishema, Télesphore Ndungutse and the police officers and that they were working under orders from them.[480] The witness pointed out that the "leaders" of the attackers did not act in concert with Athanase Seromba.[481] In the opinion of Witness FE35, Seromba did not order the destruction of the church and never supported the attackers who destroyed the church. The witness emphasized that Seromba did not play any role in the massacres perpetrated in Nyange[482] and that he never saw him at the church when it was being destroyed.[483]

229. Furthermore, Witness FE35 explained that Kayishema, Anastase Rushema and Ndahimana escorted the bulldozers and were at he scene supervising the destruction of the church.[484]

230. Witness PA1[485] explained that at the time destruction of the church had commenced, the priests, including Athanase Seromba were in the presbytery. He testified that the heard "a very loud noise" and subsequently realized that the church was being destroyed. He further explained that Seromba immediately came out of the presbytery, furious.[486] Witness PA1 finally stated that he did not see Seromba issue any order to destroy the church.[487]

231. Witness NA1[488] testified that on 16 April 1994, towards 8 a.m., he went to the refectory and noticed that there were attackers who had surrounded the church and a tractor that was removing the bodies. The witness also stated that later on, he heard a noise and saw dust rising. At that moment, curious to know what was going on, the priests went up to the upper floor. The witness added that the priests observed the destruction of the church without making any comments.[489]

232. Furthermore, Witness NA1 testified that the clergymen subsequently approached the gendarmes to ask them to salvage the situation. The gendarmes responded that they were not in sufficient numbers to confront the attackers and that they had no orders to shoot at people.[490]

7.4.2. Findings of the Chamber

233. The Trial Chamber considers Witness CBJ credible[491] on the point under discussion. In fact, there is no contradiction between his testimony and his prior statement. Furthermore, in his statement made before the Rwandan judicial authorities on 24 June 1997, the witness accused Anastase Rushema, but made no allusion either to Athanase Seromba or to the destruction of the church in an in-depth manner, merely stating that Seromba collaborated with Rushema in the attacks of 15 and 16 April 1994.[492] In another statement made before the Rwandan judicial authorities on 25 March 1997, Witness CBJ, in response to the question as to who perpetrated the killings and destroyed the church, stated that "Abbot Seromba … also played a role".[493]

234. The Chamber considers that Witness CBJ is also credible as to two alleged events namely that Seromba and other persons held a meeting on 16 April 1994 and that Seromba handed an object to the bulldozer driver. The Chamber, however, considers his testimony on the remarks Seromba made to the bulldozer driver not to be reliable, because of his location at the time the remarks were made. In fact, the Chamber finds that from the church tower, it was physically impossible to hear the conversation between Seromba and the bulldozer driver at the parish secretariat, given the distance separating the two locations.[494]

[494] Investigator Rémy Sahiri stated that the distance separating the presbytery from the principal entrance to the Nyange church was 48 metres (Transcript, 27 September 2004, p. 12, open session). Although Witness Rémy Sahiri did not specify the distance between the secretariat and the church, the Trial Chamber is of the view, on the basis of Prosecution Exhibit P-

235. The Chamber finds Witness CBK credible, notwithstanding a discrepancy between his 15 August 2000 statement and his in-court testimony on the identity of the bulldozer driver. In fact, Witness CBK testified that the bulldozer was driven by Anastase.[495] However, when challenged by Counsel for the Defence on his 15 August 2000 statement wherein he alleged that Flambeau, a Zaïrois, was the "bulldozer driver",[496] the witness responded that he actually meant to say that "Flambeau oversaw the road construction", and that "it was Anastase who drove the bulldozer".[497] In the Chamber's view, the discrepancy concerning the identity of the victims does not discredit the evidence of the witness, particularly in the light of the testimonies of Witnesses FE32 and CF23 who referred to the presence of several Zaïrois drivers[498] and, more specifically, the testimony of Witness FE32 that he was replaced by another driver during the destruction of the church.[499] Finally, with respect to the allegations by the witness concerning Athanase Seromba, the witness consistently referred to Anastase as being the bulldozer driver.

236. The Chamber also considers Witness CBK to be credible as regards a meeting allegedly held on the morning of 16 April 1994 and attended by Athanase Seromba and other persons. During that meeting, Kayishema allegedly said that it was necessary to destroy the church tower in order to kill Tutsi intellectuals hiding inside. The Chamber also finds the witness credible with respect to the conversation between the bulldozer driver and Seromba in the course of which the driver asked Seromba three times whether he should destroy the church. Seromba allegedly responded in the affirmative. The testimony of the witness is plausible, given that he was very close to the persons in question when these events occurred.

237. The Trial Chamber considers that Witness CNJ is not credible. In fact, during cross-examination, Counsel for the Defence pointed out that in four different prior statements Witness CNJ declared that he arrived after the demolition of the church had begun. The witness provided no convincing explanation for these contradictions, merely claiming that the statements were occasionally false, occasionally incomplete or drafted under duress or with a view to financial compensation.[500]

238. The Chamber considers Witness CDL to be credible. In fact, it notes that there are no inconsistencies in his testimony. Furthermore, the Chamber has no doubt about the witness's presence at the discussions that he referred to in his testimony. The Chamber further notes that Counsel for the Defence raised only one omission – a trivial discrepancy between CDL's testimony and the letter he wrote to the Rwandan authorities on 16 April 1999.[501] Thus, Counsel for the Defence pointed out to the witness that in that letter, the witness made no mention of the fact that the bourgmestre had met with Athanase Seromba before giving the signal of the attacks. The witness responded that he did not provide all particulars in his prior statements, as he did not deem it necessary at the time.[502] In this same statement (letter), the witness however stated the following: "At about ten o'clock, the bourgmestre, the IPJ and the gendarmes agreed with Seromba to demolish the church".[503]

02, representing a layout of the premises, that the distance separating the secretariat from the church is approximately the same as that extending from the presbytery to the entrance to the parish.

239. The Chamber considers that Witness CDL is also credible as to two other alleged events: first, the meeting held by Athanase Seromba, Kayishema, Ndahimana, Kanyarukiga, Habarugira and other persons, during which Seromba approved the decision to destroy the church, saying: "If you have no other means of doing it, bring these bulldozers and destroy the church", and secondly, the advice that Seromba gave to the drivers concerning the fragile side of the church.

240. The Chamber finds that Witness CBR is credible. Defence Counsel raised two points during cross-examination which are insufficient to impugn the credibility of the witness because of the explanations that he subsequently provided. More particularly, Defence Counsel challenged Witness CBR on the statement he made on 29 August 2000 in which he declared as follows: "After noticing that the attacks launched by the bourgmestre were not sufficiently efficient, the group with the bourgmestre went towards the presbytery to meet with Father Seromba: Ndahimana, Muraginabugabo, Kayishema, Ndungutse, Habarigira, Kanyarukiga, Habyambere."[504] Defence Counsel then put to the witness that he had previously stated that he saw Seromba only once on 16 April 1994. The witness explained that on 16 April 1994, the persons whose names he mentioned went to the presbytery and upon their return from there, they started shooting at the church.[505]

241. Counsel for the Defence then read out another part of Witness CBR's statement of 29 August 2000 wherein he stated as follows: "After the entire church had collapsed the authorities held a meeting with Father Seromba, after which I heard him ordering the removal of the rubbish in front of his house – by "rubbish", he meant the bodies of the refugees."[506] Defence Counsel then asked Witness CBR whether this statement did not mean that he saw Seromba after the church had been destroyed. The witness answered in the negative.[507] He stated that he saw Seromba on the morning of 16 April 1994 and did not see him thereafter. The witness recalled having returned home after the collapse of the church. He averred that Seromba uttered these remarks on "getting rid of the rubbish" on 15 April 1994 and that the meeting was held on 15 April 1994 and not 16 April 1994. Witness CBR claimed that there was a confusion of dates in the transcription of his statement made in Kinyarwanda.[508]

242. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber considers that Witness CBR is also credible with respect to another event: the discussions and meetings between Athanase Seromba and the authorities on 16 April 1994.

243. The Chamber finds that Defence Witness FE32 is not credible as to the events of 16 April 1994, due to the numerous contradictions in his testimony and prior statements on the one hand, as well as between his testimony and his prior statements on the other hand. Here, the Chamber will mention only the most serious contradictions.

244. In the African Rights Information Bulletin N°2, Witness FE32 stated:

> "Father Seromba who was in favour of that solution said the following: 'They should be destroyed so that we can get rid of the enemy. When the enemy was no longer there we can build another'.
> Anastase refused to bulldoze the church but he said Seromba made him afraid. Father Seromba said the following: 'There are many Christians abroad. That church - this church will be rebuilt in three days'."[509]

245. Witness FE32 asserted that these statements were untrue, insisting that the Rwandan authorities refuse to admit that he was forced to bulldoze the church.[510]

246. In a statement to Rwandan authorities on 27 August 1996, Witness FE32 stated as follows:

> "They ordered me to destroy this church, and let me add that the priest of this parish, by the name Seromba, was there, and he said nothing with regard to the demolition of the church. I carried out the orders in order to save my life. Apart from those soldiers, IPJ Kayishema, as well as the priest of the said parish, Seromba – no one else was on the spot. I performed that duty over a three day period and he was watching over me so as to prevent me from escaping – they were watching so as to prevent me from escaping".[511]

247. Witness FE32 specified that he made this statement under duress to "save my skin".[512]

248. In a statement to Rwandan authorities on 19 April 1995, Witness FE32 identified "Seromba the parish priest of Nyange parish" as one of his collaborators. He stated that Athanase Seromba was present when Kayishema, the bourgmestre, and the presiding judge of the canton tribunal ordered him to bring in the bulldozer.[513] The witness did not contest the validity of this document and the information contained therein, except the entries related to Seromba. He explained that he made this statement under duress.[514]

249. In a statement to Rwandan authorities on 22 July 1997, Witness FE32 stated as follows: "When I asked Kayishema what was going to happen now that people had been killed in that church, that he went to rear courtyard of the presbyterian with Father Seromba: The priest asked me to destroy the church and added that they were going to build another one. I put the following question to him, 'Are we going to destroy the house of God?' And he replied, 'Destroy it. We will build another one'."[515] Witness FE32 explained that he made this statement "in order to please some people who wanted me to implicate Father Seromba".[516]

250. In a statement made to Tribunal investigators on 27 July 2000, Witness FE32 stated that he initially refused to demolish the church, that the authorities then went to the presbytery and returned accompanied by Athanase Seromba, who directly addressed him in the following terms: "It has been decided that indeed has to be destroyed. We shall build another one."[517] Commenting on this excerpt, Witness FE32 explained that the Tribunal investigators had their own objectives in relying solely on statements made to the Rwandan authorities which, he claimed, were obtained under duress.[518] Another excerpt from this statement was read to the witness, wherein the witness stated that after having demolished the right wall near the bell tower, Seromba approached him and said: "Destroy all those walls. Nothing must be left standing."[519]

251. Witness FE32 admitted to having signed the statement, but stated that Tribunal investigators did not first read it back to him and made that the interpreters were not trustworthy.[520] The statement the witness made to Tribunal investigators on 4 April 2002, which included his 27 July 2000 statement, was shown to him. The 4 April 2002 statement indicated that the 27 July 2000 statement of the witness was read back to him and that he made no changes to it.[521] The witness explained that Tribunal investigators had forced him to sign the statement and refused to allow him to make the slightest change.[522] A confirmation of his 4 April 2002 statement dated 11 February 2003,[523] which indicated that the investigators had read back to him his 4 April 2002 statement, to which he made a change which was recorded in the final version, was shown to him. This is acknowledged by the witness.[524] The Chamber notes that this negates the witness' allegations that Tribunal investigators refused to make any amendments to his statements.

252. In his letter to the Supreme Court of Rwanda, written on 7 November 2001,[525] Witness FE32 stated as follows:

> "The truth admitted before the court in which I still stand by up to today, is that I demolished the church with a bulldozer in execution of the order issued by the commune and church leaders at the time."[526]
> "On the 15th April 1994, they had me and my friend Everiste Ntahokiriye – Kigali, Byumba brought in order to destroy the church but we refused. Immediately they killed him, my friend, on the spot. Having witnessed that, I felt weak and carried out their orders. They just had Father Seromba brought in, and later informed us that that was the decision that had been taken."[527]
> "The Court did not pay any attention to the statements made by the Prosecution witness who testified that he saw IPJ, Kayishema, when he brought me and forced me to demolish the church. I refused to comply until the arrival of Father Seromba. After that the church was destroyed."[528]

253. The witness refused to comment on this letter, merely insisting that his request had been rejected by the Supreme Court of Rwanda.[529] He then stated that he wrote this letter with the assistance of another person, but that an error had slipped into it.[530]

254. Witness FE32 was unable to provide explanations as to the numerous contradictions between his testimony before the Chamber and the remarks he made before African Rights, on the one hand, and Rwandan authorities and Tribunal investigators on the other, over a period of 10 years. Nor could he provide any explanation for the contradictions which are still to be found in his letter to the Supreme Court of Rwanda.

255. With respect to Defence claims that the witness acted under duress, the Chamber recalls that it is up to the Defence to adduce evidence of duress.[531] In the present case, the Chamber considers that the Defence has not adduced any evidence to show that the prior statements of Witness FE32 were obtained under duress. The Chamber notes that the witness was inconsistent in his explanations on the occasions when he did not refuse to provide one. Furthermore, the Chamber notes that the witness had never previously stated that he had been tortured or that he gave any statements under duress, either before Tribunal investigators or those of the Defence. Finally, the Chamber notes that in the course of his testimony, in response to a question from the Prosecution concerning the letter he sent to the Supreme Court of Rwanda, the witness stated: "Why does the Prosecutor continue to rely on this document? In my opinion – in my opinion this document has no value. You are coercing me – you are bringing pressure to bear on me. Just like when you appear before Rwandan courts, I believe there is also the form of coercion."[532] In view of the numerous contradictions in this witness' statements, the Trial Chamber holds that the excerpt is insufficient to establish that he may have suffered any form of duress.

256. The Chamber also notes that Witness FE32 appears to be a witness seeking to exculpate Athanase Seromba. Thus, to justify his decision to testify as a Defence witness and not as a Prosecution witness, as previously envisaged, Witness FE32 stated: "[...] Life is short on earth. And I didn't want to be on bad terms with my God."[533]

257. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber finds that the testimony of Witness FE32 concerning the events which occurred on 16 April 1994 is not credible.

258. The Chamber finds that Witness BZ1's evidence is not conclusive. He expressed himself in general terms, and his claim that he did not see Athanase Seromba on 15 and 16 April 1994 is insufficient to establish that Seromba was not present at the scenes of the events. Indeed, it is even possible that the witness did not see Seromba in the huge crowd at the church. Incidentally, the witness only arrived on site after the demolition of the church had begun. Finally, Witness BZ1's testimony about the persons who brought the bulldozer constitutes hearsay and, as such, is of little probative value.

259. The Chamber finds that the testimony of Witness BZ4 is not conclusive. In fact, the witness expressed himself in general terms, and his testimony lacks precision with respect to the sequence of the events. For instance, he was unable to give the exact time of his arrival or the arrival of the bulldozer at the church on 16 April 1994.[534] The assertion that he did not see Athanase Seromba on 15 or 16 April 1994 is insufficient to establish that Seromba was not present at the scene of the events. Indeed, it is even well possible that the witness did not spot Seromba in the huge crowd which had gathered at the church.[535] Finally, Witness BZ4's assertions about the persons who brought the bulldozer constitute hearsay and, as such, have little probative value.

260. The Chamber considers that Witness CF23 is not credible. The Chamber notes that when this witness arrived in the vicinity of the church, the destruction of the church was already underway. Consequently, the Chamber attaches no weight to his testimony concerning the events which occurred on 16 April 1994 at Nyange church.

261. The Chamber finds that the testimony of Witness FE35 is not credible. The Chamber notes that the witness expressed himself in general terms, and that there were many inconsistencies between his testimony and prior statements.[536]

262. The Trial Chamber finds that Witness PA1 is not credible. The Chamber notes that his testimony and prior statements as to the events of 16 April 1994 contain many contradictions. For example, in his statement to the Defence on 27 January 2005,[537] the witness did not mention the fact that Athanase Seromba was furious when he left the presbytery, whereas he made this assertion in his testimony.[538] The Prosecution read out to the witness an excerpt from his 27 January 2005 statement where the witness stated that the priests did not dare to approach the attackers.[539] The Prosecutor pointed out that this contradicted the testimony of the witness, who nevertheless asserted that Seromba went outside. To justify this omission, the witness merely stated that it was nothing more than an involuntary memory lapse,[540] adding that in the phrase "we did not dare approach", there is no reference to any particular moment, but was merely trying to describe the situation that prevailed. The witness, once again, referred to the powerlessness of the priests in the face of such a situation. He reiterated that Seromba emerged from the presbytery expressing his anger and incomprehension.[541]

263. Witness PA1 was also examined as to the content of his 8 October 2003 statement. Counsel for the Prosecution read out the following excerpt to the witness: "Question: 'What did the attackers do?' Answer: 'They entered the house of the priest and they asked Seromba why he kept me by his side. For they considered me to be a Tutsi because of my appearance but Seromba replied to them that I was a Hutu.'"[542] The witness confirmed that the content of the excerpt corresponded to what he had said before the Chamber.[543] Counsel for the Prosecution read out a second excerpt to the witness: "Each time the authorities came to the presbytery to find out the attitude to adopt in the face of these problems."[544] The witness stated that that statement was false.[545] Counsel read out a third excerpt to the witness: "Question: 'Are you in a position to confirm that those people never came to the presbytery without your knowledge?' Answer: 'It is possible that they came without my knowledge since I was hiding and I was not always outside the room to see what was happening.'"…[546] The witness stated that this was a summary of what he said and that his intention was to explain to the investigators that "It is as if we were linked by some umbrical cord. I wasn't really with him all times".[547] Counsel for the Prosecution read out a fourth excerpt to the witness: "Question: 'Was the bourgmestre physically present during the trench digging?' Answer: 'I do not know, since I did not see the machine. As far as I am concerned, I remained shut up in my room."'[548] The witness declared the statement to be false.[549] The Trial Chamber considers all of the witness' explanations to be implausible.

264. Finally, the Chamber notes that Witness PA1 admitted that he did not go out with Athanase Seromba and was not in direct contact with him at that time. Therefore, he could not have heard the remarks that Seromba made outside the presbytery at the time the church was being destroyed.[550]

265. The Chamber finds that Witness NA1 is not credible. His account of the events of 16 April 1994 contains many contradictions. For instance, in his 9 December 1996 statement, the witness stated: "It is Seromba who played a role in the killings. However, I do not accuse him of any particular offence, but I saw him moving about with the authorities."[551] Commenting on this portion of his statement, Witness NA1 merely stated that his answers were being oriented towards a particular goal and that, in any event, the Rwandan authorities wrote down whatever they wanted. He added that at the time he made this statement, he wanted to save his skin and that it was important not to forget the context in Rwanda in 1996.[552]

266. The Chamber notes contradictions in Witness NA1's testimony as to the order to bring in the bulldozer. In the course of his in-court testimony, the witness testified that Athanase Seromba never asked "people" to collect the bodies. The witness claimed to have learned that the bulldozer was there, and that the bourgmestre had said that he was going to send in a bulldozer to remove the bodies.[553] The Prosecutor challenged the witness on his 9 December 1996 statement in which he mentioned that the following day, Seromba asked people to collect the bodies, but that they refused, and that it was at that time that bourgmestre Ndahimana and Seromba ordered that a bulldozer be brought in to remove the bodies.[554] The witness responded that this statement should be understood in the context within which his trial was conducted. He furthermore stated that the document was poorly punctuated and that this shows that the person who examined him did so with a specific aim in mind.[555] The witness stated: "[…] Father Seromba asked the people to collect the bodies, but they refused. Bourgmestre Grégoire decided to bring in the bulldozer to evacuate the bodies. When I speak of Grégoire, they always insert Seromba because they wanted me to accuse Seromba".[556] The witness explained that he had actually stated that they asked Seromba to go and see the bourgmestre, but that he was not personally present when the decision to remove the bodies was being taken.[557]

267. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Athanase Seromba personally gave the order to destroy the church.

268. The Chamber, however, finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Athanase Seromba was informed by the authorities of their decision to destroy the church and that he accepted the decision.

269. The Chamber also finds that the Prosecution has established beyond a reasonable doubt that Athanase Seromba said such words to bulldozer driver FE32 as would encourage him to destroy the church. The Chamber notes that when bulldozer driver FE32 received the order from the authorities to destroy the church, he asked Seromba whether he should destroy the church. Seromba answered in the affirmative, assuring to the witness that Hutu would be able to build it again. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber finds that Seromba gave advice to the bulldozer drivers concerning the fragile side of the church.

7.5. Destruction of Nyange church using the bulldozer thus causing the death of at least 1,500 persons

7.5.1. The evidence

Prosecution witnesses

270. Witness CBR[558] testified that the destruction of Nyange church began at about 10 a.m. on 16 April 1994. He explained that the walls were demolished first, and that the tower eventually collapsed at about 5 p.m.[559]

271. Witness CBJ[560] testified that he was in the church tower on 16 April 1994. The witness also claimed that demolition of the church began at about 3 p.m. and lasted three hours.[561] He estimated the number of persons who perished in the demolition at more than 1,500.[562]

272. Witness CBK[563] testified that he was in front of the secretariat when the church was being destroyed. He claimed that its destruction began at about 10 a.m. and that the tower was the last part of the building to collapse.[564]

273. Witness CDL[565] testified that he was on the site when the church was being destroyed. He claimed that he saw two bulldozers destroy the church and the tower at about 10 a.m. He also alleged that on 15 April 1994, there were between 1,500 and 2,000 refugees gathered in the parish[566] and estimated that approximately 1,500 persons were killed in the destruction of Nyange church.[567]

274. Witness CBI[568] estimated that approximately 2,000 refugees were at the church when he arrived there, adding that this number rose to 5,000 persons.[569]

275. Witness CBS[570] testified that when he arrived at Nyange church on 12 April 1994, there were approximately 2,000 persons on the site.[571]

276. Witness CNJ[572] estimated the number of persons killed at approximately 2,000.[573] He explained that between 15[574] and 16[575] April 1994 nearly 2,000 Tutsi were killed.[576]

277. Witness CBN[577] estimated the number of Tutsi refugees gathered at the church on 15 April 1994 to be 2,000.[578]

Defence witnesses

278. Witness FE32[579] testified that the destruction of the church began at about 10.30 a.m. on 16 April 1994 and ended at about 3 p.m. or 4 p.m.[580] He explained that there were no refugee survivors of the destruction of the church,[581] and that there were "fewer than" 2,000 persons inside the church at the time of its destruction.[582]

279. Witness BZ1[583] testified to having seen the bulldozer demolish the church and the bell tower. The witness added that the destruction of the church lasted between three and five hours and that the bell tower collapsed at about 3 p.m.[584] He also claimed that following the collapse of the bell tower, he left the site, adding that he did not see "any other refugees on the site".[585]

280. Witness BZ8[586] testified that in April 1994, he was living in Kivumu commune.[587] The witness claimed that he watched the destruction of the church from a distance. He explained that the machine arrived and began to destroy the rear walls of the church.[588] He further explained that the entire church building did not collapse immediately and that the bell tower was only destroyed the following day.[589] Finally, he stated that he was not sure about the dates.[590]

281. Witness FE35[591] testified that part of the wall of the church building was destroyed first, followed by the other part. He added that the bell tower collapsed at about noon.[592]

7.5.2. Findings of the Chamber

282. The Chamber notes that Witness Rémy Sahiri, an investigator with the Office of the Prosecutor,[593] prepared a report titled Rapport préliminaire d'identification des sites du génocide et des massacres d'avril-juillet 1994 au Rwanda [Preliminary report identifying the sites of Genocide and Massacres in April-July 1994 in Rwanda]. In the report, he stated that Nyange church was destroyed.[594] He also submitted to the Chamber an album of photographs showing the location of Nyange parish and the ruins of the former church.[595]

283. The Chamber finds both Prosecution and Defence witnesses to be credible. In fact, all of them gave consistent evidence with respect to the fact that Nyange church was destroyed on 16 April 1994, using a bulldozer.

284. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Nyange church was destroyed on 16 April 1994, using a bulldozer.

285. The Chamber further notes that the body of evidence points to the fact that the destruction of the church resulted in the death of many Tutsi refugees who had sought refuge there, with some witnesses estimating the number of victims to be 1,500, while others put it at 2,000. In this regard, the Chamber recalls its findings that Nyange church had a holding capacity of at least 1,500 persons.[596] This leads to the conclusion that on 16 April 1994, the destruction of Nyange church resulted in the death of at least 1,500 refugees who had sought refuge there to flee from the attacks of the assailants.

7.6. The order given by Athanase Seromba to bury the bodies

7.6.1. The evidence

Defence witnesses

286. Witness FE35[597] testified that after the demolition of the church, Athanase Seromba did not hold any meeting in the parish with the communal authorities. He averred that after the destruction of Nyange church, trucks from ASTALDI company buried the bodies of the victims in a mass grave which had been dug in the banana plantation owned by the priests.[598] The witness stated that it was not Seromba who gave the order to bury the bodies. He explained that Kayishema, in the company of Ndahimana, gave the order to the Interahamwe.[599]

287. Witness FE32[600] testified that he buried in a mass grave the bodies of persons killed when the church was destroyed.[601]

288. Witness FE34[602] testified that the graves were dug using a bulldozer which had been brought there for the purpose of burying the bodies of persons killed as a result of the destruction of Nyange church.[603] He asserted that it was the bourgmestre who gave the order to bury the bodies, although he admitted that he did not hear him give the order.[604]

289. Witness FE13[605] testified that a bulldozer that was on the site on 16 April 1994 was used to dig a grave in which the bodies of victims of the destruction of the church were buried.[606]

7.6.2. Findings of the Chamber

290. The Chamber notes that the Prosecution has not produced any evidence in support of the above allegation. The Chamber further notes that no Defence witness gave evidence to the effect that Athanase Seromba gave the order to bury the bodies after the destruction of the church.[607] In fact, the witnesses aver that this order came from the authorities. In the light of the foregoing, the Chamber considers that the Prosecution has not proved this fact beyond a reasonable doubt.

7.7. The meeting between Athanase Seromba and the authorities after the demolition of the church

7.7.1. The evidence

Prosecution witness

291. Witness CBK[608] stated that after the 16 April 1994 massacres, Athanase Seromba, Fulgence Kayishema, Colonel Nzapfakumunsi, Gaspard Kanyarukiga, Grégoire Ndahimana, Anastase Rushema and Télésphore Ndungutse met upstairs in the presbytery building to drink banana beer and wine.[609] The witness added that Seromba was standing on the "upper floor" of the presbytery building and was distributing beer to the attackers who were in the rear courtyard of the presbytery. He testified that there was a party atmosphere on this occasion and that all the persons there were satisfied with the massacre that had just been perpetrated.[610]

Defence witnesses

292. Witness FE32[611] testified that he neither saw Athanase Seromba drink nor rejoice at the destruction of the church, adding that he did not receive any beer from Seromba.[612]

293. Witness PA1[613] testified that it was impossible that Athanase Seromba rewarded those who demolished the church by giving them beer.[614] The witness stated that he did not see anyone come to thank Seromba for the destruction of the church, and considered it as inconceivable: "And the state in which he was, his frame of mind, I don't think anybody could dare approach him [...]."[615] He finally stated that the person who demolished the church did not receive any remuneration.[616]

7.7.2. Findings of the Chamber

294. The Chamber is of the view that the testimony of CBK is not reliable on this point. In fact, he is the only witness who claims that Athanase Seromba rejoiced at the destruction of the church. The Chamber considers that there subsists a reasonable doubt as to the veracity of the account given by Witness CBK.

295. The Chamber finds that Witnesses FE32 and PA1 are not credible. In fact, their testimonies are nothing but a reflection of their personal opinions.

296. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Athanase Seromba celebrated the destruction of the church in the company of other persons.

Chapter III : Legal Findings of the Trial Chamber

297. In setting out its legal findings, the Chamber will rely on the factual findings set forth in Chapter II above.

298. The Indictment contains four counts: genocide, complicity in genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide and crimes against humanity (extermination).

299. The first two counts of the Indictment, that is genocide and complicity in genocide, are alternative counts, whereas Counts 1, 3 and 4 are cumulative. Consequently, the Chamber will consider whether the Prosecution has adduced evidence of the Accused's liability under each of the counts.

1. Mode of participation in the crimes

1.1. The Indictment

300. The Indictment charges the Accused with criminal liability under Article 6 (1) of the Statute which provides as follows: "A person who planned, instigated, ordered, committed or otherwise aided and abetted in the planning, preparation or execution of a crime referred to in Articles 2 to 4 of the present Statute, shall be individually responsible for the crime."

1.2. Applicable law

301. The different modes of participation set forth in Article 6 (1) include a number of acts for which the Accused incurs individual criminal responsibility under the counts charged against him. The different modes of participation in an offence referred to in Article 6 (1) of the Statute are briefly set out below:

302. Participation by "committing" means the direct physical or personal participation of the accused in the perpetration of a crime or the culpable omission of an act that was mandated by a rule of criminal law.[617]

303. Participation by "planning" presupposes that one or several persons contemplate designing the commission of a crime at both the preparatory and execution phases.[618] With respect to this mode of participation, the Prosecution must demonstrate that the level of participation of the accused was substantial[619] and that the planning was a material element in the commission of the crime.[620]

304. Participation by "instigating" implies urging or encouraging another person to commit a crime.[621] Proof of this mode of participation requires the Prosecution to establish that the instigation was a factor element substantially contributing to the conduct of another person committing the crime. It is, however, not mandatory to prove that the crime would not have been committed without the intervention of the accused.[622]

305. Participation by "ordering" presupposes that a person in a position of authority orders another person to commit an offence. This mode of participation implies the existence of a superior-subordinate relationship between the person who gives the order and the one who executes it.[623] A formal superior-subordinate relationship is, however, not required.[624] A superior-subordinate relationship is established by showing a formal or informal hierarchical relationship involving an accused's effective control over the direct perpetrators.[625]

306. The requisite mens rea for the four modes of responsibility referred to above is the direct intent of the perpetrator in relation to his own planning, instigating, or ordering.[626]

307. Participation by "aiding and abetting" refers to any act of assistance or support in the commission of the crime.[627] Such mode of participation may take the form of tangible assistance, or verbal statements. It may also consist in the mere presence of the accused at the scene of the crime, conceptualized in the theory of the "approving spectator".[628] Aiding and abetting must have a substantial effect on the commission of the crime, but does not necessarily constitute an indispensable element, i.e. a conditio sine qua non, of the crime.[629] Except in the case of the "approving spectator", assistance may be provided prior to or during the commission of the crime, and it is not necessary for the person providing assistance to be present during the commission of the crime.[630]

308. In the case of the "approving spectator", the mere presence of the accused at the scene of the crime is insufficient in itself to establish that he has aided and abetted the commission of the crime, unless it is shown to have a significant legitimizing or encouraging effect on the actions of the principal offender.[631] The criminal responsibility of the "approving spectator" is incurred only where he is actually present at the scene of the crime or, at the very least, in the immediate vicinity of the scene of the crime, such that his presence is interpreted by the principal perpetrator of the crime as an approval of his conduct.[632] The authority of the accused constitutes an important factor in assessing of the impact of the accused's presence.[633]

309. The mens rea of aiding and abetting requires that the accused be aware that his conduct would contribute substantially to the commission of the actus reus of the offence or that the perpetration of the crime would be the possible and foreseeable result of his conduct.[634] The accused must be aware of the essential elements of the crime, including the mens rea of the principal offender. It is not necessary, however, that the accused share the mens rea of the principal offender.[635]

310. The requisite mens rea in the more specific case of the "approving spectator" is for the accused to know that his presence would be seen by the perpetrator of the crime as encouragement or support.[636] The mens rea of the approving spectator may be deduced from the circumstances, and may include prior concomitant behaviour, for instance allowing crimes to go unpunished or providing verbal encouragement to commit such crimes.[637]

1.3. Findings of the Chamber as to the mode of participation of the Accused in the offences charged against him

The mode of participation of the Accused in the offences charged against him

311. On the basis of its factual findings, the Trial Chamber considers that Accused Athanase Seromba can incur criminal responsibility only for his participation by aiding and abetting in the offences for which he may be convicted.

312. The Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not proved beyond reasonable doubt that Seromba planned or committed the massacres of Tutsi refugees.[638] With respect to participation by instigating or by ordering, the Prosecution has not proved that Athanase Seromba had the specific genocidal intent or dolus specialisis to incur liability under these two modes of participation. More specifically, in relation to ordering, the Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not established that Accused Athanase Seromba exercised effective control over the principal perpetrators of the crimes.

Exclusion of the theory of the approving spectator in the present case

313. The Chamber notes in the instant case that, in its Final Trial Brief, the Defence advanced arguments on the theory of the approving spectator.[639] The Chamber, however, notes that neither the Indictment nor the Prosecutor's Pre-Trial Brief refers to the theory of the approving spectator. It therefore deduces that the Prosecutor had no intention of arguing this form of participation in relation to the charges against Accused Athanase Seromba. Consequently, the Chamber will not consider the theory of the approving spectator in its findings.

2. Count 1 – Genocide

2.1. The Indictment

314. In the Indictment, the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda charges Athanase Seromba with genocide, pursuant to Article 2 (3) (a) of the Statute, in that on or between 6 April 1994 and 20 April 1994, in Kivumu commune, Kibuye préfecture, Rwanda, Athanase Seromba was responsible for killing or causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the Tutsi population, committed with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a racial or ethnic group.

2.2. Applicable law

315. Article 2 (2) of the Statute[640] provides that:

> Genocide means any of the following acts committed with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such:
> (a) killing members of the group;
> (b) causing bodily or mental harm to members of the group;
> (c) deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part;
> (d) imposing measures intended to prevent births within the group;
> (e) forcibly transferring children of the group to another group.

316. The constituent elements of the crime of genocide are: first, that one of the acts listed under Article 2 (2) of the Statute was committed; secondly, that this act was committed against a specifically targeted national, ethnic, racial or religious group, as such, and thirdly, that the act was committed with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, the targeted group.

317. In the Indictment, the Prosecutor charges the Accused, inter alia, with acts of killing and causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group. In its analysis in relation to each of these acts, the Chamber will rely on the definition to be found in the relevant jurisprudence. Thus, in Musema, the Trial Chamber defined "killing" as "homicide committed with intent to cause death".[641] With respect to "causing serious bodily or mental harm", the Trial Chamber, in Kayishema, held that the phrase could be construed to include "harm that seriously injures the health, causes disfigurement

[639] Defence Final Brief, pp. 25-28.
[640] The definition of genocide, as given in Article 2 of the Statute of the Tribunal, is culled from Articles 2 and 3 of the Convention for the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide. Rwanda signed this Convention but declared it was not bound by Article 9 of the Convention (on this point see the Legislative Decree of 12 February 1975, Journal Officiel de la République Rwandaise, 1975, p. 230).
[641] Musema, Judgement (TC), 27 January 2000, para. 155.

or causes any serious injury to the external, internal organs or senses".[642] "Serious mental harm" entails more than minor or temporary impairment to mental faculties.[643] It includes, but is not limited to, acts of bodily or mental torture, inhumane or degrading treatment, rape, sexual violence, and persecution.[644] It need not, however, entail permanent or irremediable harm.[645]

318. As for the notion of "members of the group" which represents belonging to a group, case-law considers this from a subjective standpoint, holding that the victim is perceived by the perpetrator of the crime as belonging to the group targeted for destruction.[646] The determination of the targeted group is to be made on a case-by-case basis.[647]

319. Genocide is distinct from other crimes because it requires a special intent: an accused may not be convicted for the crime of genocide unless it is established that he committed one of the acts listed in Article 2 (2) of the Statute with specific intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a particular protected group. The notion "destruction of the group" means "the material destruction of a group either by physical or by biological means, not the destruction of the national, linguistic, religious, cultural or other identity of a particular group".[648] There is no numeric threshold of victims necessary to establish genocide.[649] To establish specific genocidal intent, it is not necessary to prove that the perpetrator intended to achieve the complete annihilation of a group throughout the world,[650] but, at least, to destroy a substantial part thereof.[651]

320. In the light of the Tribunal's jurisprudence, the specific intent of genocide may be inferred from certain facts or indicia, including but not limited to (a) the general context of the perpetration of other culpable acts systematically directed against that same group, whether these acts were committed by the same offender or by others, (b) the scale of atrocities committed, (c) their general nature, (d) their execution in a region or a country, (e) the fact that the victims were deliberately and systematically chosen on account of their membership of a particular group, (f) the exclusion, in this regard, of members of other groups, (g) the political doctrine which gave rise to the acts referred to, (h) the repetition of destructive and discriminatory acts and (i) the perpetration of acts which violate the very foundation of the group or considered as such by their perpetrators.[652]

2.3. Findings of the Chamber

321. Paragraphs 1 to 32 of the Indictment concisely set out the allegations relating to the charge of genocide. The Chamber has already discussed these allegations in Chapter II, Sections 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 under its factual findings.

322. In the light of its factual findings, the Chamber considers that the Prosecution has not proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Athanase Seromba planned, instigated, ordered or committed massacres against Tutsi refugees in Nyange.[653] The Chamber, however, finds that Athanase Seromba, by his words and actions on 12, 14, 15 and 16 April 1994, aided and abetted in the commission of murders and causing serious bodily or mental harm to the Tutsi who had sought refuge in Nyange church during the events covered in the Indictment.

2.3.1. Causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the Tutsi ethnic group

The actus reus in relation to causing serious bodily or mental harm to the refugees in Nyange church

323. With respect to paragraph 12 of the Indictment, the Chamber finds that Athanase Seromba prohibited the refugees from getting food from the banana plantation belonging to the parish and that he ordered gendarmes to shoot at any refugees found there.[654] The Chamber further finds that Seromba refused to celebrate mass for the Tutsi in Nyange church.[655]

324. With respect to paragraphs 13 and 14 of the Indictment, the Chamber finds that on 13 April 1994, at a time when the security situation in Kivumu commune had become precarious, Athanase Seromba turned four Tutsi employees out of the parish, including a certain Patrice, who returned the next day and was killed by attackers after, once again, being turned back from the presbytery.[656]

325. With respect to paragraph 22 of the Indictment, the Chamber finds that Seromba turned out several refugees from the presbytery, including Meriam, who was subsequently killed by the attackers.[657]

326. It is the Chamber's opinion that Seromba's order prohibiting refugees from getting food from the banana plantation, his refusal to celebrate mass in Nyange church, and his decision to expel employees and Tutsi refugees from the parish and the presbytery facilitated the perpetration of acts causing serious mental harm to the Tutsi refugees in Nyange church. Indeed, the Chamber considers that when the Tutsi sought refuge in Nyange church, they were very vulnerable, having previously been the target of numerous attacks.[658] Furthermore, Nyange church, where the refugees had sought refuge and thought they could be protected from the attacks, had been surrounded by militiamen and Interahamwe since 12 April 1994.[659] It would therefore appear that the refugees in Nyange church lived in a constant state of anxiety, inasmuch as they knew that their lives, and those of relatives were under constant threat. The Chamber is convinced that by adopting such a line of conduct, Seromba contributed substantially to the commission of acts causing serious mental harm to Tutsi refugees in Nyange church.

327. The Chamber also finds that the order by Athanase Seromba prohibiting refugees from getting food from the banana plantation facilitated the perpetration of acts causing serious bodily harm to the refugees. Indeed, on 14 April 1994, the refugees lacked food and had very limited access to basic foodstuffs from the outside, due to the encirclement of the church. Under such circumstances, Seromba's refusal to allow the refugees to get food from the banana plantation substantially contributed to their physical weakening, as they were deprived of food. The Chamber is satisfied that by his conduct, Seromba substantially contributed towards the commission of acts causing serious bodily harm to the Tutsi refugees in Nyange church.

328. In the light of the foregoing, the Chamber finds that the actus reus of the assistance provided by the Accused in the commission of acts causing serious bodily or mental harm to refugees in Nyange church has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

The mens rea of Accused Athanase Seromba in relation to causing serious bodily or mental harm to refugees in Nyange church

329. The Chamber is convinced that Athanase Seromba could not have been unaware that his prohibition of refugees from getting food from the banana plantation, his refusal to celebrate mass for them and the expulsion of employees and Tutsi refugees would certainly have a negative impact on the morale of the refugees who were faced with an extremely difficult situation related to the persecutions which they had been suffering during the events of April 1994.

330. The Chamber is also satisfied that Athanase Seromba knew that the refugees lacked food.[660] The Chamber therefore considers that he was fully aware that his refusal to allow the refugees to get food from the banana plantation would substantially contribute towards weakening them physically.

331. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber is satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond a reasonable doubt the mens rea of the Accused's assistance in the commission of acts causing serious bodily or mental harm to the refugees in Nyange church.

2.3.2. Killing members of the Tutsi group

The actus reus in relation to the killing of Tutsi refugees in Nyange church

332. With respect to paragraphs 13, 14 and 22 of the Indictment, discussed earlier, the Chamber found that Athanase Seromba turned employees and Tutsi refugees out of Nyange parish.[661] It is the Chamber's opinion that, by so acting, Seromba assisted in the killing of several Tutsi refugees, including Patrice and Meriam.

333. With respect to paragraphs 24 and 25 of the Indictment, the Chamber finds that on 15 April 1994, Athanase Seromba requested assailants, who were getting ready to attack the Tutsi refugees gathered in the presbytery courtyard, to stop the killings and collect the bodies that were strewn throughout the church yard. The Chamber also finds that the attacks against Tutsi refugees resumed after the bodies had been removed.[662] However, the Chamber finds that it has not been proved beyond reasonable doubt that this request constitutes aiding or abetting in the killing of Tutsi refugees.

334. With respect to paragraphs 26 and 27 of the Indictment, the Chamber finds that Athanase Seromba held discussions with the communal authorities and accepted their decision to destroy the church. The Chamber also concludes that Seromba spoke with the bulldozer driver and said certain words to him which encouraged him to destroy the church. Lastly, the Chamber finds that Seromba even gave advice to the bulldozer driver as to the fragile side of the church building.[663] The Chamber is satisfied that by adopting such a line of conduct, Seromba substantially contributed to the destruction of the Nyange church, causing the death of more than 1,500 Tutsi refugees.

335. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber is satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the Accused had committed the actus reus of aiding and abetting killing of refugees in Nyange church.

The mens rea of Accused Athanase Seromba in relation to the killing of Tutsi refugees in Nyange church

[660] See Chapter II, Section 5.3.
[661] See Chapter II, Sections 5.5 and 6.8.
[662] See Chapter II, Section 6.7.
[663] See Chapter II, Section 7.4.

336. The Chamber is satisfied that, given the security situation which prevailed in Nyange parish, Athanase Seromba could not have been unaware that by turning refugees out of the presbytery, he was substantially contributing to their being killed by the attackers.

337. Furthermore, the Chamber is of the view that Athanase Seromba could not have been unaware of the legitimising effect that his words would have on the actions of the communal authorities and the bulldozer driver. The Chamber is also of the view that Seromba knew perfectly well that his approval of the decision by the authorities to destroy Nyange church and his words of encouragement to the bulldozer driver would contribute substantially towards the destruction of the church and the death of the numerous refugees trapped inside.

338. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber is satisfied that the mens rea of the Accused in aiding and abetting the killing of refugees in Nyange church has been proved beyond reasonable doubt.

2.3.3. The constituent elements of genocide

339. The Chamber considers as established that the Tutsi constituted an ethnic group in Kivumu commune at the time of the events referred to in the Indictment[664] and that they were therefore a protected group within the meaning of Article 2 (2).

340. The Chamber also considers that it is beyond dispute that during the events of April 1994 in Nyange church, the attackers and other Interahamwe militiamen committed murders of Tutsi refugees in Nyange church and caused serious bodily or mental harm to them on ethnic grounds, with the intent to destroy them, in whole or in part, as an ethnic group.

341. The Chamber finds that, in his capacity as the priest in charge of Nyange parish during the events of April 1994, and given the situation which prevailed throughout Rwanda, the attacks he personally witnessed[665] and the words he heard or uttered,[666] Accused Athanase Seromba could not have been unaware of the intention of the attackers and other Interahamwe militiamen to commit acts of genocide against Tutsi refugees in Nyange parish.

342. Consequently, the Chamber finds it established that Accused Athanase Seromba aided and abetted the crime of genocide as alleged in Count 1 of the Indictment.

3. Count 2 – Complicity in genocide

343. Count 2 is alternative to Count 1 of the Indictment.[667] Hence, having already found the Accused guilty of genocide under Count 1 of the Indictment, the Chamber will not consider the count of complicity in genocide and therefore dismisses it.

4. Count 3 – Conspiracy to commit genocide

4.1. The Indictment

344. The Prosecutor of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda charges Athanase Seromba with conspiracy to commit genocide pursuant to Article 2 (3) (b) of the Statute, in that on or between 6 and 20 April 1994, in Kivumu préfecture, Rwanda, Seromba did agree with Grégoire Ndahimana, bourgmestre of Kivumu commune, Fulgence Kayishema, police inspector of Kivumu commune, Télesphore Ndungutse, Gaspard Kanyarukiga and other persons not known to the Prosecutor, to kill or to cause serious bodily or mental harm to members of the Tutsi population with the intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a racial or ethnic group.

4.2. Applicable law

345. The Chamber relies on the Tribunal's jurisprudence which defines conspiracy to commit genocide as "an agreement between two or more persons to commit the crime of genocide".[668] Thus, the essential element of the crime of conspiracy to commit genocide is "the act of conspiracy itself, in other words, the process ("procédé") of conspiracy […] and not its result".[669]

346. The Chamber also notes that in Nahimana, the Appeals Chamber held that conspiracy to commit genocide can be inferred from coordinated actions of individuals who have a common purpose and are acting within a unified framework.[670] Also in Niyitegeka, the Chamber inferred the existence of conspiracy to commit genocide from the participation by the Accused in meetings held for the purpose of planning the massacre of Tutsi, his words and the leadership he exercised during those meetings, his involvement in the planning of attacks against the Tutsi and his role in the distribution of weapons to the attackers.[671]

347. The mens rea of the crime of conspiracy to commit genocide is the same as the intent required for the crime of genocide, and rests on the specific intent to commit genocide.[672]

4.3. Findings of the Chamber

348. Paragraphs 33 to 47 of the Indictment set forth concise allegations relating to the count of conspiracy to commit genocide. The Chamber discussed the allegations mainly in sections 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 of Chapter II dealing with its factual findings. This part of the Indictment describes the three-phase plan, drawn up for the extermination of the Tutsi in Kivumu commune. This part also alleges that Athanase Seromba prepared a list of Tutsi to be sought, that he prohibited the refugees from getting food from the presbytery or banana plantation, refused to celebrate mass and that he supervised the massacre of refugees.

349. The Trial Chamber held in its factual findings that the Prosecution has not established beyond a reasonable doubt that Athanase Seromba participated in meetings with the communal authorities on 11[673] and 12 April 1994.[674] The Chamber also found that it has not been established beyond a reasonable doubt that Accused Seromba held meetings with the communal authorities on 10,[675] 15[676] and 16[677] April 1994 for the purpose of planning the extermination of Tutsi refugees in Nyange parish.

350. Furthermore, the Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not established beyond a reasonable doubt that Athanase Seromba prepared a list of Tutsi sought after,[678] or that he ordered or supervised the attack against the refugees on 15 April 1994[679] or that he ordered the destruction of Nyange church on 16 April 1994.[680] As regards the facts established against Seromba, such as prohibiting the refugees from getting food from the banana plantation, or refusing to celebrate mass, the Chamber is of the view that these facts, in and of themselves, are not sufficient to establish the existence of a conspiracy to commit genocide.

351. Consequently, the Chamber finds that the Prosecution thus has not proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Athanase Seromba conspired with other persons to commit genocide as alleged in Count 3 of the Indictment.

5. Count 4 – Crime against humanity (extermination)

5.1. The Indictment

352. The Prosecutor of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda charges Athanase Seromba with Extermination as a crime against humanity, as stipulated in Article 3 (b) of the Statute, in that on or between the dates of 7 April 1994 and 20 April 1994, in Kibuye préfecture, Rwanda, Athanase Seromba was responsible for killing persons or causing persons to be killed during mass killing events as part of a widespread or systematic attack against the civilian population on political, ethnic or racial grounds.

5.2. Applicable law

353. Article 3 of the Statute provides that:

> The International Tribunal for Rwanda shall have the power to prosecute persons responsible for the following crimes when committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack against any civilian population on national, political, ethnic, racial or religious grounds:
> (a) Murder;
> (b) Extermination;
> (c) Enslavement;
> (d) Deportation;
> (e) Imprisonment;
> (f) Torture;
> (g) Rape;
> (h) Persecutions on political, racial and religious grounds;
> (i) Other inhumane acts.

354. Article 3 of the Statute, which deals with crimes against humanity, contains a general element that is applicable to all the acts listed therein: perpetration of any of those acts by an accused will constitute a crime against humanity only if it was committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack against any civilian population on national, political, ethnic, racial or religious grounds.

355. The concept of attack, within the meaning of Article 3, refers to any unlawful act, or event or series of events, of the kind listed in Article 3 of the Statute.[681]

356. This attack must be widespread or systematic.[682] In practice, these two criteria tend to overlap.[683] "Widespread" may be defined as massive, frequent, large scale action, carried out

[681] Semanza, Judgement (TC), 15 May 2003, para. 327; Musema, Judgement (TC), 27 January 2000, para. 205; Rutaganda, Judgement (TC), 6 December 1999, para. 70; Akayesu, Judgement (TC), 2 September 1998, para. 581.

[683] Bagilishema, Judgement (TC), 7 June 2001, para. 77.

collectively with considerable seriousness and directed against a multiplicity of victims.[684] "Systematic" may be defined as thoroughly organised and following a regular pattern on the basis of a common policy involving substantial public or private resources.[685] The existence of a policy or plan may be evidentially relevant, in that it may be useful in establishing that the attack in question was widespread or systematic, but it should not be considered as a separate element of the crime.[686]

357. It is in not a requirement that the criminal act must, in and of itself, be widespread or systematic. A single murder may constitute a crime against humanity if it is perpetrated within the context of a widespread or systematic attack.[687]

358. The attack must be directed against a civilian population, i.e. "people who are not taking any active part in the hostilities, including members of the armed forces who laid down their arms and those persons placed hors de combat by sickness, wounds, detention or any other cause".[688] The presence of certain non-civilians in this group does not change its civilian character.[689]

359. The attack against a civilian population must have been committed with discriminatory intent. That is, it must have been committed against a population "on national, political, ethnic, racial or religious grounds". This qualifier characterises only the nature of the attack in general and not the criminal intent of the accused.[690]

360. There must be a nexus between the criminal act and the attack.[691] The accused must have acted with knowledge of the broader context of the attack and knowledge that his acts formed part of a widespread or systematic attack against a civilian population.[692]

361. In the Indictment, the Prosecutor charges the Accused with a crime listed under Article 3, namely "extermination". By its legal description, the crime of extermination requires proof that the accused participated in a widespread or systematic massacre, or in subjecting a widespread number of people to conditions of living that would inevitably lead to death.[693] Extermination differs from murder or killing in that it requires an element of mass destruction of life,[694] without, however, any suggestion of a numerical minimum.[695] The mens rea for extermination is intent to commit or participate in a mass killing.[696]

5.3. Findings of the Chamber

362. Paragraphs 48 to 50 of the Indictment set forth concise allegations relating to the count of crime against humanity. The Chamber has already discussed these allegations in Sections 5, 6 and 7 of Chapter II dealing with its factual findings.

363. With respect to paragraph 48 of the Indictment, the Chamber finds that the Prosecutor has failed to establish that Athanase Seromba ordered the closure of the church doors so as to expose the Tutsi refugees inside Nyange church to death.[697] Consequently, the Chamber finds that Seromba incurs no responsibility for that act.

Actus reus in relation to the destruction of Nyange church

364. With respect to paragraph 49 of the Indictment, the Trial Chamber finds that Athanase Seromba held discussions with the authorities and accepted their decision to destroy the church. The Chamber further found that Seromba also discussed with the bulldozer driver and said words which encouraged him to destroy the church. The Chamber finally found that Seromba even gave advice to the bulldozer driver concerning the fragile side of the church.[698] The Chamber is satisfied that by his conduct, Seromba substantially contributed to the destruction of Nyange church.

365. The Chamber is of the view that the destruction of the church, which resulted in the death of 1,500 Tutsi refugees,[699] constitutes the crime of extermination within the meaning of Article 3 of the Statute.

366. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused aided and abetted the crime of extermination of the Tutsi refugees at Nyange church.

Mens rea of Athanase Seromba in relation to the destruction of Nyange church

367. The Chamber further finds that Athanase Seromba could not have been unaware of the legitimising effect his words would have on the actions of the communal authorities and the bulldozer driver. Furthermore, the Chamber finds that Seromba knew perfectly well that his approval of the authorities' decision to destroy Nyange church and his encouraging words to the bulldozer driver, would substantially contribute to the destruction of the church and the death of the numerous refugees inside.

368. In view of the foregoing, the Chamber finds that the Accused's mens rea in aiding and abetting the crime of extermination of Tutsi refugees at Nyange church has been proven beyond reasonable doubt.

The constituent elements of crime against humanity

369. The Chamber finds that the conditions required for the commission of crime against humanity have been satisfied in this case. Indeed, the Chamber is satisfied that there were attacks against the Tutsi in Kivumu commune in April 1994.[700] The attack which culminated in the destruction of Nyange church on 16 April 1994 was "widespread" in the sense that it was massive, carried out collectively and directed against a multiplicity of victims. The attack was also "systematic" inasmuch as the factual findings tend to show that it was thoroughly organized and followed a regular pattern, starting with the surrounding of the church on 12 April 1994 up to its destruction on 16 April 1994, coupled with the intensification of the attacks against the refugees on 14 and 15 April 1994. Lastly, the Chamber finds that the attack was directed against the Tutsi civilian population that had sought refuge in Nyange church on discriminatory grounds.

370. Furthermore, the Chamber finds that Accused Athanase Seromba had knowledge of the widespread and systematic nature of the attack and the underlying discriminatory grounds. The Chamber is satisfied that Seromba also knew that the crime of extermination committed against the Tutsi refugees was part of that attack.

371. Accordingly, the Chamber considers that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that Accused Athanase Seromba committed a crime against humanity (extermination), as alleged in Count 4 of the Indictment.

Chapter IV: Verdict

372. For the reasons set out in this Judgement, the Chamber unanimously finds as follows:

Count 1: Genocide	GUILTY
Count 2: Complicity in genocide	DISMISSED
Count 3: Conspiracy to commit genocide	NOT GUILTY
Count 4: Crimes against humanity (extermination)	GUILTY

Chapter V: Sentence

1. Introduction

373. Having found Accused Athanase Seromba guilty of genocide and crime against humanity (extermination) by aiding and abetting, the Chamber now considers the appropriate sentence.

374. In its Final Trial Brief, the Prosecution requested the Chamber to sentence Athanase Seromba to concurrent life sentences for each of the counts of the Indictment where the Chamber found him guilty.[701] The Prosecution highlighted the gravity of the crimes and the aggravating circumstances that the Chamber should take into account in determining sentence.

375. In its final brief, the Defence made no submission with respect to sentence. It stated that the Accused had a good reputation and was respected by Hutu and Tutsi parishioners of Nyange prior to the events of 6 April 1994.[702]

2. Applicable Law

376. The Chamber has unfettered discretion in sentencing persons found guilty of crimes falling within its jurisdiction.[703] The Chamber recalls that the aims of sentencing are retribution, deterrence, reprobation, rehabilitation, national reconciliation, protection of society and restoration of peace.

377. In the determination of sentence the Chamber is governed by the following legal provisions: Article 23 of the Statute and Rule 101 of the Rules.

378. Under Article 23 of the Statute, the Chamber, in imposing sentence, shall have recourse to the general practice regarding prison sentences in the courts of Rwanda (Article 23 (1)) and take into account the gravity of the offence and the individual circumstances of the convicted person (Article 23

(2)). Pursuant to Rule 101 (B) of the Rules, the Chamber must also take into account the following factors:

> (i) Any aggravating circumstances;
> (ii) Any mitigating circumstances, including the substantial co-operation with the Prosecutor by the convicted person before or after conviction;
> (iii) The general practice regarding prison sentences in the courts of Rwanda;
> (iv) The extent to which any penalty imposed by a court of any state on a convicted person for the same act has already been served (…)

379. The Chamber considers that in imposing sentence, it may also take into account any other factor which fully reflects the circumstances of the case.[704]

3. Findings of the Chamber

3.1. Gravity of the offences

380. The Chamber notes that in its Final Trial Brief, the Prosecution argued that the crimes committed by Accused Athanase Seromba are serious.[705] In support of this argument, the Prosecution asserts that Athanase Seromba acted with premeditation,[706] and without constraint.[707]

381. The Chamber recalls that an evaluation of the gravity of offences is based on the crimes charged against the accused, that is, the individual circumstances under which the offences were committed, and not on a hierarchy of crimes.[708]

382. The Chamber notes that in this case the Prosecutor did not prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Accused Athanase Seromba either planned or ordered, as a principal, the commission of the offences for which he has been found guilty. Nor does the Trial Chamber accept the argument of premeditation advanced by the Prosecutor. Lastly, the Trial Chamber considers that the Accused did not act under duress when he approved that the church be destroyed using the bulldozer. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber concludes that the offences of genocide and crimes against humanity by aiding and abetting for which Accused Athanase Seromba has been found guilty are of the most extreme gravity.

3.2. Individual circumstances of the Accused

383. The Chamber recalls that the individual circumstances of the accused are perceived in the jurisprudence of the ad hoc tribunals as a factor for individualizing the penalty.[709] The Chamber further considers that individual circumstances should be understood to be any personal circumstance of the accused which may either aggravate or mitigate sentence.

384. The Chamber further notes that the Prosecution submitted in its Final Trial Brief that nothing in the individual circumstances of Athanase Seromba mitigates the gravity of the crimes charged against him.

385. The Chamber notes that Accused Athanase Seromba was ordained priest on 18 July 1993.[710] It is the Chamber's opinion that his training as a priest and his experience within the church should have enabled him to understand the reprehensible nature of his conduct during the events.

386. The Chamber notes, moreover, that Accused Athanase Seromba was present at Nyange church only at the end of the summer or early autumn 1993.[711] The Chamber further notes that Athanase Seromba was only a curate in Nyange parish during the April 1994 events, and was put in charge of the parish because there was no parish priest there.[712]

3.3. Aggravating circumstances

387. In its Final Trial Brief, the Prosecution cited several aggravating circumstances. The Prosecution cited the fact that Athanase Seromba was known in Nyange community,[713] that he was directly involved in the massacre of Tutsi.[714] The Prosecution also averred that the Accused betrayed the trust of his parishioners.[715] The Prosecution pointed out that the crimes committed during the events of April 1994 in Nyange parish were accompanied by excessive violence and the victims went through humiliation[716] and a lot of suffering before dying.[717]

388. The Chamber recalls that aggravating circumstances must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt.[718] A particular circumstance shall not be retained as aggravating if it is included as an element of the crime in question.[719]

389. The Chamber will, in this case, examine as aggravating circumstances the status of the Accused and betrayal of the trust placed in him by the Tutsi refugees,[720] as well as the flight of the Accused after the destruction of the church.

Status of the Accused and betrayal of trust

390. The Chamber recalls that Athanase Seromba, a Catholic priest, was in charge of Nyange parish at the time of the events referred to in the Indictment.[721] The Accused was known and respected in the Catholic community of Nyange. The Chamber recalls that it has been established that many Tutsi from Kivumu commune sought refuge in Nyange church in order to escape attack.[722] The Chamber considers as an aggravating circumstance the fact that the Accused took no concrete action whatsoever to earn the trust of those persons who believed they were safe by seeking refuge at Nyange parish. Consequently, the Chamber finds that the status of the Accused and betrayal of trust constitute aggravating circumstances.

Flight of the Accused after destruction of church

391. The Chamber notes that it is not in contention that the Accused used an identity other than his own to go into exile in Italy, as attested to by the passport issued to him by the then Zaïrian authorities.[723] The Chamber notes, however, that other priests who were with the Accused at Nyange church during the events of April 1994 did not adopt this stratagem. Furthermore, these priests who remained in Rwanda were even prosecuted, but all of them were acquitted.[724] Therefore, the Chamber finds that the flight of Athanase Seromba represents an aggravating circumstance.

3.4. Mitigating circumstances

392. In its Final Trial Brief, the Prosecution submitted that Athanase Seromba should not benefit from any mitigating circumstance, as his surrender was not "voluntary", and as he did not cooperate with the Prosecutor, but rather obstructed the proceedings throughout the trial. The Prosecution added that the Accused has shown no remorse for the role he played in the commission of the crimes charged. Finally, the Prosecutor stressed that no evidence of the Accused's good conduct before and after the crimes charged against him has been adduced.[725]

393. In its Final Trial Brief, the Defence submitted that the Accused had a good reputation and was respected by both Hutu and Tutsi parishioners of Nyange prior to the events of April 1994.[726]

394. The Chamber recalls that mitigating circumstances have to be proved on a balance of probabilities.[727] The weight to be attached to mitigating circumstances is a matter of discretion for the Trial Chamber.[728] In the instant case, the Chamber will discuss the following points: the good reputation of the Accused prior to the events, voluntary surrender of the Accused and the age of the Accused.

Athanase Seromba's good reputation prior to the events of April 1994 in Nyange parish 395. Evidence of Athanase Seromba's good reputation was provided by several Prosecution and Defence witnesses. Such witnesses include CBJ,[729] CBK,[730] BR1,[731] BZ1[732] and BZ4[733] who testified that, as a priest, Athanase Seromba was respected by the public. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that this fact constitutes a mitigating circumstance in determining the sentence to be imposed on the Accused.

Surrender of the Accused

396. The Prosecutor argues that Athanase Seromba's surrender cannot be considered as a mitigating circumstance, as it was not voluntary.[734] The Prosecutor contends that the Accused surrendered only once his arrest by the Italian authorities became imminent.[735] The Prosecutor further submits that if indeed the Accused surrendered, his surrender does not constitute a mitigating circumstance, because it does not meet the criteria set forth in the Babić Judgement.[736]

397. The Chamber notes that voluntary surrender of an accused may constitute a mitigating circumstance.[737] The Chamber considers that the circumstances and time frames surrounding the surrender of the accused must be assessed on a case by case basis. Thus, for example, in Blaškić, the fact that the accused surrendered only after having prepared his defence, [738]and in Simić, the fact that the accused surrendered three years after the surrender of other individuals in the same circumstances, limited the mitigating effect of those surrenders.[739] The Chamber notes, on the contrary, that in Babić, the voluntary surrender of the accused was considered as a mitigating circumstance because it happened "soon after the confirmation of an indictment against him",[740] while in Plavšić, the voluntary surrender of the accused to the Tribunal's authorities 20 days after having learned about the Indictment, was considered as a mitigating circumstance.[741]

398. In this case, the Chamber notes that Accused Athanase Seromba surrendered to the authorities of the Tribunal on 6 February 2002, without the arrest warrant issued against him being executed by the Italian authorities.[742] The Chamber finds this to be a voluntary surrender and, therefore, considers the voluntary surrender of the Accused as a mitigating circumstance in determining the sentence.

The young age of the Accused

399. The Chamber notes the relatively young age of Accused Athanase Seromba, who was 31 years old at the time of the events,[743] and the possibility of his rehabilitation.

3.5. Sentence

The general practice regarding prison sentences in Rwanda

400. The Chamber notes that the Rwandan law of 26 January 2001[744] classifies persons prosecuted for aiding and abetting the genocide and crime against humanity in category 1 (b): "(b) Persons who acted in positions of authority at the national, provincial or district level, in political parties, the army, religious organizations or the militiamen, and who committed or encouraged others to commit such crimes".

401. The Chamber also notes that Rwanda, like other countries that have incorporated genocide or crimes against humanity in their domestic law, has provided very severe penalties for these crimes.[745]

402. The Trial Chamber recalls, however, that Rwandan law and sentences passed by the Rwandan courts are to be used only as a reference,[746] since such reference is but one of the factors that must be taken into account in determining sentence.[747] In fact, the Tribunal can only impose on the Accused a sentence of imprisonment for the remainder of his life and not the death sentence, which is applied in Rwanda.[748]

403. Furthermore, the Chamber notes that direct participation of an accused in crimes committed generally attracts a higher sentence than criminal participation by way of aiding and abetting the commission of the crimes.[749] Thus, a sentence of life imprisonment is generally imposed upon persons who directly planned or ordered the criminal acts, particularly those who clearly had authority and influence at the time the crimes were committed, as well as those who participated in those crimes with particular zeal or sadism.[750]

Multiple sentences

404. Under Rule 101 (C) of the Rules, the Chamber has discretion to determine whether the sentences it has passed are to be served consecutively or concurrently.[751] In this regard, the Chamber recalls that the Appeals Chamber held that "nothing in the Statute or Rules expressly states that a Chamber must impose a separate sentence for each count on which an accused is convicted".[752] The Chamber further notes that in Blaškić, the Appeals Chamber held inter alia as follows: "The crimes ascribed to the accused have been characterised in several distinct ways but form part of a single set of crimes committed in a given geographic region during a relatively extended time-span… In light of this overall consistency, the Trial Chamber finds that there is reason to impose a single sentence for all the crimes of which the accused has been found guilty".[753]

Credit for time served

405. Accused Athanase Seromba surrendered to the Tribunal's authorities on 6 February 2002. Consequently, the Chamber will grant him credit for the period spent in custody from the date of his arrest to the date of this Judgement, pursuant to Article 101 (D) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence.

Annex I : Procedural Background

1. Pre-trial phase

1. The Indictment against Athanase Seromba was filed by the Prosecutor on 8 June 2001 and confirmed on 3 July 2001 by Judge Lloyd Williams, subject to the correction of grammatical and typographical errors.[1] Following a request by the Prosecutor, the Presiding Judge also ordered the non-disclosure to the public, the media or to the suspect of the names of the witnesses and suspects identified in the supporting materials that accompagnied the Indictment or any other information that might permit their identification.

2. On 4 July 2001, Judge Lloyd Williams issued a warrant of arrest against the Accused.[2] On 10 July 2001, in execution of the order for transfer issued by the said Judge, the Registrar of the Tribunal transmitted the warrant of arrest and the Indictment to the Italian Minister of Justice.

3. On 6 February 2002, the Accused surrendered to the authorities of the Tribunal and was placed in detention. The Accused made his initial appearance before Judge Navanethem Pillay on 8 February 2002 and entered a plea of not guilty to each of the counts in the Indictment.[3] On 12 February 2002, the Prosecutor served a first request for interview on the Accused.

4. On 14 May 2002, the Prosecutor filed a motion for protective measures for witnesses.

5. In a motion filed on 3 June 2002, the Prosecutor requested the President of the Tribunal to authorize the Trial Chamber to exercise its functions away from the seat of the Tribunal and to hold the trial of the Accused in Rwanda.[4] On 20 June 2002, Judge Navanethem Pillay postponed making a decision on the matter until the Registrar assigned a Defence Counsel for the Accused.[5]

7. On 3 March 2003, the Registrar assigned Mr. Alfred Pognon as Lead Counsel for the Defence.

8. On 17 April 2003, the Prosecutor wrote a letter to the Defence inviting the Accused to review the evidence.

9. On 2 May 2003, the Defence filed a motion to annul or withdraw the Indictment, on the grounds that the Prosecutor's failure to question the suspect before issuing an indictment against him amounted to a procedural defect invalidating the Indictment.

10. On 30 June 2003, Judge Erik Møse granted the Prosecutor's motion for protective measures for victims and witnesses, ordering the Prosecution to disclose any unredacted witness statements 21 days prior to resumption of the trial.[6]

11. On 8 January 2004, the Prosecutor withdrew his motion for trial in Rwanda.[7]

12. On 13 January 2004, the Trial Chamber, sitting in the person of Judge Erik Møse, dismissed the Defence motion to annul or withdraw the Indictment,[8] and ruled that neither the Statute nor the Rules required the Prosecution to interview a suspect prior to indicting.

13. A status conference to assess progress of the preparation for commencement of the trial was also held on 13 January 2004. The Chamber invited the Prosecution to file its Pre-Trial Brief.[9] The Defence submitted that it would be ready only in September 2004.[10]

14. On 14 January 2004, Judge Erik Møse granted the Prosecutor's request to withdraw its motion for trial in Rwanda.[11]

15. On 20 January 2004, the Prosecutor filed the initial version of his Pre-Trial Brief.

16. On 20 August 2004, the Prosecution disclosed its list of exhibits to the Defence.

17. On 27 August 2004, the Prosecutor filed the final version of the Pre-Trial Brief. Exhibits were filed on 30 August 2004. A corrigendum to the Pre-Trial Brief was filed on 7 September 2004. On 15 September 2004, other exhibits were filed, as well as the order of appearance of Prosecution witnesses.

18. A pre-trial conference was held on 20 September 2004. The Chamber noted the absence of the Accused at that conference.[12] The Prosecution stated that it had fully discharged its pre-trial obligations, in particular with respect to disclosure of materials to the Defence.[13] The Defence requested that the Prosecution disclose to it the witness statements referred to in decisions of the Rwandan courts and filed by the Prosecution.[14]

2. Trial phase

19. The trial of the Accused commenced on 20 September 2004. The Accused participated in a strike action called by some accused persons of the Tribunal and so did not attend the first three days of the trial. Defence Counsel, Messrs. Pognon and Monthé, explained that their client had asked them not to represent him during the strike.[15] The Chamber ruled that the Accused's instructions did not amount to a termination of the Defence Counsel's assignment to represent the Accused and ordered them to continue to represent the Accused for as long as he refused to appear before the Chamber.[16] After stating that they could not represent the Accused without his authorization, the Defence Counsel left the court room, thus compelling the Chamber to adjourn the trial until 27 September, that date on which they returned.

20. In letters dated 24 September 2004 and 27 September 2004 respectively, Defence Counsel and the Accused, as well as the Association des avocats de la défense (ADAD), in an application to appear as amicus curiae, requested the Chamber to reconsider its Oral Decision of 21 September 2004. The Chamber dismissed this first motion, having concluded that the warning of 21 September 2004 did not constitute a sanction,[17] and that the decision to warn Counsel was well-founded in law, falling within its inherent powers to direct and control the proceedings and, therefore, is not open to any challenge, even in the face of special circumstances.[18] With respect to the ADAD application, the Chamber refused to authorize the association to appear as amicus curiae, having found that the Brief submitted by ADAD raised no such relevant issues as would enlighten the Chamber.[19]

21. The Chamber heard 15 Prosecution witnesses: 12 witnesses from 27 September to 22 October 2004 and 3 witnesses from 19 January to 25 January 2005, the date the Prosecution closed its case.

22. On 20 January 2005, the Defence filed a motion for protective measures for witnesses.

23. A status conference was held on 25 January 2005. The Chamber requested the Defence to file its list of witnesses as quickly as possible and ordered that the trial resume on 1 March 2005.[20]

24. On 31 January 2005, the Chamber rendered a decision authorizing protective measures for the Defence witnesses and ordered the Defence to disclose unredacted statements of its witnesses 21 days prior to the resumption of trial.[21]

25. On 9 February 2005, the Defence filed a motion for extension of the time-limit for disclosing the unredacted statements of its witnesses, and another motion for the same purpose on 17 February 2005. On 1 March 2005, the Chamber ordered the Defence to file, no later than 14 March 2005, its Pre-Defence Brief, the complete and precise list of witnesses which it intended to call to testify, a summary of facts and the estimated length of the testimony of each witness.[22] The Chamber adjourned the trial to 4 April 2005 for the commencement of the Defence case.[23]

26. On 11 March 2005, the Defence filed a new motion for further extensions. During a status conference held on 5 April 2005, the Trial Chamber postponed resumption of the trial to 10 May 2005 and ordered the Defence to file its Pre-Defence Brief, the summaries and the statements of its witnesses within the prescribed time-limit, so that the trial could resume on 10 May 2005.[24]

27. On 9 April 2005, the Accused sent a letter to his Lead Counsel, Mr. Pognon, stating that he no longer wanted to be represented by him because he had lost confidence in him.

28. On 13 April 2005, the Chamber ordered the Defence to disclose to the Prosecution the unredacted statements of its witnesses no later than 21 days prior to resumption of trial.[25]

29. On 15 April 2005, the Accused wrote to the Registrar requesting the withdrawal of the assignment of his Lead Counsel, Mr. Pognon. On 18 April 2005, Mr. Pognon agreed to step down and to withdraw immediately.

30. On 19 April 2005, the Defence filed a Pre-Defence Brief, but did not comply with the orders for disclosure of unredacted Defence witness statements.

31. On 10 May 2005, given the withdrawal of Mr. Pognon and the absence of Mr. Monthé, the Chamber decided to adjourn the trial sine die.[26]

32. On 19 May 2005, the Chamber directed the Registrar to respond, no later than 27 May 2005, to the Accused's Motion of 15 April 2005 concerning the assignment of a new counsel.[27] On 20 May 2005, the Registrar withdrew the assignment of the Lead Counsel,[28] and on 8 June 2005, assigned Mr. Monthé in his place.

33. On 23 June 2005, the Defence filed a motion to withdraw the Pre-Defence Brief filed by the previous Lead Counsel.

34. During the status conference held on 24 June 2005, the Chamber granted the Defence's request for adjournment and set the date of 31 October 2005 for resumption of trial.[29]

35. In a 7 July 2005 Decision,[30] the Chamber authorized the Defence to file a new Pre-Defence Brief and ruled that the Defence motion for withdrawal of the 19 April 2005 Preliminary Brief was without merit. The Chamber also authorized the Prosecution to inspect the exhibits that the Defence intended to rely on, at least 21 days prior to the commencement of the Defence case. The Chamber ordered the Defence to disclose its new Preliminary Brief and the unredacted statements of its witnesses to the Prosecution at least 21 days prior to the resumption of trial, as well as the redacted and unredacted statements of Defence witnesses at least 60 days and 21 days respectively prior to the resumption of the trial.

36. On 10 October 2005, the Defence filed a new Pre-Defence Brief, which was subsequently amended on 19 October 2005. On 25 and 27 October 2005, the Defence filed the statements of its witnesses without disclosing their identity. On 28 October 2005, the Defence filed the order of appearance of the Defence witnesses, without disclosing their identity.

37. On 31 October 2005, the Defence opened its case.

38. On 16 December 2005, the Chamber rendered five decisions: a decision setting 13 February 2006 as the date of resumption of the trial;[31] a decision ordering the transfer of detained witnesses to Arusha;[32] a decision ordering the opening of an investigation into the retraction of testimony by Witness FE36;[33] a decision ordering the opening of an investigation into the request for long-term protection measures for Witnesses FE36, FE35 and CF14;[34] and a decision ordering the Prosecution to disclose to the Defence, through the Witnesses and Victims Support Section, the identity and addresses of certain witnesses whom it no longer intended to call and authorising the Defence to enter into contact with some of those witnesses.[35]

39. In a memorandum dated 7 February 2006, the President of the Tribunal postponed the date of resumption of the trial to 23 March 2006.

40. On 7 March 2006, the Defence filed a motion to add Witnesses PS1 and PS2 to its witness list and to drop witnesses CF3 and FE25.

41. The Defence resumed presentation of its evidence on 23 March 2006.

42. On 24 March 2006, the Chamber granted the motion to add Witnesses PS1 and PS2 to the list of Defence witnesses.[36]

43. On 29 March 2006, the Chamber granted the Prosecution's motion for sites visit in Rwanda.[37] From 8 to 11 April 2006, the Chamber, the Defence, the Prosecutor and the Registrar visited sites in Kivumu, Rwanda.

44. On 12 April 2006, the Defence dropped Witnesses CF4 and CF13 from its list of witnesses and modified the order of appearance of Witnesses PA1, PS1, PS2 and the Accused. The Chamber adjourned the trial to 18 April 2006.[38]

45. On 18 April 2006, the Defence dropped PS1 from its witness list and informed the Chamber that Witness PS2 could not testify in Arusha before May 2006.[39]

46. On 20 April 2006, the Chamber granted the Defence motion for the deposition of witness PS2 to be taken by means of a video-conference.[40]

47. On 21 April 2006, the Chamber ordered the Accused to testify on 24 April 2006[41] and authorized the parties to send representatives to South Africa for the deposition of Witness PS2 by video-link.[42]

48. On 21 April 2006, the Defence argued that the Accused could not testify before Witness PS2's deposition is given and requested the Chamber to reconsider its Oral Decision of 21 April 2006.[43] The Chamber dismissed the Defence request, given that its 21 April 2006 Decision violated neither Article 20 of the Statute nor Rule 85 of the Rules, and that it had not forced the Accused to testify against his will, but had simply reversed the order of appearance of Witness PS2 and the Accused in order to meet the deadline for the close of the Defence case.[44] The Chamber also dismissed the Defence's request for certification for appeal of that Decision.[45]

49. The Defence, subsequently, filed a motion with the Bureau of the Tribunal for disqualification of the Judges of the Trial Chamber. On 25 April 2006, the Bureau dismissed the Defence motion.[46]

50. The trial resumed on 26 April 2006. The Defence disclosed that it was appealing the decision of the Bureau and asked that the trial be adjourned pending a decision by the Appeal Chamber.[47] The Chamber dismissed the Defence motion to adjourn the proceedings.[48] With the Defence having refused to examine Witness PS2, the Chamber held that it had waived its right to examine the witness.[49] The Chamber adjourned the proceedings to the following day to enable the Accused to be present at the hearing.[50]

51. On 27 April 2006, the Defence declared that the Accused had decided not to attend the proceedings until the Appeal Chamber ruled on the Defence appeal against the Bureau's decision on the disqualification motion.[51] The Trial Chamber concluded that the Defence had waived its right to examine the Accused and, therefore there was no other witness to be heard, and that the Defence had closed its case. The Chamber ordered that the Prosecutor's Final Brief be filed no later than 26 May 2006, that of the Defence no later than 16 June 2006, and that the parties should present their closing arguments on 27 June 2006.[52]

52. On 22 May 2006, the Appeal Chamber dismissed the Defence appeal against the decision of the Bureau of the Tribunal on the motion for disqualification.[53]

53. On 5 June 2006, the Defence filed a motion for extension of the time-limit for the filing of its Closing Brief on 22 June 2006. The Chamber granted that motion on 8 June 2006.[54]

54. The Prosecution filed its Closing Brief on 26 May 2006, while the Defence filed its own Brief on 22 June 2006. The Defence also filed a corrigendum to its Closing Brief on 26 June 2006.

55. The parties presented their closing arguments on 27 and 28 June 2006.

56. On 28 June 2006, the Chamber granted the Prosecutor's motion to exclude as out of time the corrigendum to the Defence Final Trial Brief and ordered its exclusion from the proceedings.[55]

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA (le « Tribunal »),

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance III (la « Chambre »), composée des Juges Andrésia Vaz, Présidente, Karin Hökborg et Gberdao Gustave Kam ;

SAISI d'une requête orale du Procureur aux fins de voir ordonner une visite de sites au Rwanda, présentée à l'audience du 23 mars 2006 ;

CONSIDÉRANT la réponse positive donnée par la Défense ;

CONSIDÉRANT la décision orale en date du 24 mars 2006;

CONSIDÉRANT les listes soumises par les parties quant aux sites à visiter au Rwanda;

STATUE comme suit, conformément à l'article 73 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve (« le Règlement ») ;

Introduction

1. L'accusé Athanase Seromba est poursuivi pour génocide, ou subsidiairement pour complicité de génocide, entente en vue de commettre le génocide et crimes contre l'humanité (extermination), crimes prévus et punis par les articles 2 et 3 du Statut du Tribunal. Ces accusations sont portées relativement aux événements qui se sont produits dans la paroisse de Nyange, située dans la commune de Kivumu, en préfecture de Kibuye.

2. Dans sa requête orale, le Procureur demande à la Chambre de se rendre au Rwanda afin d'y visiter un certain nombre de sites qu'il juge importants pour une meilleure compréhension des faits de l'espèce. A cet effet, il soumet une liste de lieux à visiter au Rwanda. La Défense ne s'oppose à la demande du Procureur et soumet également sa propre liste.

Délibérations

3. L'article 4 du Règlement dispose qu'une Chambre ou un juge peut, avec l'autorisation du Président, exercer ses fonctions hors du siège du Tribunal, si l'intérêt de la justice le commande.

4. La jurisprudence de ce Tribunal considère que l'intérêt d'une visite sur les lieux doit être apprécié au regard des circonstances particulières de chaque affaire et de son importance pour la manifestation de la vérité[56]. Il convient également de tenir compte du nombre de sites à visiter ainsi que des frais à supporter par le Tribunal.

5. La Chambre relève qu'en l'espèce les sites de visite, en particulier ceux situés à Nyange, sont pertinents par rapport aux charges retenues contre l'accusé, d'une part, et aux dépositions des témoins, d'autre part. Elle est d'avis qu'une visite de ces lieux est nécessaire à la manifestation de la vérité dans la présente affaire.

6. La Chambre note, en outre, que cette visite, d'une durée limitée et qui porte sur un certain nombre de sites, s'effectuera sans frais excessifs pour le Tribunal. Elle considère, en conséquence, qu'il y a lieu déclarer bien fondée la demande du Procureur, et ce dans l'intérêt de la justice.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE :

- FAIT droit à la requête du Procureur ;

- ORDONNE une visite de sites au Rwanda ;

- DEMANDE au Président du Tribunal d'autoriser la Chambre à exercer ses fonctions hors du siège du Tribunal du 8 au 11 avril 2006 ;

- DEMANDE au Greffe de prendre, sur la base de l'autorisation du Président, toutes les dispositions nécessaires afin de faciliter l'application de la présente décision.

Fait à Arusha, le 29 mars 2006.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA (le « Tribunal »),

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance III (la « Chambre »), composée des Juges Andrésia Vaz, Présidente, Karin Hökborg et Gberdao Gustave Kam ;

SAISI d'une requête du Procureur aux fins de communication des déclarations signées des témoins de la Défense, intitulée « Prosecutor's Motion for Disclosure of Signed Defence Witness Statements », déposée au Greffe le 10 mars 2006 ;

CONSIDÉRANT la réponse de la Défense intitulée « Mémoire en réponse à la requête du Procureur tendant à voir ordonner la communication des déclarations signées des témoins de la Défense », déposée au Greffe le 15 mars 2006 ;

STATUE comme suit, conformément aux dispositions de l'article 73 (A) du Règlement de procédure et de preuve (« le Règlement ») ;

Arguments des parties

1. Le Procureur soutient que les déclarations des témoins de la Défense qui lui ont été communiquées par la Défense ne constituent pas des « déclarations écrites » au sens de l'article 73 ter (B) du Règlement au motif qu'elles ne portent aucune signature de témoins. Il allègue que les originaux de ces déclarations sont disponibles et que la Défense, en ne les lui communiquant pas, n'a pas respecté la décision du 13 avril 2005.[1]

2. Le Procureur fait valoir, en outre, que l'absence des originaux des déclarations des témoins de la Défense ne permet pas à la Chambre d'en évaluer l'authenticité. Il souligne également avoir, pour sa part, divulgué à la Défense les déclarations signées de ses témoins. Il ajoute que le défaut de communication des déclarations signées des témoins de la Défense est une violation du principe de l'égalité des armes. Il demande, en conséquence, à la Chambre d'ordonner à la Défense de lui communiquer les déclarations signées de ses témoins.

3. La Défense soutient, de son côté, que la demande du Procureur n'est pas fondée. Elle fait valoir notamment que l'article 73 ter (B) du Règlement n'exige pas que les déclarations communiquées au Procureur soient revêtues de la signature des témoins. Elle ajoute que le juge, dans l'affaire Nahimana, a rappelé l'obligation de communication de la Défense sans préciser que les copies des déclarations communiquées au Procureur soient signées par les témoins de la Défense.[2] En conséquence, la Défense demande à la Chambre de rejeter la requête du Procureur.

4. Aux termes de l'article 73 ter (B) in fine du Règlement, la Chambre peut inviter la Défense à communiquer au Procureur les copies des déclarations de chacun des témoins qu'elle entend appeler à la barre.

5. La Chambre rappelle sa décision du 13 avril 2005 dans laquelle elle a ordonné à la Défense de communiquer au Procureur les déclarations non caviardées de ses témoins avant le début de la présentation des moyens de preuve à décharge.[3]

6. La Chambre relève que la Chambre d'appel, dans l'affaire Niyitegeka, a considéré que la forme la plus appropriée d'une déclaration de témoin est celle qui comporte la signature dudit témoin. Dans la même décision, la Chambre d'appel a également affirmé que la signature est l'acte par lequel le témoin reconnaît l'exactitude des déclarations qui lui sont attribuées.[4]

7. La Chambre constate qu'en l'espèce, la Défense n'a communiqué au Procureur que les déclarations non signées de ses témoins. Elle note également que la Défense ne conteste pas l'existence de déclarations écrites signées par ses témoins. Aussi, estime-t-elle que la communication faite par la Défense au Procureur est incomplète. La Chambre est donc d'avis qu'il y a lieu de déclarer bien-fondée la demande du Procureur aux fins de communication des déclarations signées des témoins de la Défense. En conséquence, elle estime qu'il appartient à la Défense de réparer cette défaillance en communiquant au Procureur les déclarations signées des témoins de la Défense.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE :

- FAIT droit à la requête du Procureur ;

- ORDONNE à la Défense de communiquer au Procureur les déclarations signées des témoins de la Défense.

Fait à Arusha, le 7 avril 2006.

SAISI de la requête de la Défense intitulée « Requête de la Défense aux fins de voir ordonner que les dépositions du témoin PS2 soient recueillies en vue du procès, sur le fondement des dispositions des articles 71 et 90 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve », déposée au Greffe du Tribunal le 19 avril 2006 ;

STATUE comme suit, sur la base de l'article 73 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve (le « Règlement »).

Introduction

1. La Défense soutient que le témoin PS2 est dans l'impossibilité de venir témoigner en personne avant la fin de la présente session, en raison du fait que les autorités de l'Afrique du Sud n'entendent lui octroyer un visa de sortie qu'au mois de mai 2006. Elle sollicite donc que la Chambre ordonne que les dépositions du témoin PS2 soient recueillies par vidéoconférence ou à défaut par toute personne que la Chambre mandatera à cet effet. A l'appui de sa demande, la Défense invoque les dispositions des articles 71 et 90 du Règlement.

Délibérations

2. La Chambre rappelle qu'elle a autorisé la Défense à faire comparaître le témoin PS2 comme témoin de la Défense par décision orale en date du 24 mars 2006.[1]

3. La Chambre note qu'à son audience du 18 avril 2006, la Défense l'avait déjà informée que le témoin PS2 ne pourrait pas se présenter à Arusha avant la fin de la présente session où la Défense est censée clore la présentation de ses moyens de preuves à décharge.[2]

4. Elle relève, en outre, que lors de cette audience, le Procureur a soutenu qu'il s'opposerait à tout report de la clôture de la présentation de la preuve de la Défense.[3]

5. Interpellé sur la situation du témoin PS2, le représentant de la S.A.T.V. a expliqué à la Chambre que les autorités sud-africaines ont insisté sur le fait qu'elles ne pourront délivrer une autorisation de sortie au témoin PS2 qu'au mois de mai 2006.[4]

6. La Chambre rappelle les dispositions de l'article 90 (A) du Règlement :

> En principe, les Chambres entendent les témoins en personne, à moins qu'une Chambre n'ordonne qu'un témoin dépose selon les modalités prévues à l'article 71.

7. La Chambre rappelle également que l'article 71 du Règlement prévoit que la déposition d'un témoin peut aussi être recueillie par voie de vidéoconférence.

8. De ce qui précède, la Chambre constate que le témoin PS2, pour des raisons indépendantes de sa volonté, ne pourra pas venir à Arusha pour témoigner avant le mois de mai 2006. Elle estime pourtant qu'il est de l'intérêt de la justice de permettre à la Défense d'achever la présentation de ses moyens de preuve au cours de la présente session qui prend fin le 27 avril 2006. Dans ces conditions, la Chambre est d'avis qu'il convient de recueillir les dépositions du témoin PS2 par vidéoconférence. En conséquence, elle considère qu'il y a lieu de déclarer bien-fondée la requête de la Défense.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE :

ORDONNE que les dépositions du témoin PS2 soient recueillies par vidéoconférence;

ORDONNE, en conséquence, au Greffe de prendre toutes les mesures nécessaires en vue du témoignage par vidéoconférence du témoin PS2 avant la fin de la présente session prévue pour le 27 avril 2006.

SAISI également de la requête de la Défense intitulée « Requête de la Défense aux fins de certification contre l'ordonnance du 27 avril 2006 portant sur le dépôt des dernières conclusions des parties et sur les plaidoiries et réquisitions… », déposée au Greffe du Tribunal le 2 mai 2006 (ci-après désignée la « deuxième Requête ») ;

CONSIDÉRANT la réponse du Procureur, intitulée « Prosecutor's Response to Seromba's Motions for Certification of Appeals », déposée au Greffe le 3 mai 2006 (ci-après désignée la « Réponse »);

STATUE comme suit, sur la base du Statut du Tribunal (ci-après désigné le « Statut ») et de l'article 73 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve (ci-après désigné le « Règlement »).

Introduction

1. L'accusé Athanase Seromba est poursuivi pour génocide, ou subsidiairement, complicité de génocide, entente en vue de commettre le génocide et crime contre l'humanité par extermination[1]. Son procès a débuté le 20 septembre 2004[2]. Le Procureur a conclu la présentation de ses moyens de preuve le 25 janvier 2005[3]. La Défense, après de multiples retards dus pour l'essentiel à son fait[4], n'a débuté la présentation de ses moyens de preuve que le 31 octobre 2005[5].

2. Le 23 mars 2006, la Chambre a ouvert une session consacrée à la présentation par la Défense des derniers témoins à décharge. Par décision orale du 24 mars 2006, la Chambre a autorisé la Défense à modifier sa liste de témoins, en y ajoutant notamment le témoin PS2[6]. Le 20 avril 2006, la Chambre a ordonné que les dépositions du témoin PS2 soient recueillies par vidéoconférence, ledit témoin n'étant pas présent à Arusha pour des raisons administratives[7]. Au cours de l'audience du 21 avril 2006, la Chambre, afin d'éviter une interruption des audiences et pour tenir compte de la fin de la session prévue pour le 27 avril 2006, a décidé d'entendre le témoignage de l'accusé avant celui du témoin PS2[8]. Le 24 avril 2006, la Défense a introduit une requête en reconsidération de cette décision[9]. La Chambre a, par décision orale rendue le même jour, rejeté cette requête[10]. A la suite de cette décision, la Défense a saisi le Bureau du Tribunal d'une requête en récusation des juges[11]. La Chambre a alors suspendu les débats dans l'attente de la décision du Bureau[12]. Par décision en date du 25 avril 2006, le Bureau a rejeté la demande en récusation des juges[13].

3. Au cours de l'audience du 26 avril 2006, la Chambre a décidé de passer outre le témoignage du témoin PS2, considérant que le refus du conseil de la Défense de procéder à l'interrogatoire du témoin PS2 équivaut à une renonciation au témoignage de ce dernier[14].

A l'audience du 18 avril 2006, la Défense a d'ailleurs rappelé, sans contestation de sa part, que de la clôture de la session était prévue le 27 avril 2006 : « (…) Nous ignorons le sort de ce qui a été décidé au moment où nous allons nous séparer puisque la date limite, vous le rappeliez, est celle du 27 avril. » Transcriptions de l'audience du 18 avril 2006, p. 10.

La décision de la Chambre est ainsi motivée: « La Chambre, dans un souci de gestion et dans l'intérêt de la justice, en tenant compte des problèmes techniques liés à l'audition du dernier témoin de la Défense PS2, prévue pour mercredi prochain, a simplement interverti l'ordre de comparution dudit témoin et de l'accusé pour respecter la date de clôture de présentation de la preuve à décharge prévue le 27 avril 2006, d'un commun accord par les parties et la Chambre ».

4. Enfin, à son audience du 27 avril 2006, la Chambre a constaté le refus persistant de l'accusé de se présenter à l'audience pour son témoignage et l'a interprété comme une renonciation à déposer devant la Chambre[15]. Elle a ensuite relevé que, la Défense n'ayant fait comparaître aucun autre témoin, la présentation de ses moyens de preuve était close et a renvoyé les parties à la date du 27 juin 2006 pour la présentation de leurs réquisitions et plaidoiries[16]. C'est dans ce contexte que la Défense a introduit les deux requêtes en certification d'appel ci-dessus visées.

La Défense

5. Dans sa première Requête, la Défense soutient qu'elle n'a pas renoncé au témoignage du témoin PS2. Elle allègue notamment que la renonciation est un acte volontaire, « nécessairement pris à l'initiative de son auteur, et qui ne peut être prêté à ce dernier ni par une tierce personne, ni par une juridiction »[17]. Elle estime que la décision du 26 avril 2006 la prive de son droit de présenter sa preuve, tel que prévu à l'article 85 (A) du Règlement, tout en déniant également à l'accusé le droit à un procès équitable garanti par l'article 19 du Statut. Elle invoque, en outre, une violation de l'article 20 du Statut qui reconnaît à l'accusé « le droit d'obtenir la comparution et l'interrogatoire des témoins à décharge dans les mêmes conditions que les témoins à charge »[18].

6. La Défense soutient, par ailleurs, que la décision du 26 avril 2006 lui cause un « préjudice considérable »[19]. A l'appui de cette allégation, elle fait valoir notamment que les dépositions du témoin PS2 sont indispensables parce que censées contredire des faits allégués dans l'acte d'accusation, à savoir l'implication directe de l'accusé dans la mort d'Anicet Gatare[20].

7. De ce qui précède, la Défense conclut que la décision du 26 avril 2006 touche une question susceptible de compromettre l'équité et l'issue du procès et dont le règlement immédiat par la Chambre d'appel pourrait concrètement faire avancer la procédure. En conséquence, elle demande à la Chambre de lui certifier l'appel contre cette décision, et ce conformément aux dispositions de l'article 73 (B) du Règlement[21].

8. Dans sa deuxième Requête, la Défense soutient que l'ordonnance du 27 avril 2006 a été prise en méconnaissance de l'appel interjeté par l'accusé contre la décision du Bureau[22]. Elle affirme que même si cet appel n'est pas formellement suspensif, il appartenait à la Chambre, en s'inspirant des usages que consacrent « toutes les traditions judiciaires modernes », de s'abstenir de poursuivre le procès jusqu'à ce que la Chambre d'appel ait statué sur le recours[23]. Elle ajoute, en outre, que la Chambre, en considérant que l'accusé a renoncé à son droit de comparaître comme témoin, a privé ce dernier de son droit à un procès équitable et violé ainsi les articles 19 et 20 du Statut. Sur ce point, elle indique notamment que la renonciation est « un acte volontaire qui doit nécessairement et expressément être notifié par celui qui l'exprime »[24]. Elle soutient également que l'ordonnance susvisée porte particulièrement atteinte au principe d'égalité des armes, en ce qu'elle empêche l'accusé de présenter ses moyens de preuve comme a pu le faire le Procureur qui a conduit à son terme la présentation des moyens de preuve à charge[25].

9. La Défense soutient, par ailleurs, que l'ordonnance du 27 avril 2006 méconnaît la décision rendue le 29 septembre 2004 aux termes de laquelle la Chambre a décidé de passer outre les objections de la Défense tout en réservant à celle-ci le droit de rappeler, pour les contre-interroger à nouveau, les témoins de l'accusation connus sous les pseudonymes de YAU, YAT, CBI et CBS[26]. Elle estime qu'en mettant « prématurément » fin à la présentation de la preuve à décharge et en lui ordonnant de déposer son mémoire écrit au plus tard le 16 juin 2006, l'ordonnance susvisée porte préjudice à la Défense. Elle allègue, en effet, que le dépôt d'un tel mémoire ne peut se faire qu'après que la Défense a pu réunir l'ensemble de la preuve à décharge par « les mécanismes » de l'interrogatoire et du contre-interrogatoire[27]. La Défense estime ainsi qu'elle n'a pas pleinement exercé son droit de présenter ses moyens de preuve. Elle en déduit que l'ordonnance du 27 avril 2006 porte sur « une question susceptible de compromettre l'équité ou l'issue du procès et dont le règlement immédiat par la Chambre d'appel s'impose pour faire concrètement progresser la procédure »[28]. En conséquence, la Défense sollicite de la Chambre la certification de son appel contre l'ordonnance du 27 avril 2006 conformément à l'article 73 (B) du Règlement. En outre, elle demande que la Chambre ordonne la comparution des témoins à charge YAU, YAT, CBI et CBS pour un nouveau contre-interrogatoire, à la date qu'elle voudra bien fixer[29].

Le Procureur

10. Le Procureur soutient que la Défense a volontairement refusé d'interroger le témoin PS2[30]. Il explique, en effet, que le co-conseil a déclaré au cours de l'audience du 26 avril 2006 ne pas être prêt à interroger le témoin PS2, en dépit des efforts et dépenses consentis par le Tribunal pour l'audition dudit témoin. Il estime qu'une telle attitude de la Défense est une renonciation implicite au témoignage du témoin PS2, résultat de la stratégie adoptée par la Défense malgré le rappel fait par la Chambre qu'il n'y avait aucun sursis à statuer en l'espèce et en dépit également de la satisfaction, après coup, du souhait de la Défense de voir l'accusé témoigner en dernier[31].

11. Le Procureur fait valoir, en outre, que la Défense aurait dû interroger le témoin PS2 si le témoignage de ce dernier était aussi important qu'elle le prétend. Il souligne également que l'importance du témoignage de PS2 ne saurait remettre en question le constat que la Défense a renoncé à l'interroger[32].

12. Le Procureur estime, par ailleurs, que la demande de certification d'appel contre l'ordonnance du 26 avril 2006 ne remplit pas les conditions de la certification d'appel de l'article 73 (B) du Règlement. A l'appui de cette allégation, il fait valoir que la question de la renonciation par la Défense au témoignage du témoin PS2 n'est pas susceptible de compromettre sensiblement l'équité, la rapidité ou l'issue du procès et que son règlement immédiat ne fera pas concrètement avancer la procédure[33].

13. En ce qui concerne la demande de certification d'appel contre l'ordonnance du 27 avril 2006, le Procureur soutient que l'argument de la Défense consistant à faire croire que la Chambre a privé l'accusé de son droit de témoigner en personne ne peut prospérer en l'espèce. Il fait valoir, en effet, que la Défense a volontairement refusé d'appeler l'accusé à la barre tout en sachant qu'elle lui faisait ainsi renoncer à son droit de comparaître comme témoin[34]. Il estime, en se référant aux transcriptions d'audience[35], que la Chambre n'a fait que constater cette renonciation[36].

14. Le Procureur soutient également que la demande subsidiaire de la Défense aux fins de voir rappeler, pour contre-interrogatoire, les témoins de l'accusation YAU, YAT, CBI et CBS relève du dilatoire. Il considère que cette demande est non seulement présentée au lendemain de la clôture de la présentation des éléments de preuve mais qu'elle est aussi tardive parce qu'introduite 19 mois après le prononcé par la Chambre de la décision orale du 29 septembre 2004[37].

15. Au regard de ce qui précède, le Procureur souligne que la demande de certification d'appel contre l'ordonnance du 27 avril 2006 ne remplit pas les conditions de l'article 73 (B) du Règlement. A cet effet, il estime que la question relative au refus par la Défense d'interroger l'accusé de même que celle relative à la demande de la Défense en rappel de certains témoins de l'accusation ne sont pas susceptibles de compromettre l'équité, la rapidité, ou l'issue du procès et que son règlement immédiat par la Chambre d'appel ne peut faire concrètement avancer la procédure.

16. En conclusion, le Procureur fait valoir également en rejet des deux requêtes de la Défense, que des dates ont déjà été arrêtées pour le dépôt des dernières conclusions écrites des parties ainsi que de leurs réquisitions et plaidoiries[38].

Conclusions de la Chambre sur la jonction des procédures

17. La Chambre constate que les deux requêtes de certification d'appel présentées par la Défense ont un objectif commun qui est de contester la décision finale prise par la Chambre de déclarer close la présentation des moyens de preuve à décharge[39], après avoir constaté les défaillances de la Défense pour l'audition du témoin PS2 et de l'accusé. Elle est d'avis qu'il y a lieu de joindre les deux procédures dans l'intérêt d'une bonne administration de la justice.

Conclusions de la Chambre sur la demande en rappel des témoins de l'accusation YAU, YAT, CBI et CBS pour contre-interrogatoire supplémentaire

18. La Chambre rappelle qu'en son audience du 29 septembre 2004, elle a décidé de passer outre l'exception de communication de pièces soulevée par la Défense en relation avec les dépositions de certains témoins de l'accusation, tout en réservant le droit pour la Défense de saisir, s'il y a lieu, la Chambre d'une demande aux fins de contre-interroger les témoins en question sur la base des nouveaux documents communiqués par le Procureur[40].

19. Au surplus, la Chambre rappelle que la jurisprudence du Tribunal n'autorise le rappel de témoins que dans des circonstances exceptionnelles[41] et sur présentation, par la partie qui le requiert, d'un motif valable[42]. En l'espèce, elle constate que la Défense se borne à solliciter le rappel des témoins YAU, YAT, CBI et CBS sans en fournir les raisons.

20. En conséquence de ce qui précède, la Chambre considère qu'il y a lieu de déclarer la Défense mal fondée dans sa demande en rappel des témoins susvisés.

Conclusions de la Chambre sur les demandes de certification d'appel

21. La Chambre note qu'aux termes des dispositions de l'article 73 (B) du Règlement, deux conditions doivent être réunies pour qu'une certification d'appel soit accordée : le requérant doit démontrer (i) que la décision contestée touche une question à même de compromettre l'équité, la rapidité ou l'issue du procès, (ii) et que son règlement immédiat par la Chambre d'appel peut faire avancer la procédure.

22. La Chambre rappelle qu'en l'espèce, des délais importants ont été consentis à la Défense pour la présentation de ses moyens de preuve à décharge. Aussi, contrairement aux allégations de la Défense, la Chambre est d'avis que l'accusé a eu tout le temps pour préparer sa défense et présenter ses moyens de preuve[43]. Elle relève, au surplus, que l'article 85 (A) du Règlement lui reconnaît le pouvoir d'intervertir l'ordre de comparution des témoins, même dans l'hypothèse où l'accusé décide de témoigner pour sa propre défense, et qu'en fait la possibilité avait été offerte finalement à l'accusé de témoigner en dernier. Elle estime, dès lors, que les contestations soulevées par la Défense par rapport à la décision orale du 26 avril 2006[44], rendue par la Chambre sur la base de son pouvoir discrétionnaire, et à l'ordonnance du 27 avril 2006[45] ne relèvent que du dilatoire. Pour cette raison, la Chambre est d'avis que lesdites contestations ne sont pas susceptibles de remettre en cause l'équité du procès ou son issue.

23. Elle note également que l'article 90 (F) du Règlement donne de larges pouvoirs à la Chambre qui exerce un contrôle sur les modalités de l'interrogatoire des témoins et de la présentation des éléments de preuve ainsi que sur l'ordre dans lequel ils interviennent de manière à éviter toute perte de temps injustifiée, notamment en usant de manœuvres dilatoires. Ainsi, alors que tous ses témoins avaient été entendus à l'exclusion de PS2 et de l'accusé, la Défense, malgré les efforts de la Chambre, a refusé de procéder à ces interrogatoires, ne laissant à la Chambre qu'une seule alternative, celle de clôturer la présentation des éléments de preuve à décharge.

24. La Chambre rappelle enfin que la présentation des moyens de preuve a été clôturée le 27 avril 2006, les parties ayant été invitées, par ailleurs, à développer leurs réquisitions et plaidoiries à l'audience du 27 juin 2006. Aussi ne voit-elle pas en quoi le règlement immédiat par la Chambre d'appel des contestations soulevées par la Défense pourrait concrètement faire progresser la procédure.

25. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre est d'avis que les conditions pour la certification d'appel ne sont pas remplies en l'espèce. Elle considère, en conséquence, qu'il y a lieu de déclarer mal fondées les demandes de certification d'appel présentées par la Défense.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE :

ORDONNE la jonction des procédures liées aux requêtes de certification d'appel, présentées par la Défense le 2 mai 2006 ;

REJETTE la demande de la Défense en rappel des témoins de l'accusation YAU, YAT, CBI et CBS ;

REJETTE la demande de certification d'appel contre la décision orale du 26 avril 2006 ;

REJETTE la demande de certification d'appel contre l'ordonnance du 27 avril 2006.

Arusha, le 30 mai 2006.

[43] La Défense a présenté 24 témoins tandis que le Procureur en a présenté 15.

Arguments des parties

Arguments de la Défense

1. La Défense soutient que le 27 avril 2006, la Chambre a rendu une ordonnance fixant la date du 27 juin 2006 pour les réquisitions et plaidoiries des parties, tout en leur enjoignant également de déposer leurs dernières conclusions le 26 mai 2006 pour le Procureur et le 16 juin 2006 pour la Défense[1].

2. La Défense explique que le Procureur a déposé son mémoire final de 142 pages rédigées en anglais au Bureau du Conseil de la Défense au siège du Tribunal sans lui en faire une copie à son lieu de résidence à Douala, au Cameroun. Elle ajoute qu'elle n'a pas encore reçu ledit mémoire et qu'elle n'est donc pas en mesure de respecter le délai du 16 juin 2006 qui lui a été imparti pour le dépôt de son mémoire final. Elle sollicite donc de la Chambre le report du dépôt dudit mémoire au 22 juin 2006, et ce conformément aux dispositions de l'article 86 (B) du Règlement.

3. La Défense fait valoir également qu'aux termes de l'article 20 (4) (a) du Statut, l'accusé a le droit d'être informé des charges retenues contre lui dans une langue qu'il comprend. Elle ajoute qu'en l'espèce, cette disposition légale a été violée par le Procureur.

4. La Défense soutient, enfin, que le mémoire final est une pièce essentielle du procès. A cet égard, elle souligne que la langue de travail de la Défense est le français, et sollicite en conséquence que la Chambre ordonne la traduction dans cette langue du mémoire final du Procureur.

Arguments du Procureur

5. Le Procureur soutient que la Défense a eu communication du mémoire final de l'accusation par l'intermédiaire de son assistante qui en a accusé réception le 29 mai 2006, au bureau du Conseil de la Défense situé dans les locaux du Tribunal, à Arusha. Il ajoute que la traduction de ce mémoire en français sera disponible le 6 juin 2006 et ne s'oppose pas au report, au 22 juin 2006, de la date du dépôt du mémoire final de la Défense.

Délibérations

6. La Chambre rappelle que l'article 31 du Statut stipule que les langues de travail du Tribunal sont l'anglais et le français. Elle relève, par ailleurs, qu'aux termes de l'article 3 (E) du Règlement, il incombe au Greffier de prendre toutes les dispositions nécessaires pour assurer la traduction et l'interprétation dans les langues de travail.

7. La Chambre rappelle, en outre, sa décision du 27 avril 2006 aux termes de laquelle elle a ordonné au Procureur de communiquer son mémoire final le 26 mai 2006 et à la Défense de communiquer le sien le 16 juin 2006[2]. Elle constate qu'à la date du 26 mai 2006, le Procureur a effectivement déposé au Greffe son mémoire final, rédigé en anglais. Elle note également que ce mémoire, comme en atteste la pièce annexée à la présente décision, a été régulièrement communiqué à la Défense le 29 mai 2006, en la personne de son clerc qui en a reçu copie au siège du Tribunal.

8. La Chambre s'appuie enfin sur l'article 86 (B) du Règlement :

> Les dernières conclusions des parties sont déposées auprès de la Chambre de première instance au plus tard cinq jours avant l'audience consacrée aux réquisitions et aux plaidoiries.

9. Elle note qu'en l'espèce, la demande de la Défense aux fins de renvoi au 22 juin 2006 de la date du dépôt de son mémoire final s'inscrit dans la limite du délai de 5 jours prévu à l'article précité, les réquisitions et plaidoiries des parties ayant été fixées au 27 juin 2006. Elle considère en conséquence qu'il y a lieu de faire droit à la demande de la Défense.

[2] Cf. supra, note Erreur ! Signet non défini..

10. La Chambre constate, enfin, que le mémoire final du Procureur a été traduit en français et communiqué à la Défense le 7 juin 2006. Aussi, elle considère que la demande de la Défense aux fins de traduction en français dudit document est sans objet.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE :

FAIT DROIT à la demande de la Défense aux fins de report de la date du dépôt de ses dernières conclusions;

FIXE la date du dépôt desdites conclusions au 22 juin 2006;

REJETTE toutes les autres demandes de la Défense.

LE TRIBUNAL PENAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA (le « Tribunal »),

SIEGEANT en la Chambre de première instance III (la « Chambre »), composée des Juges Andrésia Vaz, Présidente, Karin Hökborg et Gberdao Gustave Kam ;

SAISI d'une requête du Procureur intitulée « Prosecutor's extremely urgent motion to exclude as out of time Seromba's Corrigendum » déposée le 26 juin 2006 ;

CONSIDERANT les arguments oraux développés par les parties à l'audience publique du 27 juin 2006 ;

CONSIDERANT le mémoire final de la Défense déposé au Greffe du Tribunal le 22 juin 2006 (« le mémoire final ou dernières conclusions de la Défense ») ;

CONSIDERANT le Corrigendum de la Défense déposé au Greffe le 26 juin 2006 (« le Corrigendum »);

STATUE comme suit, conformément aux dispositions de l'Article 73 (A) du Règlement de procédure et de preuve (« le Règlement »).

Arguments des parties

1. Le Procureur soutient que le Corrigendum de la Défense a été déposé en violation du délai limite de dépôt de 5 jours prescrit par l'article 86 (B) du Règlement. Il ajoute que ce délai est péremptoire et ne peut donc être modifié.

2. Le Procureur fait valoir, en outre, que le document en cause n'a de corrigendum que le nom. Il allègue, à cet effet, qu'il contient 40 pages de plus que le mémoire final de la Défense. Il ajoute que ce document ne contient aucune information sur les corrections apportées audit mémoire final. Il en déduit que le Corrigendum n'est en fait qu'un nouveau mémoire final présenté par la Défense en violation du délai de 5 jours ci-dessus indiqué.

3. Le Procureur souligne, enfin, qu'il subirait un préjudice si le Corrigendum était admis au dossier car il n'en a pas tenu compte dans la préparation de son réquisitoire. Il explique, en effet, que la présentation de son réquisitoire était prévue pour le 27 juin 2006 alors que le Corrigendum ne lui a été communiqué que le 26 juin 2006.

4. En conséquence, le Procureur sollicite de la Chambre la non admission de ce Corrigendum comme pièce du dossier dans la présente procédure.

5. La Défense soutient que le délai de 5 jours prescrit par 1'Article 86 (B) du Règlement n'est imposé aux parties que pour le dépôt du mémoire final. Il souligne que la Défense s'est conformée à ce délai en déposant son mémoire final le 22 juin 2006. Il explique que le Corrigendum se justifie par le fait que ce mémoire final « était truffé de défauts, de fautes, d'erreurs, et même de parties entières de document qui ne s'y trouvaient pas ».[1] Il ajoute enfin que le Procureur ne peut alléguer d'un préjudice du seul fait qu'il n'aurait pas disposé du temps nécessaire pour prendre connaissance du Corrigendum.

Délibérations

6. La Chambre rappelle les dispositions de l'article 86 (B) du Règlement :

> Les dernières conclusions des parties sont déposées auprès de la Chambre de première instance au plus tard cinq jours avant l'audience consacrée aux réquisitions et aux plaidoiries.

7. La Chambre rappelle également que dans l'affaire Muvunyi, la Chambre de première instance du Tribunal n'a autorisé la Défense à déposer un corrigendum à son mémoire final au-delà du délai prévu par l'article 86 (B) du Règlement qu'après avoir été saisie d'une demande dans ce sens et constaté que le Corrigendum n'apportait aucune modification substantielle aux écritures initiales et qu'aucun nouveau argument n'y était développé.[2]

8. En l'espèce, la Chambre constate que le Corrigendum de la Défense a été déposé au-delà du délai de 5 jours indiqué ci-dessus. Elle note, en outre, que le Corrigendum contient 40 pages de plus que le mémoire final. Elle constate notamment que la Défense y développe des arguments nouveaux qui modifient la substance dudit mémoire final.

9. La Chambre considère dès lors qu'il y a lieu de déclarer bien fondée la requête du Procureur aux fins de non admission du Corrigendum de la Défense.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE,

FAIT DROIT à la requête du Procureur aux fins de non admission du Corrigendum de la Défense déposée au Greffe du Tribunal le 26 juin 2006 ;

ORDONNE le retrait dudit Corrigendum des pièces constituant le dossier de la procédure ;

INVITE le Greffier à prendre toutes les dispositions nécessaires aux fins de l'exécution de la présente décision.

Arusha, le 28 juin 2006.

Table des matières

Chapitre I : Introduction

1. Le présent jugement est rendu en l'affaire Le Procureur c. Athanase Seromba par la Chambre de première instance III (la « Chambre ») du Tribunal pénal international pour le Rwanda (le « Tribunal ») composée des juges Andrésia Vaz, Présidente, Karin Hökborg et Gberdao Gustave Kam.

2. Le Tribunal est régi par le Statut annexé à la résolution 955 du Conseil de sécurité de l'ONU (le « Statut »)[1] et par le Règlement de procédure et de preuve du Tribunal (le « Règlement »)[2].

3. Le Tribunal est habilité à juger les personnes accusées de violations graves du droit international humanitaire commises sur le territoire du Rwanda ainsi que les citoyens rwandais présumés responsables de telles violations commises sur le territoire d'États voisins. Sa compétence est limitée aux actes de génocide, aux crimes contre l'humanité et aux violations graves de l'article 3 commun aux Conventions de Genève et du Protocole additionnel II[3], commis entre le 1er janvier et le 31 décembre 1994[4].

4. La Chambre rappelle que dans la présente instance, elle a déjà dressé le constat judiciaire du fait qu'il ne peut être raisonnablement contesté que des tueries à grande échelle aient été perpétrées au Rwanda en 1994[5]. La Chambre rappelle, en outre, qu'elle a également dressé le constat judiciaire du fait que lors des événements visés dans le présent acte d'accusation, Tutsis, Hutus et Twas étaient identifiés comme des groupes ethniques ou raciaux[6].

5. Elle note, par ailleurs, que la Chambre d'appel a récemment rappelé, dans l'affaire Karemera, que le génocide perpétré au Rwanda est un fait de notoriété publique[7]. Elle souligne toutefois que le constat judiciaire de faits de notoriété publique ne dispense pas le Procureur de son obligation de prouver l'imputabilité à l'accusé des faits spécifiques allégués dans l'Acte d'accusation[8].

6. L'accusé Athanase Seromba est né en 1963 dans la commune de Rutziro, dans la préfecture de Kibuye, au Rwanda. Formé au grand séminaire de Nyakibanda[9], il a été ordonné prêtre en juillet 1993[10]. En avril 1994, il était prêtre à la paroisse de Nyange, dans la commune de Kivumu.

7. Dans l'Acte d'accusation en date du 8 juin 2001 (l'« Acte d'accusation ») enregistré au Greffe du Tribunal le 5 juillet 2001[11], le Procureur retient quatre chefs contre Athanase Seromba :

8. Chef 1 : Génocide[12] : Le Procureur du Tribunal pénal international pour le Rwanda accuse Athanase Seromba de génocide, sous l'empire de l'Article 2 (3) (a) du Statut, en ce que, entre le 6 avril 1994 et le 20 avril 1994 ou à ces dates, dans la commune de Kivumu, préfecture de Kibuye au Rwanda, Seromba a été responsable de meurtres ou d'atteintes graves à l'intégrité physique ou mentale de membres de la population tutsie, commis dans l'intention de détruire, en tout ou en partie, un groupe racial ou ethnique; et en vertu de l'Article 6 (1) du Statut : par ses actes positifs, en ce que l'accusé a planifié, incité à commettre, ordonné de commettre, commis ou de toute autre manière aidé et encouragé à planifier, préparer ou exécuter l'infraction retenue contre lui.

9. Chef 2 : Complicité dans le génocide[13] : Le Procureur du Tribunal pénal international pour le Rwanda accuse Athanase Seromba de complicité dans le génocide, sous l'empire de l'Article 2 (3) (e) du Statut, en ce que, entre le 6 avril 1994 et le 20 avril 1994 ou à ces dates, dans la commune de Kivumu, préfecture de Kibuye au Rwanda, Seromba s'est rendu coupable de complicité de meurtres ou d'atteintes graves à l'intégrité physique ou mentale de membres de la population tutsie, commis dans l'intention de détruire, en tout ou en partie, un groupe racial ou ethnique; et en vertu de l'Article 6 (1) du Statut : par ses actes positifs, en ce que l'accusé a planifié, incité à commettre, ordonné de commettre, commis et aidé et encouragé à planifier, préparer et exécuter l'infraction retenue contre lui.

10. Chef 3 : Entente en vue de commettre le génocide[14] : Le Procureur du Tribunal pénal international pour le Rwanda accuse Athanase Seromba d'entente en vue de commettre le génocide, sous l'empire de l'Article 2 (3) (b) du Statut, en ce que, entre les 6 et 20 avril 1994 ou à ces dates, dans la préfecture de Kivumu au Rwanda, Seromba, prêtre responsable de la paroisse de Nyange, s'est effectivement entendu avec Grégoire Ndahimana, bourgmestre de la commune de Kivumu, Fulgence Kayishema, inspecteur de police de la commune de Kivumu, Télesphore Ndungutse, Gaspard Kanyarukiga et d'autres personnes inconnues du Procureur, pour tuer des membres de la population tutsie ou porter des atteintes graves à leur intégrité physique ou mentale, dans l'intention de détruire, en tout ou en partie, un groupe racial ou ethnique; et en vertu de l'Article 6 (1) du Statut : par ses actes positifs, en ce que l'accusé a planifié, incité à commettre, ordonné de commettre, commis ou de toute autre manière aidé et encouragé à planifier, préparer ou exécuter l'infraction retenue contre lui.

11. Chef 4 : Crime contre l'humanité (extermination)[15] : Le Procureur du Tribunal pénal international pour le Rwanda accuse Athanase Seromba de crime contre l'humanité (extermination) sous l'empire de l'Article 2 (3) (b) du Statut, en ce que, entre les 7 et 20 avril 1994 ou à ces dates, dans la préfecture de Kibuye (Rwanda), Seromba a tué ou fait tuer des personnes lors de massacres perpétrés dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée ou systématique dirigée contre une population civile en raison de son appartenance politique, ethnique ou raciale; et en vertu de l'Article 6 (1) du Statut : par ses actes positifs, en ce que l'accusé a planifié de commettre, incité à commettre, ordonné de commettre, commis ou de toute autre manière aidé et encouragé à planifier, préparer ou exécuter l'infraction retenue contre lui.

12. Le texte intégral de l'Acte d'accusation est annexé au présent jugement[16].

13. L'accusé Athanase Seromba qui s'était exilé à Florence, en Italie, s'est livré aux autorités du Tribunal le 6 février 2002 sans que le mandat d'arrêt[17] délivré par le Tribunal à son encontre n'ait été exécuté par les autorités italiennes qui en avaient reçu notification le 10 juillet 2001[18]. L'accusé a comparu pour la première fois devant la Juge Navanethem Pillay le 8 février 2002 et a plaidé non coupable[19]. Son procès a débuté le 20 septembre 2004 et a pris fin le 27 juin 2006[20].

Chapitre III : Conclusions factuelles

1. Questions préliminaires

1.1. Des vices de l'Acte d'accusation

1.1.1. Le Droit applicable aux recours en constatation des vices de l'Acte d'accusation

[20] Voir Annexe I : Historique de la procédure.

14. La Chambre note que conformément à l'article 72 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve, les vices de l'Acte d'accusation doivent, en principe, être soulevés dans la phase préalable au procès[21] sauf dérogation accordée par la Chambre à toute partie de le faire à tout autre stade de la procédure.

15. En l'espèce, la Chambre constate que la demande de la Défense en constatation de vices de l'Acte d'accusation ne respecte pas, dans la forme, les prescriptions énoncées ci-dessus en ce qu'elle n'a pas été présentée en phase préalable au procès mais plutôt dans ses conclusions finales, c'est-à-dire après la clôture des débats. Elle relève, en outre, que jusqu'à la clôture des débats, la Défense n'a sollicité ni obtenu de dérogation de la Chambre à l'effet d'introduire toute demande en constatation de vices de l'Acte d'accusation.

16. La Chambre rappelle qu'appelée à se prononcer sur la question de savoir si une Chambre de première instance pouvait, après la clôture des débats, conclure qu'un acte d'accusation était entaché de vices, la Chambre d'appel, dans l'affaire Ntagerura, a indiqué qu'elle ne pouvait pas le faire sans donner au préalable aux parties l'opportunité d'être entendues, ce que seule une réouverture des débats lui aurait permis d'atteindre[22].

17. De ce qui précède, la Chambre est d'avis que toute modification de l'Acte d'accusation pour vices peut intervenir même au stade du délibéré de la Chambre à la seule condition que la Chambre ait au préalable ordonné la réouverture des débats. Dès lors, elle considère que la question qui se pose en l'espèce est de savoir si les arguments présentés par la Défense, à l'appui de sa demande en constatation de vices de l'Acte d'accusation, sont de nature à justifier une éventuelle modification de l'Acte d'accusation dans un souci d'équité du procès. Dans une telle hypothèse, la réouverture des débats s'imposerait à la Chambre.

18. Pour répondre à cette question, la Chambre examinera successivement les arguments développés par la Défense dans ses conclusions finales[23], même si cela peut paraître surabondant.

1.1.2. L'examen des arguments de la Défense

Les allégations de la Défense visant le paragraphe 5 de l'Acte d'accusation

19. La Chambre note que la Défense a soutenu que le Procureur se contente d'affirmer qu'Athanase Seromba, « prêtre responsable de la paroisse de Nyange et d'autres personnes inconnues du Procureur », a préparé et exécuté un plan d'extermination de la population tutsie sans toutefois préciser la nature dudit plan, ni la date et le lieu de sa conception, les personnes qui l'auraient conçu, les moyens mis en œuvre pour l'exécuter ou encore le rôle exact que l'accusé aurait eu dans la conception, l'élaboration et l'exécution de ce plan.

20. La Chambre note, en outre, que la Défense a allégué qu'en se bornant seulement à dire que suite à la mort du Président rwandais le 6 avril 1994, des attaques ont été perpétrées contre les Tutsis dans la commune de Kivumu entraînant la mort de plusieurs d'entre eux, le Procureur ne permet pas de savoir l'identité des auteurs de ces attaques, ni celle de leurs concepteurs, ni le lieu où ces attaques

[22] Ntagerura, Arrêt, 7 juillet 2006, para. 55 : « Dans le cas d'espèce, la Chambre d'appel considère que, dès lors que la Chambre de première instance avait décidé de reconsidérer ses décisions préalables au procès sur le degré de précision des Actes d'accusation au stade du délibéré, elle aurait dû interrompre le cours de ses délibérations et procéder à la réouverture des débats. À un stade aussi avancé du procès, après que tous les moyens de preuve aient été présentés et les conclusions finales des parties entendues, le Procureur ne pouvait proposer une modification des Actes d'accusation. La réouverture des débats lui aurait en revanche permis de tenter de convaincre la Chambre de première instance de la justesse de ses premières décisions relatives à la forme de l'acte d'Accusation, ou, le cas échéant, de ce que les vices en question avaient été purgés. La Chambre d'appel considère que la Chambre de première instance a versé dans l'erreur en ne disant mot jusqu'au rendu du Jugement de sa décision de juger les parties susmentionnées des Actes d'accusation viciées ».

[23] Conclusions finales de la Défense, pp. 40-42.

se sont déroulées, ni la manière dont elles ont été exécutées ou encore si Athanase Seromba y avait participé.

Les autres allégations de la Défense

22. La Défense a allégué également du manque de précisions des paragraphes 7, 8, 11, 14, 15, 16 et 17 de l'Acte d'accusation qui se rapportent respectivement aux faits d'élaboration d'une liste de réfugiés par l'accusé, de la tenue de réunions auxquelles l'accusé aurait participé, au refoulement par l'accusé des employés tutsis de la paroisse, à la fermeture des portes de l'église et à la tenue d'une réunion le 14 avril 1994. Sur ces différents points, la Chambre considère que les allégations de la Défense sont mal fondées dans la mesure où des détails essentiels sont fournis aussi bien dans l'Acte d'accusation que dans le mémoire préalable du Procureur qui a été communiqué à la Défense dans des délais raisonnables pour lui permettre de se préparer pour le procès.

1.1.3. Conclusions de la Chambre

23. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre est d'avis que les arguments présentés par la Défense ne permettent pas d'établir que l'Acte d'accusation contient de vices qui auraient nécessité sa modification éventuelle. Elle rejette donc en l'état toutes les prétentions de la Défense en constatation des vices de l'Acte d'accusation et considère, en conséquence, qu'il n'y a pas lieu de procéder à la réouverture des débats.

1.2. De la preuve du bon caractère de l'accusé

24. Dans ses conclusions finales, la Défense a soutenu que le bon caractère d'un accusé peut constituer un élément de preuve pertinent dans l'évaluation de la probabilité que cet accusé a pu commettre les crimes mis à sa charge[24]. Le Procureur n'a pas présenté d'argument sur ce point.

25. La Chambre considère que les éléments de preuve dont elle doit évaluer la valeur probante au stade du délibéré sont en principe ceux que les parties ont fait valoir lors de la présentation de leurs moyens de preuve, conformément aux dispositions des articles 89 à 98 bis du Règlement.

26. La Chambre note que la valeur probante du bon caractère de l'accusé avant les faits qui lui sont reprochés est généralement limitée en droit pénal international[25]. Elle relève que la preuve du bon caractère de l'accusé est plutôt prise en considération au moment de la détermination de la peine[26]. Elle observe toutefois que le bon caractère de l'accusé excipé comme moyen de preuve n'est pas totalement dénué de toute pertinence toutes les fois qu'il en est établi le caractère particulièrement probant charges retenues contre l'accusé[27].

27. En l'espèce, la Chambre constate que la Défense n'a allégué la preuve du bon caractère de l'accusé qu'après la clôture des débats, mettant ainsi le Procureur dans l'impossibilité de présenter des arguments sur ce point. En outre, elle constate qu'en se bornant à soutenir que l'accusé ne s'est «…jamais défavorablement fait connaître par ses ouailles de la paroisse de Nyange avant les événements du 6 avril 1994…»[28], la Défense ne montre pas le caractère particulièrement probant du bon caractère de l'accusé au regard des charges retenues contre lui.

28. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre ne retiendra pas le bon caractère de l'accusé comme élment de preuve au dossier, mais le prendra éventuellement en considération dans ses discussions sur la détermination de la peine.

1.3. Des allégations à caractère général dans l'Acte d'accusation

29. La Chambre constate qu'il a été déjà dressé constat judiciaire du fait visé au paragraphe 1 de l'Acte d'accusation, à savoir que le Rwanda était divisé en trois groupes ethniques : Tutsis, Hutus et Twas[29]. Dès lors, elle considère que cette allégation est d'ordre général.

30. La Chambre constate que le paragraphe 24 de l'Acte d'accusation ne donne qu'une description générale des attaques contre les réfugiés et des intentions des assaillants, sans mettre à la charge de l'accusé Athanase Seromba tout acte ou fait spécifique. En conséquence, elle considère que cette allégation à un caractère général.

31. La Chambre relève que le fait relatif à l'arrivée d'un autobus, visé au paragraphe 18 de l'Acte d'accusation, ne présente aucun intérêt par rapport aux faits reprochés à l'accusé Athanase Seromba. Elle considère, en conséquence, que cette allégation a un caractère général.

32. La Chambre observe que les allégations visées aux paragraphes 5, 33, 34, 35 et 45 de l'Acte d'accusation évoquent sommairement un plan d'extermination impliquant l'accusé, sans qu'aucun fait spécifique ne soit mis à la charge de l'accusé. Elle considère donc que ces allégations ont un caractère général.

33. La Chambre note que l'allégation de détournement de biens de la paroisse par l'accusé visée au paragraphe 32 de l'Acte d'accusation n'a été soutenue par aucun élément de preuve. Elle en déduit donc que cette allégation a un caractère général.

34. La Chambre relève que l'allégation contenue au paragraphe 50 de l'Acte d'accusation entre dans le cadre du contexte général des événements survenus à Nyange en avril 1994. Elle la considère, en conséquence, comme une allégation à caractère général.

35. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre considère qu'il n'y a pas lieu de traiter de ces allégations à caractère général dans ses conclusions factuelles.

2. De la commune de kivumu, de la paroisse de nyange et des fonctions par l'accuse

36. La Commune de Kivumu est située dans la préfecture de Kibuye, en République du Rwanda[30]. En 1994, la population de cette commune était estimée au moins 53000 habitants dont environ 6000 Tutsis[31].

37. La paroisse de Nyange se trouvait dans le secteur de Nyange situé dans la commune de Kivumu. L'église de Nyange mesurait 55 mètres de long sur 19 mètres de large[32]. Cette église avait une capacité d'accueil d'au moins 1500 personnes[33].

38. La Chambre note qu'au moment des faits visés dans l'Acte d'accusation, Athanase Seromba était prêtre à la paroisse de Nyange où il avait été affecté en qualité de vicaire[34]. Plusieurs témoignages établissent que le curé de la paroisse de Nyange l'Abbé Straton avait déjà quitté cette paroisse au moment des événements qui s'y sont déroulés au mois d'avril 1994[35]. Ces mêmes témoignages établissent également que Seromba avait alors hérité de la gestion quotidienne de la paroisse, en attendant de rejoindre son nouveau poste à la paroisse de la Crête Zaïre Nil où il avait été affecté depuis le 17 mars 1994[36]. La Chambre observe, en outre, à la lumière de ces témoignages ainsi que des conclusions factuelles ci-dessus développées, que Seromba a posé plusieurs actes qui démontrent qu'il avait la charge de la gestion quotidienne de la paroisse de Nyange au moment des événements d'avril 1994[37]. Dès lors, elle est d'avis que l'accusé Seromba a agi comme responsable de la paroisse de Nyange au moment des événements qui s'y sont déroulés au mois d'avril 1994.

3. Des evenements du 6 au 10 avril 1994 dans la commune de Kivumu

3.1. L'Acte d'accusation

39. L'Acte d'accusation allègue ce qui suit:

> 8. Athanase Seromba a posé des questions aux réfugiés transférés à la paroisse sur ceux qui n'étaient pas encore arrivés ; puis, il a noté les noms des réfugiés qui manquaient sur une liste qu'il a remise au bourgmestre Grégoire Ndahimana aux fins qu'ils soient cherchés et conduits à la paroisse.
> 9. C'est sur la base de cette liste qu'un Tutsi du nom d'Alexis Karake, sa femme et ses enfants (plus de six) ont été conduits de la cellule de Gakoma à l'église de Nyange.

39. Vers le 12 avril 1994 ou à cette date, le bourgmestre Grégoire Ndahimana a donné l'ordre aux policiers communaux de rechercher les civils tutsis inscrits sur la liste élaborée par Athanase Seromba, tel qu'indiqué supra, et de les conduire à l'église. »

3.2. Des attaques perpétrées contre les Tutsis dans la commune de Kivumu causant la mort de certains civils tutsis dont Grégoire Ndakubana, Martin Karekezi et Thomas Mwendezi

3.2.1. La preuve

Les témoins du Procureur

40. Le témoin CDL, un Hutu[38], a déclaré que le soir du 7 au 8 avril 1994, une attaque dirigée par Ndungutse a été lancée contre la famille tutsie Ndakubana[39]. CDL a, en outre, soutenu que dans la nuit du 9 au 10 avril 1994, au centre de Nyange, un commerçant et un moniteur agricole du nom de Martin ont été tués[40]. Le témoin a enfin déclaré que les autorités, à savoir le bourgmestre, l'inspecteur de police judiciaire et d'autres autorités communales violaient la loi qu'ils étaient censés pourtant faire respecter[41].

41. Le témoin CBJ, un Tutsi[42], a indiqué que les massacres dans la cellule de Murambi qu'il habitait, ont commencé le 7 avril 1994. Il a expliqué, en outre, que dans la nuit du 7 avril 1994, les membres de la famille Rudakubana ont été tués par un enseignant nommé Télesphore Ndungutse. Il a ajouté également qu'entre le 7 et le 9 avril 1994, Martin, un Tutsi originaire du secteur de Ngobagoba, dans la localité de Gasake, a été tué lors d'une attaque lancée par l'homme d'affaires Gaspard Kanyarukiga[43].

42. Le témoin CBN, un Tutsi[44], a affirmé qu'un certain Thomas avait été tué lors des attaques contre les Tutsis peu après la mort du Président[45].

43. Les témoins FE31, FE13, FE56 et CF14 ont soutenu que des assaillants hutus ont mené une attaque contre la famille tutsie Ndakubana[46]. FE13 et CF14 ont notamment déclaré que suite à cet incident, l'insécurité s'est accrue au niveau communal dans la nuit du 7 au 8 avril 1994[47]. Ils ont, en outre, expliqué qu'au cours de la même nuit, la famille de Thomas Mwendezi, d'ethnie tutsie, a été tuée lors d'une attaque dans le secteur de Kigali[48].

3.2.2.* Conclusions de la Chambre

44. La Chambre estime que les témoins CDL, CBJ et CBN sont crédibles lorsqu'ils parlent du meurtre de Ndakubana. En effet, leurs déclarations ne se contredisent pas, d'une part, et sont toutes corroborées par celles des témoins de la Défense, d'autre part. Elle considère, en conséquence, qu'il est établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable que des attaques ont été perpétrées contre les Tutsis dans la commune de Kivumu causant la mort de certains d'entre eux dont Grégoire Ndakubana, Martin Karakezi et Thomas Mwendezi.

3.3. De la recherche de refuge par les Tutsis dans des bâtiments publics et des églises dont celle de Nyange

Les témoins du Procureur

45. Les témoins YAU, une Tutsie[49], et CBS, un Tutsi[50], ont déclaré avoir trouvé, à leur arrivée à l'église le 12 avril 1994, d'autres réfugiés en majorité d'ethnie tutsie[51].

46. Le témoin CBI, un Tutsi[52], a affirmé que plusieurs personnes sont arrivées à la paroisse à bord de voitures, dont l'une de marque Toyota et de couleur blanche conduite par un certain Yohana ou Jean surnommé également Jigoma[53]. Le témoin a également soutenu que des autorités étaient impliquées dans le transport des réfugiés à la paroisse. Parmi ces dernières, il a cité Grégoire Ndahimana, Clément Kayishema, Gaspard Kanyarukiga et Télesphore Ndungutse[54].

47. Le témoin CBN, un Tutsi[55], a déclaré avoir cherché refuge à l'église de Nyange à partir du 12 avril 1994[56]. Il a affirmé, en outre, que plusieurs personnes affluaient à la paroisse à bord d'un véhicule appartenant à un certain Rwamasirabo[57].

48. Le témoin CBJ[58] a déclaré qu'il a trouvé des réfugiés Tutsis à son arrivée à la paroisse de Nyange le 10 avril 1994. Il a également soutenu que dans la soirée du 10 avril 1994, Athanase Seromba avait demandé au veilleur de nuit du nom de Canisius Habiyambere et au grand séminariste Apollinaire Hakizimana de compter les réfugiés qui y passeraient la nuit. Le témoin CBJ a ajouté, enfin, que le décompte effectué indiquait le nombre de 48 réfugiés[59].

49. Le témoin CBK, un Hutu[60], a rapporté que les Tutsis attaqués par les Hutus ont choisi de se réfugier à la paroisse de Nyange qu'ils considéraient comme un « lieu sûr ». Il a souligné, en outre, que les premiers réfugiés sont arrivés à la paroisse vers le 8 avril 1994[61].

50. Le témoin CDL, un Hutu[62], a déclaré que des Tutsis se sont réfugiés de leur propre gré à la paroisse de Nyange ou au Bureau communal[63].

51. Le témoin BZ3, qui est d'ethnie Hutu[64], a déclaré avoir constaté la présence de réfugiés à l'église de Nyange en participant à la messe du matin, le 11 avril 1994[65]. Le témoin a, en outre, indiqué que ces réfugiés ont également assisté à la messe[66]. Il a, par ailleurs, précisé que ces derniers n'étaient pas nombreux[67]. Selon le témoin, les Tutsis se réfugiaient à l'église parce que les Hutus incendiaient leurs maisons[68]. Le témoin BZ3 a également soutenu avoir vu des réfugiés se diriger vers le Bureau communal pendant qu'elle retournait chez elle après la messe[69]. Elle a ajouté que lorsque ces derniers y parvenaient, ils étaient ensuite réorientés vers l'église[70]. Le témoin a indiqué enfin avoir vu plusieurs personnes être conduites au Bureau communal à bord du véhicule appartenant à Aloys Rwamasirabo et conduit par Jigoma[71].

52. Le témoin CF14, un Hutu[72], a affirmé ne pas avoir vu de réfugiés au Bureau communal le 12 avril 1994, mais qu'il a toutefois appris que le bourgmestre avait fait « embarquer » des personnes très tôt le matin pour la paroisse[73].

53. Le témoin FE32, un Hutu[74], a expliqué que les Tutsis ont pris la fuite pour l'église dès qu'ils ont constaté qu'ils étaient en danger du fait des persécutions ayant cours[75]. Il a également indiqué que les Tutsis ont cherché refuge à l'église de Nyange en croyant que ce lieu pouvait leur garantir une protection contre les attaques, comme dans le passé. Le témoin a ajouté, enfin, que les Tutsis se sont rendus à l'église de leur propre gré[76].

3.3.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

54. La Chambre constate que toutes les déclarations des témoins aussi bien ceux de l'accusation que ceux de la Défense sont concordantes sur le fait que des Tutsis habitant la commune de Kivumu ont volontairement cherché refuge dans des bâtiments publics comme le Bureau communal ou dans des églises dont celle de Nyange. Elle considère donc que ce fait est établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable.

3.4. De la remise par Athanase Seromba au Bourgmestre de la commune d'une liste de Tutsis devant être recherchés et conduits à l'église de Nyange

3.4.1. La preuve

Le témoin du Procureur

55. Le témoin CBI[77] a déclaré avoir donné à Athanase Seromba, qui lui en avait fait la demande, les noms de plusieurs personnes d'origine tutsie habitant Nyange et qui n'étaient pas présentes à la paroisse. Il a ajouté que l'accusé en a dressé une liste qu'il a ensuite transmise à Grégoire Ndahimana, le bourgmestre de la Commune[78]. Parmi les noms que le témoin CBI dit avoir communiqués à Seromba figurent notamment ceux d'Antoine Karake, d'Aloys Rwemera et de ceux des membres de sa famille, d'Épimaque Ruratsire et de Vénust Ryanyundo[79]. Le témoin a affirmé, en outre, que le 13 avril 1994, Antoine Karake est arrivé à l'église de Nyange à bord d'un véhicule confisqué[80].

56. Au cours du contre-interrogatoire, le témoin CBI a déclaré qu'il est arrivé à l'église de Nyange dans la soirée du mardi 12 avril 1994[81]. Il a ajouté qu'il y a trouvé environ un millier de personnes venues s'y réfugier. Il a en outre précisé, avoir rencontré Athanase Seromba le lendemain de son arrivée et que ce dernier lui aurait demandé s'il y avait encore des personnes restées dans certains secteurs de la commune. Le témoin a indiqué avoir répondu par l'affirmative en communiquant les noms de certaines personnes[82]. A la question du conseil de la Défense de savoir comment le témoin a pu constater l'absence de ces personnes dans une foule qu'il a lui-même estimée à environ 1000 personnes, ce dernier a répondu qu'il y avait une différence entre « dénombrer les personnes et les reconnaître » avant d'ajouter, plus loin, qu'il avait remarqué que ces personnes étaient absentes simplement parce qu'il les connaissait[83].

57. Le témoin PA1, un Hutu[84], a affirmé être arrivé à la paroisse de Nyange le dimanche 10 avril 1994[85]. Il a déclaré n'avoir jamais entendu parler d'une liste de personnes d'origine tutsie[86].

58. Le témoin FE32 est un Hutu qui a témoigné à visage découvert sous le nom d'Anastase Nkinamubanzi. Il a déclaré que lors des événements d'avril 1994, il travaillait pour la société Astaldi qui avait la charge du chantier de construction de la route Rubengera-Gisenyi[87]. Il a, en outre, affirmé être le conducteur du bulldozer qui a détruit l'église de Nyange[88]. Il a ajouté avoir été condamné à la prison à vie par un tribunal rwandais pour ce fait[89]. Le témoin a enfin soutenu qu'il n'y a jamais eu de liste de Tutsis[90].

59. Le témoin FE27, un Hutu[91], a déclaré ne pas avoir eu connaissance de l'existence d'une liste de personnes établie par Athanase Seromba. Il a, en outre, souligné qu'il en aurait été informé[92].

3.4.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

60. La Chambre note que le témoin CBI est le seul témoin du Procureur qui a soutenu qu'Athanase Seromba a établi une liste de personnes d'origine tutsie qu'il aurait ensuite remise au bourgmestre afin que ces personnes soient recherchées et conduites à la paroisse de Nyange. Elle n'est pas convaincue par les affirmations du témoin CBI sur les possibilités qu'il avait, une fois arrivée à la paroisse de Nyange le 12 avril 1994, de se rendre immédiatement compte de l'absence d'une dizaine de personnes dans une foule de 1000 personnes. En effet, le témoin s'est contenté de dire qu'il a constaté l'absence de ces personnes par le seul fait qu'il les connaissait sans toutefois préciser les observations qu'il aurait faites ou les moyens qu'il aurait utilisés pour s'en rendre compte. Elle estime, en conséquence, que le témoin CBI n'est pas crédible. Elle en conclut que le Procureur n'a pas établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable qu'Athanase Seromba a dressé une liste de personnes qu'il aurait remise au bourgmestre pour les rechercher et les conduire à la paroisse de Nyange.

4.2. De la réunion du 10 avril 1994

Le témoin du Procureur

62. Le témoin YAT, un Tutsi[93], a déclaré qu'une réunion du conseil paroissial s'est tenue dans les bâtiments des prêtres vers le 10 avril 1994 »[94] à laquelle il a participé ainsi qu'Athanase Seromba, Kabwana, le bourgmestre Ndahimana, l'inspecteur de police judiciaire Fulgence Kayishema, l'inspecteur Aloys Uwoyiremye et d'autres membres du conseil paroissial[95]. Il a expliqué qu'il s'agissait d'une réunion extraordinaire dont l'ordre du jour était lié à l'insécurité qui régnait dans la commune suite à la mort du Président Habyarimana et aux attaques perpétrées contre les Tutsis[96]. Le témoin YAT a, en outre, indiqué que lors de cette réunion, Seromba aurait affirmé que le président Habyarimana avait été tué par les Inkotanyi et a estimé que la question des personnes tuées était un problème d'ordre politique qui ne relevait pas en tant que tel de la compétence du conseil paroissial[97]. Le témoin a également souligné que cette réunion du comité paroissial était la dernière à laquelle il a participé[98].

[98] Transcriptions du 30 septembre 2004, p. 22 (audience publique).

63. Le témoin YAT a, par ailleurs, déclaré que Fulgence Kayishema lui aurait dit le 11 avril 1994 qu'une réunion aurait eu lieu le 10 avril 1994 à la paroisse de Nyange au cours de laquelle la décision de tuer les Tutsis a été prise. Il a ajouté que Kanyarukiga, Athanase Seromba, le bourgmestre Ndahimana et Kayishema étaient présents à cette réunion[99].

Le témoin de la Défense

64. Le témoin FE27 a affirmé que lors de la réunion du 11 avril 1994, le bourgmestre Grégoire Ndahimana a déclaré avoir rencontré Athanase Seromba la veille de cette réunion et que ce dernier lui aurait parlé des Tutsis qui s'étaient réfugiés à l'église de Nyange[100].

4.2.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

65. La Chambre note que la Défense ne produit aucune preuve de nature à contredire le témoignage du témoin de YAT sur la tenue d'une réunion du conseil paroissial à l'église de Nyange le 10 avril 1994. En effet, le témoin de la Défense FE27 ne contredit nullement le témoin YAT lorsqu'il dit avoir entendu le bourgmestre informer les participants à la réunion du 11 avril 1994 de la rencontre qu'il avait eue avec Athanase Seromba la veille, c'est-à-dire le 10 avril 1994. La Chambre estime qu'une telle rencontre a bien pu s'inscrire dans le cadre de la réunion du conseil paroissial du 10 avril 1994 qu'évoque le témoin YAT qui a affirmé être membre dudit conseil, ce qui n'a pas été contesté par la Défense. Elle est également d'avis que les détails fournis par le témoin YAT sur la tenue de cette réunion sont cohérents. La Chambre considère, en conséquence, qu'il est crédible sur la tenue de la réunion du conseil paroissial du 10 avril 1994. Elle estime toutefois que le témoin YAT ne peut être considéré crédible sur la tenue d'une deuxième réunion le 10 avril 1994 à la paroisse de Nyange dans la mesure où cette information qui lui a été rapportée n'est soutenue par aucun autre témoignage. S'agissant enfin du témoin FE27 qui n'a pas spécifiquement déposé sur la réunion du conseil paroissial du 10 avril 1994, la Chambre estime qu'il n'en demeure pas moins crédible sur la tenue d'une réunion à la paroisse le 10 avril 1994, son témoignage étant renforcé par le récit du témoin YAT.

66. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre conclut que le Procureur a établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable qu'une réunion du conseil paroissial a eu lieu le 10 avril 1994 à la paroisse de Nyange et à laquelle ont notamment participé le témoin YAT, Athanase Seromba et d'autres personnes.

4.3. De la réunion du 11 avril 1994 au Bureau communal

Les témoins du Procureur

67. Le témoin CNJ, un Hutu[101], a déclaré que son oncle l'a informé qu'une réunion s'est tenue au Bureau communal le 11 avril 1994 au cours de laquelle des décisions ont été prises dont notamment celle de regrouper les Tutsis à l'église de Nyange[102]. Il a, en outre, affirmé que n'ayant pas participé aux réunions, il n'était pas en mesure de dire exactement quand la décision de détruire l'église avait été prise[103].

[103] Transcriptions du 25 janvier 2005, p. 18 (audience publique).

68 Le témoin CDL, un Hutu[104], a expliqué que les réunions du comité de sécurité se tenaient au Bureau communal ou à la paroisse. Il a ajouté que ces réunions se tenaient régulièrement à l'initiative du bourgmestre[105]. Il a également précisé que les chefs de service et les autorités religieuses étaient invités à participer à ces réunions[106] Le témoin a soutenu enfin qu'Athanase Seromba a participé à la réunion du 11 avril 1994 du comité de sécurité[107].

69. Le témoin FE13 a déclaré que la réunion du 11 avril 1994 était présidée par le bourgmestre Grégoire Ndahimana [108] qui aurait informé l'assistance que l'ordre du jour porterait sur des questions de sécurité et le sort des réfugiés tutsis[109]. Il a ajouté que seule une situation exceptionnelle justifiait la tenue d'une telle réunion[110]. Le témoin a, en outre, expliqué qu'en général, toute réunion traitant des questions de sécurité impliquait également la présence des conseillers de secteur qui faisaient des recommandations aux autorités[111] ainsi que celle de l'inspecteur de police judiciaire en charge des questions sécuritaires dans la commune et du président du tribunal de canton[112]. Il a par ailleurs indiqué que participaient également à cette réunion de nombreux Tutsis parmi lesquels Charles Mugenzi, responsable du centre de santé de Nyange, Boniface Gatare, encadreur de la jeunesse de la commune et Lambert Gatare, responsable politique[113]. Le témoin FE13 a enfin déclaré que des décisions ont été arrêtées à l'issue de la réunion dont notamment le regroupement des Tutsis à la paroisse de Nyange[114] et la demande de renfort militaire à la préfecture de Kibuye[115].

70. Le témoin FE27, un Hutu[116], a déclaré qu'il était présent à la réunion du 11 avril 1994 qui s'est tenue au bureau communal. Il a indiqué que cette réunion qui portait d'ordinaire sur les problèmes liés au développement économique de la commune, s'est transformée en réunion de comité sécurité à l'initiative du bourgmestre[117]. Le témoin a ajouté qu'Athanase Seromba n'a pas participé à cette réunion[118]. Il a, par ailleurs, déclaré qu'au cours de cette réunion, le bourgmestre Ndahimana a lu une lettre que lui a adressée Seromba et aux termes de laquelle ce dernier l'informait de sa décision de ne pas y participer tout en restant solidaire des décisions qui en sortiraient.

71. Le témoin CF23, un Hutu[119], a déclaré que la réunion du 11 avril 1994 a été convoquée par le bourgmestre de la commune, Ndahimana. Il a ajouté que cette réunion avait pour objectif de faire la mise au point de la situation, de prendre toutes les mesures nécessaires pour faire cesser les tueries et enfin de discuter de l'organisation de l'accueil des réfugiés à la paroisse de Nyange[120]. Il a indiqué que des Tutsis dont notamment Charles Mugenzi et Boniface Gatare ont participé activement participé à cette réunion[121]. Le témoin a, par ailleurs, souligné que les participants à cette réunion étaient contre les tueries. Il a, en outre, déclaré qu'Athanase Seromba n'était pas présent à cette réunion mais qu'il avait écrit une lettre au bourgmestre qui a été lue au cours de la réunion[122]. Dans cette lettre, a poursuivi le témoin, Seromba demandait à la commune d'assurer la protection des réfugiés ainsi que leur approvisionnement en nourriture en suggérant aux autorités de solliciter l'aide de la Caritas. Le témoin CF23 a expliqué, enfin, qu'à l'issue de cette réunion, le bourgmestre a demandé du renfort de gendarmes de la préfecture de Kibuye, comme le lui avaient recommandé les participants[123].

4.3.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

72. La Chambre considère que les témoignages de CNJ et CDL ne sont pas fiables. Elle note, en effet, que le premier a témoigné par ouï-dire. Quant au second témoin, la Chambre observe que rien dans son témoignage n'établit qu'il aurait lui-même assisté à la réunion du 11 avril 1994. En effet, suite à une question du conseil de la Défense portant sur la réunion du 13 avril 1994, le témoin a dit ce qui suit : « Je crois que j'ai bien dit que, de par mon témoignage, il y a des faits dont j'ai été témoin oculaire […] et les autres qui m'ont été rapportés – notamment ces réunions»[124]. Par ailleurs, le témoin n'a pas pu justifier de façon convaincante le fait qu'il ait omis de mentionner la présence des religieux dans ses déclarations antérieures alors qu'il le fait dans son témoignage devant la Chambre. En effet, à la question du conseil de la Défense de savoir pourquoi, devant les tribunaux rwandais, il n'a pas mentionné les religieux, au moment où il donnait les noms des participants aux réunions du comité de sécurité, le témoin a répondu que quand il a commencé à témoigner en 1999, il ne pouvait pas « tout dire d'un seul coup parce qu'à l'époque, ce n'était pas clair de comprendre la raison de dire tout sur la vérité »[125].

73. Les témoins FE27 et CF23 ne peuvent pas être considérés comme crédibles sur ce fait en raison des contradictions qui existent entre leurs témoignages et leurs déclarations antérieures. En ce qui concerne FE27, la Chambre note que dans sa déclaration du 25 janvier 2002, ce témoin a déclaré ce qui suit: « L'abbé Seromba participait aussi à cette réunion car on examinait le problème de rassembler les réfugiés à l'église pour assurer leur sécurité »[126]. Le témoin confirme avoir signé cette déclaration et avoir tenu ces propos[127]. Par contre, il a dit avoir menti aux membres du comité « vérité » « puisqu'ils disaient que si je déclarais que Seromba était à la réunion, j'allais être libéré »[128]. S'agissant de CF23, la Chambre relève que dans sa déclaration du 14 août 2002, ce témoin a déclaré ce qui suit : « […] plusieurs personnes ont assisté à cette réunion, je me rappelle avoir reconnu […] le Père Seromba […] »[129]. Le témoin a soutenu n'avoir signé que sur la dernière page de sa déclaration du 14 août 2002 quoique sa signature apparaisse sur chacune des pages composant ladite déclaration[130]. Le témoin a également contesté la validité de cette déclaration et déclaré que les extraits qui lui ont été lus ne reflétaient pas ses propos, et qu'il n'accordait de valeur qu'aux documents écrits de sa propre main, notamment celui contenant ses aveux[131]. Enfin, le témoin a soutenu devant la Chambre qu'il avait fait mention de la lettre de Seromba dans la déclaration qu'il a faite aux enquêteurs du Tribunal. La Chambre constate toutefois que cette mention n'y figure pas[132].

74. La Chambre considère que le témoin FE13 est crédible en raison des fonctions qu'il exerçait au sein de la commune[133], de sa présence à la réunion et du récit qu'il en donne. Par ailleurs, les informations fournies par le témoin FE13 concernant la lecture de la lettre d'Athanase Seromba au cours de cette réunion ont été corroborées par les témoins FE27 et CF23.

4.4. De l'arrivée à l'église de Nyange de gendarmes en provenance de la préfecture de Kibuye

4.4.1. La preuve

Le témoin du Procureur

76. Le témoin CDL, un Hutu[134], a déclaré avoir vu des gendarmes le 10 ou le 11 avril 1994. Il a indiqué ignorer les circonstances de l'arrivée de ces gendarmes qui, selon lui, étaient accompagnés par le bourgmestre. Le témoin a également affirmé ignorer si les gendarmes étaient arrivés à la demande d'Athanase Seromba. Il a toutefois fait remarquer qu'un gendarme se tenait toujours aux côtés de Seromba durant les événements d'avril 1994[135].

77. Le témoin FE55, un Hutu[136], a affirmé qu'au cours de la réunion du 11 avril 1994, la décision avait été prise de demander un renfort de gendarmes de la préfecture Kibuye pour assurer la sécurité des réfugiés de la paroisse de Nyange[137].

78. Le témoin BZ1, qui est d'ethnie Hutu[138], a déclaré qu'il y avait environ quatre gendarmes armés qui étaient présents à la paroisse. Selon le témoin, ces gendarmes seraient arrivés vers le 13 avril 1994, peu avant que la situation ne se détériore[139].

79. Le témoin PA1[140], a soutenu que quatre gendarmes sont arrivés à la paroisse de Nyange le mardi 12 avril 1994[141].

4.4.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

80. La Chambre note que les déclarations du témoin du Procureur CDL et des témoins de la Défense FE55, BZ1 et PA1 sont concordantes sur la présence de gendarmes à la paroisse de Nyange au moment des événements d'avril 1994, même s'ils divergent légèrement sur la date de leur arrivée sur les lieux. Elle observe, en outre, que le témoin FE55 a soutenu en plus que l'arrivée des gendarmes est la mise en œuvre d'une décision prise au cours de la réunion du 11 avril 1994 dite « réunion de sécurité ». La Chambre constate également que cette thèse est corroborée par les témoins FE13 et CF23 dans leur témoignage respectif[142].

81. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre estime que les témoins CDL, FE55 et BZ1 sont crédibles. Elle considère, en conséquence, qu'il est établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable que le 11 avril 1994, des gendarmes sont arrivés à l'église de Nyange en provenance de la préfecture de Kibuye.

5. Des évenements du 12 au 14 avril 1994 à la paroisse de Nyange

5.1. L'Acte d'accusation

82. L'Acte d'accusation allègue ce qui suit :

> 12. À partir du 12 avril 1994 ou vers cette date, les réfugiés ont été placés en détention par les gendarmes et encerclés par des miliciens et des Interahamwe munis d'armes de type traditionnel et classique. Le père Athanase Seromba a effectivement empêché les réfugiés de s'alimenter et ordonné aux gendarmes de tirer sur tout Inyenzi (c'est-à-dire Tutsi) qui essaierait de se procurer de quoi manger au presbytère ou dans la bananeraie de la paroisse. Il a refusé de célébrer la messe pour eux et a souligné qu'il se refusait d'officier pour des Inyenzi.
> 13. Vers le 12 avril 1994 ou à cette date, Athanase Seromba a renvoyé de la paroisse quatre employés tutsis (Alex, Félécien, Gasore et Patrice). Il les a obligés à quitter la paroisse au moment même où les Interahamwe et les miliciens commençaient à attaquer les personnes réfugiées dans la paroisse.
> 14. Le père Seromba savait que le fait de renvoyer ces employés concourrait à leur mort. En fait, un seul d'entre eux (Patrice) a pu retourner à la paroisse, grièvement blessé, ce qui n'a pas empêché Athanase Seromba de lui interdire l'accès de l'église. Il a été tué par les Interahamwe et les miliciens.
> 38. Vers le 12 avril 1994 ou cette date, le père Seromba a présidé une réunion tenue dans le bureau de sa paroisse, réunion à laquelle ont participé entre autres personnes, Grégoire Ndahimana et Fulgence Kayishema. Immédiatement après cette réunion, Fulgence Kayishema a déclaré que Kayiranga (riche homme d'affaires tutsi) devait être trouvé et conduit à l'église.
> 40. La deuxième phase du plan consistait à maintenir les réfugiés à l'intérieur de l'église en la faisant encercler par les Interahamwe et les miliciens. [...]
> 41. C'est à ces fins que vers le 12 avril 1994, les gendarmes ont emprisonné les réfugiés dans l'église de Nyange, laquelle était encerclée par les Interahamwe et les miliciens.
> 42. Athanase Seromba a empêché les réfugiés d'avoir accès aux sanitaires de la paroisse, et de s'alimenter en ordonnant aux gendarmes de tirer sur tout Inyenzi qui tenterait de se procurer de la nourriture au Presbytère ou dans la bananeraie de la paroisse.
> 43. Vers le 12 avril 1994 ou à cette date, le père Athanase Seromba a présidé dans l'après-midi une réunion tenue avec Grégoire Ndahimana et Fulgence Kayishema. Peu après, le bourgmestre Ndahimana a déclaré, « Nous avons décidé que les plus riches seront tués, les autres peuvent rentrer chez eux ».

5.2. De l'encerclement des réfugiés par des miliciens et Interahamwe munis d'armes de type traditionnel et classique

5.2.1. La preuve

Les témoins du Procureur

83. Le témoin CBS[143] a déclaré que l'église était encerclée par des gendarmes[144]. Quant au témoin CBK[145], il a soutenu que l'église était encerclée par des assaillants[146].

[143] Voir la section 3.3.1.

84. Le témoin PA1[147] a déclaré que dans la soirée du 11 avril 1994, « beaucoup de gens » ont encerclé l'église où se trouvaient les réfugiés[148]. Quant au témoin FE56, un Hutu[149], il a indiqué que Kayishema avait fait encercler l'église de Nyange par des « gens »[150]. Il a, en outre, ajouté que des militaires étaient positionnés près des portes du presbytère afin d'en bloquer l'entrée[151].

5.2.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

85. La Chambre note qu'à l'exception du témoin CBS qui parle de l'encerclement de l'église par les gendarmes seulement, le fait qu'à partir du 12 avril 1994, des miliciens et autres Interahamwe ont encerclé l'église de Nyange où se trouvaient les réfugiés, est corroboré aussi bien par le témoin du Procureur CBK que par les témoins de la Défense PA1 et FE56. En conséquence, elle considère que ce fait est établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable.

5.3. De l'interdiction faite par Athanase Seromba aux réfugiés de s'alimenter dans la bananeraie de la paroisse et de l'ordre qu'il aurait donné aux gendarmes de tirer sur tout « Inyenzi » qui essaierait de s'y procurer des bananes

86. Le témoin CBS[152] a déclaré à trois reprises qu'Athanase Seromba aurait empêché les réfugiés de s'alimenter dans la bananeraie de la paroisse[153]. Il a expliqué notamment que le mercredi 13 avril 1994, des enseignants, qui se trouvaient parmi les réfugiés tutsis, ont demandé de la nourriture à Seromba qui aurait refusé de leur en donner. Suite à ce refus, certains réfugiés se seraient alors de leur propre chef rendus dans la bananeraie de la paroisse pour y couper des bananes qu'ils ont grillées dans la cour de la paroisse[154]. Ayant découvert ces réfugiés, Seromba leur aurait interdit de retourner dans la bananeraie et aurait également donné l'ordre aux gendarmes de tirer sur tout réfugié qui s'y aventurerait, en traitant les réfugiés d'« Inyenzi ». Enfin le témoin a souligné qu'il se trouvait près de Seromba lorsque ce dernier a tenu ces propos[155].

87. Le témoin CBJ[156] a soutenu également que les réfugiés avaient demandé de la nourriture à Athanase Seromba et que ce dernier leur avait opposé un refus. Il a également expliqué qu'en compagnie d'autres réfugiés, ils seraient alors allés couper des bananes dans la bananeraie de la paroisse. A la vue de ces bananes, Seromba se serait mis en colère et leur aurait fait remarquer qu'il lui avait manqué de respect en se rendant dans la bananeraie. Seromba se serait alors adressé aux gendarmes en ces termes : « Quiconque retourne au champ de bananes pour y couper des régimes de bananes, vous devriez tirer sur cette personne. »[157]

88. Le témoin CBN, un Tutsi[158], a déclaré à deux reprises, qu'Athanase Seromba a interdit aux réfugiés de s'alimenter dans la bananeraie le 14 avril 1994. Il a ajouté que Seromba a ensuite ordonné aux gendarmes de tirer sur tout réfugié qui y retournerait[159].

Le témoin de la Défense

89. Le témoin CF23[160] a déclaré, à deux reprises, qu'Athanase Seromba n'a jamais interdit aux réfugiés de se rendre à la bananeraie et qu'il a vu des réfugiés dans la bananeraie lorsqu'il s'y est personnellement rendu le 13 avril 1994[161]. Il a, en outre, déclaré qu'à la même date, il a aperçu des réfugiés se promenant librement dans la cour de l'église et allant même couper des bananes[162]. Le témoin a enfin indiqué qu'il n'était pas présent sur les lieux le 14 avril 1994[163].

5.3.2 Conclusions de la Chambre

90. La Chambre estime que le témoin CBS est un témoin fiable dans la description qu'il donne des lieux et de l'emplacement des bananeraies[164]. En outre, les ses déclarations lors du contre-interrogatoire concordent avec celles qu'il a faites au cours de l'interrogatoire principal. Il n'y a pas non plus de contradictions majeures entre les déclarations antérieures du témoin CBS et son témoignage devant la Chambre[165]. A ce propos, la Chambre estime que le fait que les événements discutés ne soient pas mentionnés dans sa déclaration du 14 février 1999[166] ne peut pas être perçu comme une contradiction dans la mesure où aucune question sur cet événement ne lui avait été posée au moment où il faisait cette déclaration. Par ailleurs, la Chambre note que le témoin était présent sur les lieux au moment du déroulement des faits. De ce qui précède, la Chambre considère que le témoin CBS est crédible tant sur l'interdiction que sur l'ordre que Seromba aurait donné aux gendarmes.

91. La Chambre estime que le témoin CBJ est également crédible sur ces deux points. En effet, elle ne constate pas de contradiction entre les déclarations antérieures du témoin et son témoignage devant la Chambre. A cet égard, elle estime que si les événements discutés ne figurent pas dans les déclarations du témoin du 23 mars 1997[167] et du 24 juin 1997[168], cela s'explique par le fait qu'aucune question y relative ne lui a été posée au moment où il faisait ces déclarations. Elle observe que seules des contradictions mineures ont été relevées portant sur le nombre d'assaillants hutus[169], le nombre de réfugiés tutsis dans l'église[170] et le nombre de tutsis dans la commune de Kivumu[171] et qui n'étaient pas de nature à remettre en cause la crédibilité du témoin CBJ.

92. La Chambre considère par ailleurs que le témoignage contradictoire qu'a livré le témoin FE36[172] n'entache pas la crédibilité du témoin CBJ. Aucune question n'a été posée au témoin CBJ sur la version des événements donnée par FE36. Elle note également que le témoin FE36 n'est pas un témoin crédible puisqu'il a admis avoir menti devant la Chambre[173]. A cet égard, la Chambre note en particulier que le témoin FE36 a affirmé que CBJ a dit que toute sa famille a été tuée alors que CBJ n'a en réalité déclaré que seulement certains membres de sa famille sont morts[174].

93. La Chambre considère que le témoignage de CBN n'est pas fiable sur ce point. Il y a contradiction entre les propos tenus par le témoin lors de son interrogatoire et ceux qu'il a tenus dans une déclaration faite le 17 août 2000[175]. Dans cette dernière, le témoin a au contraire affirmé que l'interdiction d'entrer dans la bananeraie avait été prononcée par un gendarme en présence d'Athanase Seromba. De plus cette discussion entre Seromba et les gendarmes n'aurait pas eu lieu devant l'église mais dans la bananeraie. Le témoin a affirmé que la vraie version est celle donnée devant la Chambre et que la précédente version est le fruit d'un malentendu, l'interdiction émanant de Seromba et répétée plus tard par le gendarme[176].

96. La Chambre constate par contre que le Procureur n'a pas présenté d'éléments de preuve pour appuyer l'allégation selon laquelle Seromba a interdit aux réfugiés tutsis de s'alimenter dans le presbytère. La Chambre considère donc que ce fait n'est pas établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable.

5.4.1. La preuve

97. Le témoin CBN[177] a déclaré que le 14 avril 1994, Athanase Seromba a été approché par plusieurs réfugiés tutsis dont les enseignants Bonera, Ruteghesa et Rwakayiro qui lui auraient demandé de célébrer une messe en leur faveur[178]. Le témoin a ajouté qu'Athanase Seromba aurait refusé de célébrer cette messe en arguant du fait qu'il n'avait pas de « temps à perdre »[179]. Le témoin a, en outre, expliqué que ce refus allait à l'encontre de la volonté des réfugiés qui souhaitaient cette messe[180]. Il a également expliqué qu'un réfugié tutsi aurait alors annoncé aux autres réfugiés qu'il leur fallait prier ensemble compte tenu du refus de Seromba de célébrer une messe à leur intention[181]. Le témoin a, enfin, précisé que Seromba se trouvait devant l'église lorsqu'il a exprimé son refus[182].

98. Le témoin CBI[183] a déclaré que vers le 13 avril 1994, Athanase Seromba est entré dans l'église pour enlever les calices qu'il a emportés avec lui au « niveau supérieur de son logement »[184].

99. Le témoin CBJ[185] a, en outre, déclaré qu'il n'y a pas eu de messe à la paroisse de Nyange dimanche 10 avril 1994. Il a ajouté qu'il n'était pas possible de célébrer la messe parce que la « situation était critique »[186]. Le témoin a également soutenu que le 14 avril 1994, Athanase Seromba a enlevé de l'église les soutanes des prêtres ainsi que les calices chargés d'hosties. Le témoin a enfin souligné qu'il a appris plus tard que Seromba avait emporté avec lui ces objets au presbytère[187].

100. Le témoin CBK[188] a déclaré que des messes avaient été célébrées dans l'ancienne salle des réunions pendant les événements survenus à la paroisse de Nyange en avril 1994[189].

Le témoin de la Défense

101. Le témoin PA1[190] a affirmé qu'à partir du 11 avril 1994, la décision avait été prise de ne plus célébrer de messe dans l'église de Nyange en raison du fait que les réfugiés y étaient trop nombreux et de la présence d'animaux à cet endroit. Il a, en outre, ajouté que c'est à l'oratoire situé au presbytère que les messes étaient célébrées[191].

102. A la question du conseil de la Défense de savoir si les réfugiés avaient opposé une résistance au retrait par Athanase Seromba des hosties et des ornements sacerdotaux, le témoin PA1 a donné la réponse suivante : « il n'y a pas eu de problème… Nous, ce qu'on a pensé, on a dit… le saint sacrément, c'est quelque chose de très respecté pour les catholiques. Et les ornements sacrés dans de telles circonstances, on ne pouvait pas les laisser, par question de respect. Alors, il n'y a pas eu d'opposition… c'était notre mission de faire respecter le saint sacrément et de mettre le saint sacrément à un endroit approprié »[192].

5.4.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

103. La Chambre considère le témoin CBN est crédible. Il n'existe que des contradictions mineures entre son témoignage et ses déclarations antérieures ayant trait à l'endroit exact où Athanase Seromba a exprimé son refus de célébrer la messe[193] ainsi que les propos qu'il a tenus à cette occasion[194]. La Chambre ne considère pas ces contradictions ne sont pas déterminantes compte tenu du temps qui s'est écoulé depuis les événements, d'une part, et des références constantes du témoin au refus de Seromba de célébrer une messe en faveur des réfugiés tutsis[195].

104. De plus, la Chambre constate que les témoins CBI, CBJ et CBK ont rapporté qu'Athanase Seromba a retiré les éléments nécessaires à la célébration de la messe entre le 10 et le 13 avril 1994.

105. La Chambre estime que le témoignage de PA1, religieux de son état, ne laisse aucun doute sur le fait qu'à partir du 11 avril 1994, aucune messe n'a été célébrée dans l'église de Nyange. En cela, le témoin PA1 est corroboré par le témoin CBI, la Chambre estimant en effet peu substantielle le fait que ce dernier, à la différence de PA1, fasse remonter la décision de ne plus célébrer la messe dans l'église plutôt au 10 avril 1994. Elle considère donc que ces deux témoins sont crédibles sur ce point. La Chambre est également d'avis que le témoin PA1 est crédible sur le fait que des objets sacrés (hosties consacrées et ornements sacerdotaux) ont été retirés de l'église.

106. La Chambre estime que le fait que les réfugiés n'aient opposé aucune résistance, comme le dit le témoin PA1, au retrait par Seromba des objets sacrés n'écarte pas du tout l'éventualité qu'une demande a été par les réfugiés pour voir célébrer de une messe en leur faveur. A cet égard, la Chambre est consciente du fait que les réfugiés tutsis de l'église de Nyange se savaient en permanence en danger de mort au moment des événements d'avril 1994, et ce eu égard aux persécutions ayant cours contre leur groupe ethnique sur tout le territoire du Rwanda. Dans ces circonstances, la Chambre estime fort probable que les plus fervents d'entre eux aient pu solliciter auprès de Seromba la célébration d'une messe. Pour la même raison, elle est d'avis que le fait par Seromba de retirer des objets sacrés peut être interprété comme un refus à la demande des réfugiés alors surtout qu'il a continué à célébrer la messe dans l'oratoire à partir du 11 avril 1994. Elle considère, en conséquence, que le témoin CBN est crédible quand il soutient que des réfugiés ont présenté à Seromba une demande de messe à laquelle ce dernier a refusé d'accéder.

5.5. Du refoulement par Athanase Seromba de quatre employés tutsis (Alex, Félécien, Gasore et Patrice) de la paroisse et de la mort de Patrice à qui Seromba aurait refusé l'accès au presbytère

5.5.1. La preuve

Le témoin du Procureur

[194] Transcriptions du 15 octobre 2004, pp. 61-62 (audience publique).
[195] Transcriptions du 18 octobre 2004, p. 3 (audience publique).

108. Le témoin CBK[196] a déclaré qu'après la mort du président rwandais, Alex, Félécien, Gasore et Patrice, tous d'ethnie tutsie et employés de la paroisse de Nyange, lui ont dit qu'ils avaient été suspendus par Athanase Seromba. Le témoin a ajouté que ces derniers ont alors quitté la paroisse[197].

109. Le témoin CBK a, par ailleurs, expliqué que ces employés seraient revenus à la paroisse le 13 avril 1994, mais qu'ils en auraient été refoulés par Athanase Seromba qui leur aurait dit qu'il n'y avait pas de refuge pour eux dans cet endroit[198]. Le témoin a, en outre, fait remarquer que la situation sécuritaire s'était beaucoup dégradée de sorte que tout Tutsi qui s'aventurait dehors courait le risque de se faire tuer[199] Il a ensuite déclaré avoir revu, dans la cour arrière du presbytère, Patrice qui était blessé au niveau des bras et des jambes. Le témoin serait alors intervenu auprès de Seromba pour qu'il vienne en aide à ce dernier. Seromba aurait refusé et aurait plutôt demandé à Patrice de quitter les lieux. Ayant constaté que ce dernier tardait à s'exécuter, Seromba aurait alors demandé aux gendarmes de le faire partir de force. Le témoin a, enfin, ajouté qu'il a par la suite vu le corps sans vie de Patrice dans la cour arrière du presbytère[200].

110. Le témoin NA1, né de parents hutu et tutsi[201], a déclaré être arrivé à l'église de Nyange le 15 avril 1994[202]. Il a, en outre, indiqué avoir précédemment travaillé à la paroisse de Nyange entre 1992 et 1993[203]. Le témoin a, par ailleurs, expliqué qu'à son retour dans cette paroisse en avril 1994, il avait pu constater qu'aucun des employés de ladite paroisse n'avait été licencié. Il a ajouté avoir rencontré sur place Alexis qui l'aurait même salué[204].

111. Au cours du contre-interrogatoire, le témoin NA1 a notamment expliqué qu'il n'avait aucune idée des employés qui se trouvaient parmi les réfugiés. Il a, en outre fait remarquer qu'il n'était pas là pour recenser les employés de la paroisse[205] et qu'il n'était pas non plus en mesure de savoir qui était employé de la paroisse et qui ne l'était pas[206].

5.5.2. Conclusions de la chambre

112. La Chambre estime que le témoin CBK est crédible. Aucune contradiction n'existe entre les propos qu'il a tenus lors de son témoignage et ses déclarations antérieures. Elle considère par ailleurs que le récit du témoin CBK sur le refoulement des employés d'ethnie tutsie par Athanase Seromba est cohérent et vraisemblable, eu égard notamment aux circonstances qui prévalaient à la paroisse de Nyange en avril 1994.

113. Par ailleurs, la Chambre estime que le témoignage de NA1 n'est pas fiable sur ce point. En effet, elle note que le témoin NA1 n'est arrivé à la paroisse de Nyange que le 15 avril 1994 et ne saurait donc valablement témoigner sur des faits auxquels il n'a pas assisté. Elle observe, en outre, que le témoin s'exprime en des termes généraux, son témoignage ne portant que sur la question des changements opérés dans la composition du personnel entre son départ de Nyange en 1993 et son retour en avril 1994. Enfin, et comme le témoin l'a lui-même admis, il n'était pas en mesure d'identifier les employés présents au moment de son arrivée à l'église, et ce compte tenu du nombre très important de réfugiés et d'assaillants présents sur les lieux[207].

114. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre considère qu'il est établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable que le 13 avril 1994, au moment où la situation sécuritaire dans la commune de Kivumu était devenue précaire, Athanase Seromba a refoulé quatre employés tutsis de la paroisse dont l'un d'eux nommé Patrice, revenu le lendemain, a été tué par les assaillants après avoir été de refoulé du presbytère par Seromba.

5.6. De la tenue d'une réunion au bureau de la paroisse le 12 avril 1994

Le témoin du Procureur

115. Le témoin CBJ[208] a déclaré que le 12 avril 1994, il a vu Athanase Seromba s'entretenir au balcon du « deuxième étage » du presbytère avec Grégoire Ndahimana, Gaspard Kanyarukiga, Fulgence Kayishema et Télesphore Ndungutse[209]. Il a ajouté que cet entretien a duré entre 15 et 20 minutes[210]. Il a enfin indiqué que ces personnes ne sont pas entrées dans une chambre ou une salle quelconque pour s'entretenir[211].

5.6.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

116. La Chambre constate que le témoignage de CBJ ne suffit pas à rapporter la preuve qu'une réunion présidée par Seromba a eu lieu au bureau de la paroisse le 12 avril 1994. En conséquence, elle considère que le Procureur n'a pas établi ce fait au-delà de tout doute raisonnable.

6. Des evenements du 14 au 15 avril 1994 a la paroisse de Nyange

6.1. L'Acte d'accusation

117. L'Acte d'accusation allègue ce qui suit :

Kivumu. Ce carburant a été utilisé par les Interahamwe et les miliciens pour incendier l'église, tandis que les gendarmes et les policiers communaux lançaient des grenades.

17. Le même jour, Athanase Seromba a présidé une réunion dans le bureau de sa paroisse, en présence de Fulgence Kayishema, Grégoire Ndahimana, Gaspard Kanyarukira et d'autres personnes inconnues du Procureur. Immédiatement après cette réunion, suite à une demande formulée par les réfugiés aux fins que leur protection soit assurée, le bourgmestre Grégoire Ndahimana a répondu que les Inyenzi étaient la cause de cette guerre pour avoir tué le Président.

18. Le 15 avril 1994 ou vers cette date, un bus transportant des Interahamwe armés et un prêtre dénommé Kayirangwa est arrivé à la paroisse de Nyange, en provenance de la préfecture de Kibuye. Peu après, le père Seromba s'est réuni avec le prêtre Kayirangwa, Fulgence Kayishema, Kanyarukiga et d'autres personnes inconnues du Procureur.

21. Durant ces attaques, le père Seromba a livré aux gendarmes un enseignant tutsi du nom de Gatare qui s'était réfugié dans l'église et qui a été tué sur-le-champ. Ce fait a encouragé et galvanisé les assaillants.

22. Durant ces mêmes attaques, des réfugiés ont quitté l'église pour le presbytère. Le père Seromba les a trouvés et a informé les gendarmes du lieu où ils se cachaient. Tout de suite après, ils ont été attaqués et tués. Parmi les victimes se trouvaient deux femmes tutsies (Alexia et Meriam).

25. Lors des attaques décrites supra, les massacres reprochés ont été perpétrés sous la supervision d'Athanase Seromba, de Grégoire Ndahimana, de Fulgence Kayishema, de Télesphore Ndungutse, du Juge Joseph Habiyambere, de l'assistant bourgmestre Védaste Mupende et d'autres autorités inconnues du Procureur.

48. Vers le 13 avril 1994 ou à cette date, les lnterahamwe et les miliciens encerclant la paroisse ont lancé une attaque contre les personnes réfugiées dans l'église. Les assaillants ont été repoussés hors de l'église jusqu'à un endroit dénommé « la statue de la Sainte Vierge ». Ils ont alors lancé une grenade qui a fait de nombreuses victimes parmi les réfugiés. Les survivants se sont empressés de retourner dans l'église, mais le père Athanase Seromba a ordonné d'en fermer toutes les portes laissant ainsi à l'extérieur un grand nombre de réfugiés (environ 30) aux fins qu'ils soient tués. »

118. Les témoins CNJ[212], CBR[213], CBJ[214], CDK[215], CBS[216] et CDL[217] ont relaté qu'un affrontement a eu lieu entre les assaillants et les réfugiés tutsis dans la matinée du 15 avril 1994 à proximité du restaurant de la Caritas. Ils ont notamment expliqué que les assaillants ont attaqué les réfugiés avec des pierres et des armes traditionnelles. Les réfugiés seraient parvenus à les repousser jusqu'au niveau de la Codecoki. Les assaillants n'auraient alors pris le dessus que lorsqu'un réserviste du nom de Théophile Rukara est monté sur le toit d'une maison pour lancer des grenades, blessant et tuant de nombreux réfugiés tutsis. Ces derniers se seraient alors repliés vers l'église de Nyange pour échapper aux assaillants[218]. Le témoin CBR a, en particulier, ajouté que des responsables communaux dont Ndahimana, Fulgence Kayishema, Habiyambere, Védaste Muraginabugabo et Gaspard Kanyarukiga[219] se trouvaient sur les lieux de l'affrontement et ont encouragé les assaillants à s'attaquer aux réfugiés[220].

119. Les témoins FE31[221], BZ14[222], BZ1[223] et BZ4[224] ont affirmé que des grenades avaient été lancées contre les réfugiés tutsis au cours de l'attaque qui a eu lieu dans la matinée du 15 avril 1994. Ils ont, en outre, indiqué que suite au jet de grenades ayant entraîné la mort de certains d'entre eux, les réfugiés se seraient retranchés à l'intérieur de l'église en fermant les portes pour mieux se protéger[225].

6.2.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

120. La Chambre constate que les témoins du Procureur tout comme ceux de la Défense ont confirmé que dans la matinée du 15 avril 1994, une attaque a été lancée contre les réfugiés tutsis et contre laquelle ces derniers ont opposé une résistance; que par la suite, les assaillants ont fait usage de grenades qui ont causé la mort de plusieurs réfugiés. Elle considère, en conséquence, que ces faits sont établis au-delà de tout doute raisonnable.

6.3. De l'ordre donné par Athanase Seromba de fermer les portes de l'église, laissant dehors une trentaine de réfugiés qui auraient été tués

Les témoins du Procureur

121. Le témoin CBJ[226] a déclaré que le soir du 14 avril 1994, Athanase Seromba, accompagné de gendarmes, a demandé aux réfugiés tutsis de rentrer dans l'église et les a enfermés à l'intérieur[227]. Il a, en outre, ajouté que le lendemain matin, Seromba, toujours accompagné de gendarmes, est revenu ouvrir les portes de l'église[228]. Le témoin CBJ a, par ailleurs, expliqué qu'au cours des attaques du 15 avril 1994, les réfugiés tutsis ont eux-mêmes pris la décision de s'enfermer, abandonnant à l'extérieur de l'église « les moins chanceux d'entre eux » qui auraient alors été tués[229].

122. Les témoins CBK[230], CDL[231] et CNJ ont affirmé que lors de l'attaque du 15 avril 1994, les réfugiés se sont barricadés dans l'église pour se protéger[232].

123. Les témoins BZ4[233], FE56[234], BZ14[235] et FE34[236] ont soutenu qu'à la suite des attaques du 15 avril 1994, les réfugiés ont battu en retraite vers l'église et s'y sont barricadés[237].

6.3.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

124. La Chambre relève que l'Acte d'accusation et le mémoire préalable du Procureur contiennent chacun l'allégation selon laquelle Athanase Seromba aurait ordonné la fermeture des portes en laissant dehors une trentaine de réfugiés qui auraient ensuite été tués. Elle note toutefois que ces deux documents divergent sur la date de ces événements. Ainsi, alors que l'Acte d'accusation situe ces faits vers le 13 avril 1994 ou à cette date, le mémoire préalable au procès retient plutôt la date du 14 avril 1994.

125. La Chambre constate, par ailleurs, que si le témoin CBJ soutient qu'Athanase Seromba a fermé les portes de l'église le soir du 14 avril 1994 et les a rouvertes le matin du 15 avril 1994, il n'impute pas à ce dernier la mort de réfugiés tutsis, tués parce qu'ils ne pouvaient plus accéder à l'intérieur de l'église fermée Elle note également que le même témoin a déclaré que le 15 avril 1994, des réfugiés qui se trouvaient déjà dans l'église ont pris la décision de se barricader, abandonnant ainsi certains des leurs, restés dehors à la merci des assaillants. Elle constate, enfin, que les témoins du Procureur comme ceux de la Défense confirment le fait que des réfugiés aient pris eux-mêmes la décision de fermer les portes de l'église le 15 avril 1994.

126. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre estime que les informations à sa disposition sont concordantes tant en ce qui concerne les dates de ces événements que de leur déroulement. Elle en déduit donc que le Procureure n'a pas établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable qu'Athanase Seromba ait fermé les portes de l'église en laissant dehors une trentaine de réfugiés qui auraient été tués par la suite.

Les témoins du Procureur

127. Le témoin CBI[238] a déclaré que plusieurs autorités parmi lesquelles se trouvait Fulgence Kayishema venaient régulièrement à l'église pendant qu'il s'y trouvait encore. Il a ajouté que ces autorités se rendaient chez Athanase Seromba[239] pour s'informer de ce qui se passait dans la cour arrière du presbytère[240]. Lors du contre-interrogatoire, le témoin CBI a soutenu que les réunions qui préparaient la « mise à mort » des Tutsis se tenaient également chez Seromba[241]. A la question du conseil de la Défense de savoir ce qu'il entendait par « réunion », le témoin a répondu en ces termes : « vous pouvez conclure qu'il s'agit d'une réunion lorsque des gens se trouvent ensemble »[242].

128. Le témoin CBJ[243] a affirmé que les gendarmes, après s'être entretenus avec Athanase Seromba, se sont rendus à la Codecoki, dans le centre de Nyange. Il a, en outre, souligné qu'au retour d'Athanase Seromba au presbytère après la réunion à la Codecoki, les Interahamwe, armés de lances, de machettes, d'épées et de pieux de bambou, ont commencé à tuer les réfugiés[244]. Il a également déclaré qu'une réunion a eu lieu le 14 avril 1994 à la paroisse de Nyange à laquelle auraient participé Seromba, le bourgmestre Grégoire Ndahimana, l'inspecteur de police judiciaire Fulgence Kayishema, Télesphore Ndungutse, l'homme d'affaires Gaspard Kanyarukiga, le brigadier Christophe Mbakirirehe ainsi que bien d'autres personnes que le témoin dit ne pas avoir pu identifier[245]. Le témoin a expliqué avoir constaté la tenue de cette réunion à partir de la tour de l'église où il se trouvait avec les membres du groupe charismatique[246]. Au cours du contre-interrogatoire, le témoin CBJ a réitéré que les participants à cette réunion ont planifié les tueries contre les Tutsis.

a assisté à cet événement[249]. Il a enfin déclaré qu'à la fin de la réunion, Athanase Seromba est remonté en direction de l'église en compagnie de Grégoire Ndahimana, Fulgence Kayishema et de Télesphore Ndungutse tandis que Gaspard Kanyarukiga rejoignait la population rassemblée près de la statue et qui l'attendait[250].

130. Le témoin CBK[251] a déclaré qu'entre le 13 et le 16 avril 1994, Athanase Seromba a organisé à la paroisse de Nyange plusieurs réunions auxquelles avaient participé Gaspard Kanyarukiga, Fulgence Kayishema, Grégoire Ndahimana, Ndungutse et Rushema. Le témoin a ajouté que ces réunions se tenaient souvent dans une salle située « au niveau supérieur du presbytère »[252].

131. Le témoin CBN[253] a déclaré avoir vu Athanase Seromba accueillir plusieurs autorités dont le Bourgmestre Ndahimana, Kanyarukiga et l'inspecteur de police judiciaire Kayishema[254]. Le témoin CBN a également indiqué avoir été informé de l'existence de réunions tenues par les conseillers communaux[255].

132. Le témoin CBS[256] a soutenu que des autorités se rendaient à la paroisse de Nyange pour rencontrer Athanase Seromba. Parmi ces autorités, le témoin a cité le bourgmestre Ndahimana, l'inspecteur de police judiciaire Kayishema, le brigadier Mbakirirehe, l'enseignant Télesphore Ndungutse et le commerçant Kanyarukiga[257].

133. Le témoin PA1[258] a déclaré qu'il n'y a pas eu de réunion au presbytère entre Athanase Seromba et les autorités communales visant à exterminer les réfugiés[259]. Il a fait observer qu'en compagnie d'autres religieux, ils avaient chargé Seromba de contacter le bourgmestre pour lui rendre compte de la situation qui prévalait à la paroisse de Nyange, le vendredi 15 avril 1994. De retour de cette mission, Seromba leur aurait expliqué ne pas avoir pu rencontrer le bourgmestre, celui-ci s'étant rendu à un enterrement[260]. Le témoin PA1 a ajouté que Grégoire Ndahimana et Fulgence Kayishema sont venus à la paroisse dans la soirée. Le témoin a indiqué que les religieux auraient demandé aux autorités ce qu'elles pouvaient faire relativement aux cadavres présents dans la cour de l'église[261]. Le bourgmestre aurait alors promis d'envoyer des bulldozers le lendemain pour enterrer ces personnes[262]. Le témoin a enfin soutenu qu'il n'était pas possible que Seromba ait pu organiser des réunions à son insu parce qu'ils étaient toujours ensemble[263].

134. Le témoin BZ3[264] a affirmé qu'il n'y avait pas de « relations particulières » entre Athanase Seromba et les autorités[265]. Il a, en outre, déclaré ne jamais avoir entendu parler de rencontres qui auraient eu lieu entre Seromba, Fulgence Kayishema, Grégoire Ndahimana et Télesphore Ndungutse avant la date du 16 avril 1994[266].

135. Le témoin CF23[267] a déclaré que toutes les réunions de la commune de Nyange avaient toujours lieu au Bureau communal[268] et qu'il en était toujours informé. Il a en outre ajouté qu'aucune réunion des autorités communales n'avait eu lieu à la paroisse de Nyange. Il a également indiqué qu'aucune réunion officielle des autorités communales n'a eu pour ordre du jour l'extermination des Tutsis[269].

136. La Chambre constate que les déclarations des témoins du Procureur CBI, CBJ, CBK, CDK et CBS sont concordantes sur le fait qu'Athanase Seromba a tenu des réunions ou eu des entretiens avec les autorités communales. A ce propos, elle note que le témoignage du témoin de la Défense PA1 conforte les témoignages de ces derniers lorsqu'il dit notamment qu'une mission a été confiée à Seromba pour contacter le bourgmestre afin de trouver une solution au sort des cadavres qui jonchaient la cour de l'église. Elle estime toutefois que les témoignages de CBI, CBJ, CBK, CDK et CBS ne permettent pas de conclure que toute réunion à laquelle Seromba aurait participé ou tout entretien qu'il aurait eu avec les autorités de la commune ait eu pour objet l'extermination des Tutsis. En effet, aucun de ces témoins n'a participé à ces réunions ou entretiens. Aussi, la Chambre considère-t-elle que l'évocation que font certains d'entre eux d'un plan d'extermination ne reflètent que leurs propres opinions.

137. La Chambre relève que le témoin PA1 a été auditionné dans le cadre d'une commission rogatoire le 8 octobre 2003. Elle note qu'au cours de son audition, le témoin a admis qu'il n'était pas toujours en compagnie d'Athanase Seromba au presbytère et qu'il est fort probable que certaines personnes soient venues au presbytère sans qu'il n'en soit informé[270]. La Chambre constate que cette déclaration contredit le témoignage de PA1 dans lequel il a plutôt soutenu avoir toujours été aux côtés de Seromba. Elle en déduit que le témoin n'est pas crédible.

138. La Chambre estime également que les témoignages de BZ3 et CBN ne sont pas fiables vu qu'ils s'expriment par ouï-dire.

139. S'agissant du témoin CF23, la Chambre estime que son témoignage n'est pas déterminant dans la mesure où il ne rend compte que des réunions tenues par les autorités communales au Bureau de la commune, sans évoquer la présence d'Athanase Seromba à ces réunions.

140. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre considère que le Procureur a établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable que des réunions ou entretiens ont eu lieu entre Athanase Seromba et les autorités de la commune. Par contre, elle estime qu'il n'est pas établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable que l'objet de ces réunions ou de ces entretiens ait été de planifier l'extermination des Tutsis.

6.5. De l'ordre donné par Athanase Seromba aux Interahamwe et miliciens de s'attaquer aux réfugiés

[270] Déclaration du témoin PA1 à la commission rogatoire du 8 octobre 2003 (D-90), p. 4.

141. Le témoin CDK[271] a déclaré qu'il a vu Gaspard Kanyarukiga, Télesphore Ndungutse et Fulgence Kayishema donner des ordres et des instructions aux assaillants le 15 avril 1994[272].

142. Le témoin CBR[273] a affirmé qu'Athanase Seromba ne dirigeait pas les assaillants le 15 avril 1994. Cependant, il a ajouté qu'avant que les autorités ne leur donnent des instructions, ceux-ci s'entretenaient d'abord avec Seromba. Il a indiqué toutefois qu'il n'était pas au courant des propos qu'ils échangeaient entre eux[274]. Le témoin a en outre indiqué que Fulgence Kayishema a dit qu'il fallait attaquer les Inyenzi qui se trouvaient à l'église de Nyange[275].

143. Le témoin CNJ[276] a déclaré que lorsqu'il est arrivé à la paroisse de Nyange avec son groupe, Fulgence Kayishema et Grégoire Ndahimana les ont accueillis. Ils leur auraient dit de se couvrir de feuilles de bananiers pour se distinguer des Tutsis. Le témoin a ajouté que Fulgence Kayishema leur a indiqué l'endroit où ils devaient se rendre pour aider les autres à combattre les Tutsis[277]. Le témoin CNJ a admis qu'ils ont été repoussés jusqu'à la pharmacie appartenant à Kanyarukiga. Kayishema leur aurait alors demandé de remonter et de lancer des pierres contre les Tutsis[278].

144. Le témoin YAU[279] a déclaré que lorsque les Interahamwe sont arrivés dans la cour de l'église, Athanase Seromba leur a demandé de ne pas attaquer les réfugiés dans l'immédiat, vu qu'ils étaient peu nombreux[280]. Seromba se serait notamment adressé à eux en tenant les propos suivants : « Cessez les combats parce que vous êtes encore en nombre insuffisant, en petit nombre ! »[281]. Le témoin a, en outre, affirmé que Seromba a ordonné aux Interahamwe de commencer par tuer les intellectuels[282]. Par ailleurs, il a soutenu qu'au cours de la même journée, Seromba s'est adressé à une femme Interahamwe et lui aurait dit : « Recherchez toutes les personnes qui sont à l'intérieur des pièces, mettez-les dehors et tuez-les ! »[283].

145. Le témoin NA1[284] a déclaré qu'au cours de l'attaque du 15 avril 1994, Athanase Seromba était toujours avec lui et d'autres personnes dans le presbytère. Il a également affirmé qu'alors qu'ils se trouvaient dans le salon du presbytère, Kayiranga est venu les informer des massacres des réfugiés qui étaient à l'extérieur des bâtiments[285].

146. Le témoin BZ1[286] a déclaré que, le 15 avril 1994, les assaillants étaient dirigés par les autorités communales dont le bourgmestre, l'inspecteur de police judiciaire, ainsi que le responsable du MRND, qui était en étroite collaboration avec ces autorités. Il a affirmé n'avoir vu ni Athanase Seromba ni d'autres religieux le 15 avril 1994[287].

147. Le témoin FE31[288] a déclaré être arrivé à l'église de Nyange dans la matinée du 15 avril 1994, entre 10h et 10h30[289]. Le témoin a affirmé avoir observé une rencontre entre Fulgence Kayishema, un policier communal, un homme d'affaires, Anastase Rushema, Léonard Abayisenga, Théophile Rukura, Boniface Kabalisa, Ephrem Nzabigerageza et d'autres personnes, sans avoir entendu les propos qu'ils se sont tenus[290]. Il a, en outre, indiqué que ces personnes dirigeaient l'attaque[291]. Le témoin FE31 a également précisé qu'Athanase Seromba n'était pas présent à cette rencontre[292], car ne l'ayant pas vu sur les lieux ce jour[293]. Le témoin a notamment déclaré ce qui suit : « Nous l'avons plutôt attaqué sur l'incitation des autorités… [Seromba] ne pouvait pas être attaqué et mener en même temps l'attaque alors qu'il était visé par les assaillants »[294].

148. Le témoin FE36[295] a déclaré que Télesphore Ndungutse était à l'origine des tueries perpétrées à la paroisse de Nyange[296].

149. Le témoin FE55[297] a déclaré que le 15 avril 1994, Gaspard Kanyarukiga a sollicité le recrutement de personnes de Kibilira « afin de garder l'église ». Il aurait également déclaré qu'il fallait tout mettre en oeuvre pour tuer les Tutsis, en détruisant l'église au besoin[298]. Le témoin a enfin déclaré avoir vu le même jour Fulgence Kayishema distribuer des sifflets et à bord de son véhicule, inciter les Hutus à tuer les Tutsis réfugiés à la paroisse de Nyange[299].

150. Le témoin FE56[300] a expliqué que le 15 avril 1994, Fulgence Kayishema voulait faire sortir les réfugiés de l'église. Le témoin a également déclaré que Télesphore Ndungutse lui a remis une pompe arrosoir contenant du carburant et a exigé qu'il en asperge les fenêtres de l'église[301]. Selon le témoin, l'objectif visé était de faire peur aux réfugiés pour les obliger à sortir de l'église encerclée sur ordre de Fulgence Kayishema[302]. Le témoin a en outre soutenu que Télesphore Ndungutse et Fulgence Kayishema ont supervisé les attaques[303]. Il a expliqué que pour le transport des assaillants de Kibilira à la paroisse de Nyange, ces derniers sont allés négocier des camions avec la société Astaldi[304]. Le témoin FE56 a enfin déclaré ne pas avoir vu Athanase Seromba à la paroisse de Nyange le 15 avril 1994[305].

6.5.2 Conclusions de la Chambre

151. La Chambre note que YAU est le seul témoin du Procureur à avoir dit que Seromba a ordonné aux Interahamwe de commencer par tuer les intellectuels tutsis le 15 avril 1994. Elle observe toutefois que les circonstances dans lesquelles ce témoin a pu entendre Athanase Seromba donner un tel ordre ne ressortent pas clairement de son témoignage. Dès lors, elle estime que le témoin YAU n'est pas crédible.

152. La Chambre note que les témoignages de CDK, CBR, CNJ, NA1, BZ1, FE31, FE36, FE55 et FE56 sont tous concordants sur le fait que ce sont plutôt les autorités communales qui dirigeaient les assaillants composés d'Interahamwe et miliciens et qui leur donnaient l'ordre de s'attaquer aux réfugiés.

153. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre conclut que le Procureur n'a pas établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable qu'Athanase Seromba a ordonné aux Interahamwe et aux miliciens de s'attaquer aux réfugiés.

6.6. Des attaques lancées contre les réfugiés par les Interahamwe et miliciens aidés de gendarmes et policiers communaux et la tentative d'incendie de l'église de Nyange

Les témoins du Procureur

154. Le témoin CBI[306] a déclaré que le 15 avril 1994, la majorité des assaillants portaient des armes traditionnelles tandis que leurs leaders étaient armés de fusils[307]. Il a en outre souligné que cette attaque a fait de nombreux morts parmi les réfugiés dont les corps gisaient dans la cour de l'église[308].

155. Le témoin CBR[309] a déclaré que les attaques se sont poursuivies dans l'après-midi du 15 avril 1994[310]. Le témoin a ajouté également que les assaillants ont essayé d'incendier l'église en l'aspergeant d'essence et en utilisant des feuilles de bananier et « des mèches de dynamite »[311].

156. Le témoin CDK[312] a affirmé qu'une autre attaque a eu lieu dans l'après-midi du 15 avril 1994 alors que l'église était toujours encerclée par des assaillants. Il a, en outre, déclaré que des policiers communaux et des gendarmes ont ouvert le feu en direction de l'église et ont essayé de l'incendier à l'aide d'essence et de dynamite[313]. Le témoin a enfin estimé à plus de 100 le nombre de personnes tuées au cours de cette attaque[314].

157. Le témoin CBK[315] a déclaré que la journée du 15 avril 1994 a été marquée par une attaque de « grande envergure » contre les réfugiés de l'église de Nyange. Le témoin a affirmé que les assaillants étaient plus nombreux et armés de lances, de machettes, de petites houes et de bois pointus. Il a ajouté que les réfugiés se sont défendus à l'aide de pierres et ont dû se barricader dans l'église pour se protéger. Le témoin a également rapporté que Fulgence Kayishema, Télesphore Ndungutse et Grégoire Ndahimana ont essayé de mettre le feu à l'église en l'aspergeant d'essence et en lançant des grenades contre les portes de celle-ci[316].

158. Le témoin CBT[317] a déclaré que lors de l'attaque du 15 avril 1994, Faustin a aspergé l'église d'essence. Il a également ajouté que des assaillants sont montés sur le toit de l'église d'où une grenade a été lancée[318].

159. Le témoin CDL[319] a affirmé que lors de l'attaque du 15 avril 1994, l'objectif des assaillants était d'entrer à l'intérieur de l'église. Il a expliqué notamment qu'ils ont d'abord essayé de défoncer les portes de l'église à la dynamite et que n'y parvenant pas, ils ont alors tenté en vain d'y mettre le feu à l'aide d'essence[320].

6.6.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

160. La Chambre note que toutes les déclarations des témoins du Procureur sont concordantes sur le fait que les assaillants ont mené une attaque contre les réfugiés de l'église de Nyange le 15 avril 1994, qu'ils ont également tenté d'incendier le même jour.

161. La Chambre relève que la Défense n'a pas présenté de preuve à l'encontre de cette allégation.

162. De ce qui précède, la Chambre conclut que le Procureur a établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable que le 15 avril 1994, les Interahamwe et miliciens, aidés de gendarmes et policiers communaux, ont lancé des attaques contre les réfugiés tutsis et ont tenté d'incendier l'église de Nyange.

6.7. De la supervision des attaques par Athanase Seromba

Les témoins du Procureur

163. Le témoin CDL[321] a déclaré qu'Athanase Seromba était présent lors de l'attaque du 15 avril 1994 et qu'il se tenait debout devant le secrétariat de la paroisse[322]. Le témoin a en outre ajouté avoir revu Seromba plus tard dans la journée alors que ce dernier se tenait devant le logement des prêtres[323]. Le témoin a également soutenu que Seromba a conseillé aux assaillants d'attaquer les Tutsis qui étaient à l'intérieur de l'église plutôt que ceux qui se trouvaient dans le presbytère[324]. Le témoin a en outre affirmé que le bourgmestre et Ndungutse lui ont dit qu'ils s'étaient entretenus avec Seromba qui souhaitait que l'on enterre les nombreux cadavres qui jonchaient la cour de l'église. Le témoin CDL a notamment déclaré ce qui suit : « L'abbé Seromba a jugé bon de leur dire d'enterrer les corps d'abord et de reprendre les tueries par la suite. »[325] Le témoin a expliqué que Seromba n'a rien fait pour protéger les réfugiés[326].

164. Le témoin CBR[327] a expliqué que lors de l'attaque du 15 avril 1994, alors qu'il n'y a avait plus de réfugiés à l'extérieur de l'église, les assaillants ont voulu s'attaquer aux réfugiés cachés dans la cour du presbytère. Il a précisé que Kayishema et Ndungutse dirigeaient ces attaques. Il a rapporté qu'Athanase Seromba et les gendarmes ont empêché les assaillants d'entrer dans la cour du presbytère. Il a affirmé que Kayishema et Ndungutse se sont entretenus avec Seromba et qu'ils ont ensuite dit aux assaillants que Seromba leur avaient demandés d'arrêter les tueries et de débarrasser « d'abord » les cadavres et les débris jonchant le sol. Le témoin a soutenu que Seromba aurait tenu les propos suivants : « Voyez ! Regardez ! Enlevez, d'abord, ces saletés ». Il a en outre déclaré que Kayishema et Ndungutse ont tenu les propos suivants : « Seromba ne peut même pas nous accorder la permission d'entrer dans leur cour, dans la cour du presbytère avant que nous ne dégagions ces saletés ». Le témoin a, par ailleurs, indiqué qu'il se trouvait à dix mètres de Kayishema, Ndungutse et Seromba lorsque ces derniers s'entretenaient. Il a ajouté que les nombreux cadavres ont été enlevés en moins d'une heure, à l'aide d'un bulldozer appartenait à la société Astaldi. Il a souligné que Seromba n'a rien fait pour protéger les réfugiés ou pour s'opposer à cette attaque[328]. Lors du contre-interrogatoire, le témoin CBR a confirmé qu'il a lui-même entendu Seromba qualifier les cadavres de saletés[329]. Le témoin a en outre affirmé que les attaques ont repris après que les cadavres aient été ramassés[330]. Il a enfin déclaré ne jamais avoir vu Seromba diriger les assaillants le 15 avril 1994 ou le 16 avril 1994 tout en indiquant ce qui suit : « Avant que les autorités ne nous donnent une quelconque instruction, ils devaient d'abord s'entretenir avec le prêtre »[331].

165. Le témoin CNJ[332] a déclaré que pendant l'attaque du 15 avril 1994, les assaillants poursuivaient les réfugiés qui cherchaient à se cacher dans le presbytère et qu'Athanase Seromba les en a empêché en leur « demandant d'enlever d'abord les cadavres qui se trouvaient devant le secrétariat ». Le témoin a dit avoir lui-même entendu Seromba tenir ces propos[333]. Il a, en outre, déclaré que les attaques ont repris après que les cadavres aient été ramassés. Le témoin CNJ s'est ainsi exprimé : « Nous avons dégagé ces corps et après nous sommes entrés dans la cour arrière, l'endroit où il nous empêchait d'entrer avant que nous n'ayons débarrassé ces cadavres. »[334]

166. Le témoin CBJ[335] a rapporté qu'après les attaques du 15 avril 1994, Athanase Seromba a félicité certains assaillants en leur lançant des bouteilles de bière à partir du « deuxième étage » du presbytère. Le témoin a également déclaré avoir vu Seromba, plus tard dans la soirée au secrétariat, s'entretenant avec les Interahamwe et les gendarmes. Il aurait demandé à ces derniers d'amener une pelle mécanique pour enlever les cadavres qui jonchaient le sol devant l'église[336]. Le témoin CBJ a, par ailleurs, déclaré que dès le début des tueries du 15 avril 1994, il a aperçu au « deuxième étage » du presbytère Seromba en compagnie d'Édouard Nturiye, Emmanuel Kayiranga et du grand séminariste Apollinaire Hakizimana observer les massacres qui se déroulaient[337].

167. Le témoin CDK[338] a déclaré avoir vu Athanase Seromba en compagnie de Kanyarukiga et de Kayishema à la paroisse de Nyange vers 14 heures. Le témoin a expliqué que tous les trois se tenaient debout devant le bureau du secrétariat de la paroisse et qu'il se trouvait à une courte distance de ces derniers à ce moment[339].

168. Le témoin BZ1[340] a déclaré ne jamais avoir vu Athanase Seromba du moment où les attaques ont été perpétrées à l'église jusqu'à l'effondrement du clocher[341]. Il a affirmé avoir vu Seromba pour la dernière fois lors de la célébration de la messe le 11 avril 1994[342].

169. Le témoin BZ4[343] a indiqué qu'il n'a jamais vu Athanase Seromba en compagnie des assaillants[344]. Le témoin a en outre soutenu qu'il n'a pas vu Seromba les 15 et 16 avril 1994[345].

170. Le témoin FE31[346] a déclaré qu'il n'a pas vu Athanase Seromba sur les lieux le jour de l'attaque du 15 avril 1994[347]. Le témoin a affirmé que les assaillants ont attaqué Seromba et que ce dernier ne pouvait pas mener d'attaque alors qu'il était lui-même visé par les assaillants[348].

171. Le témoin FE35[349] a déclaré ne pas avoir vu de prêtre au cours de l'attaque du 15 avril 1994. Il a déclaré n'avoir vu que les employés de la commune et la population[350].

172. Le témoin PA1[351] a dit ne pas être sorti du presbytère à la suite des attaques qui ont suivi l'arrivée de l'autobus le 15 avril 1994. Le témoin a en outre déclaré que Seromba était sorti pour s'indigner du fait qu'on tuait « des gens ». Il a par ailleurs précisé qu'il ne se souvenait pas du temps durant lequel Seromba est resté en dehors du presbytère[352]. Il a également expliqué avoir été témoin d'un entretien entre Seromba, Kariramba, Kayiranga, Nturiye, le bourgmestre et Kayishema au cours duquel la question des nombreux cadavres qui jonchaient le sol de la paroisse a été abordée. Le témoin a notamment affirmé que les prêtres ont demandé au bourgmestre « de faire quelque chose » en vue de l'ensevelissement des corps. Ce dernier leur aurait répondu qu'il contacterait le responsable du chantier pour obtenir un bulldozer à cet effet[353].

173. Le témoin YA1, un Hutu[354], a déclaré ne pas avoir vu de religieux le 15 avril 1994[355].

174. Le témoin NA1[356] a expliqué que le 15 avril 1994, vers 18 heures, les prêtres se sont réunis au presbytère et ont mandaté Athanase Seromba pour aller informer le bourgmestre de la commune du déroulement des événements. Le témoin a déclaré que de retour au presbytère, Seromba a expliqué qu'il n'avait pas pu rencontrer le bourgmestre, ce dernier étant allé assister à un enterrement[357]. Le témoin NA1 a en outre affirmé avoir appris tard dans la soirée que le bourgmestre était venu à la paroisse ce même soir et qu'il avait dit au prêtre que le lendemain, il prendrait les mesures nécessaires pour ensevelir les cadavres. Le témoin a enfin précisé qu'il n'a pas assisté à cet entretien et qu'il n'a donc pas vu le bourgmestre à la paroisse le soir du 15 avril 1994[358].

6.7.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

175. La Chambre note que le témoignage de CDL est un ouï-dire et que, par conséquent, ses affirmations selon lesquelles Athanase Seromba aurait conseillé aux assaillants d'attaquer les réfugiés dans l'église et leur aurait également dit de ramasser les cadavres avant de reprendre les tueries ne sont pas fiables.

176. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre estime que le Procureur n'a pas établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable qu'Athanase Seromba a supervisé les attaques du 15 avril 1994 à la paroisse de Nyange.

177. La Chambre relève, par ailleurs, que trois témoins de l'accusation, CDL, CBR et CNJ, ont affirmé dans un récit similaire que lors de l'attaque du 15 avril 1994, Athanase Seromba a empêché les assaillants d'entrer dans la cour du presbytère où des réfugiés s'étaient cachés. Le témoin CDL a notamment rapporté que Seromba se serait entretenu avec le bourgmestre et Ndungutse, quand le témoin CBR évoquait plutôt un entretien entre Seromba, Kayishema et Ndungutse. Quant au témoin CNJ, il a soutenu que Seromba se serait directement adressé aux assaillants.

178. La Chambre note que le témoignage de CDL sur le contenu de l'entretien est un ouï-dire tandis que les témoins CBR et CNJ ont précisé avoir eux-mêmes entendu les propos tenus par Athanase Seromba. Contrairement aux deux premiers témoins, CNJ n'a pas affirmé pas que Seromba a qualifié les cadavres de saletés. Les témoins CBR et CNJ ont, par ailleurs, affirmé que les massacres ont repris après le ramassage des cadavres.

179. La Chambre considère que le témoin CBR est crédible. En effet, lors du contre-interrogatoire, le témoin CBR a confirmé les propos qu'il a tenus lors de l'interrogatoire principal[359]. Le conseil de la Défense a interpellé le témoin CBR sur le fait qu'il ait entendu Kayishema et Ndungutse rapporter qu'Athanase Seromba avait demandé de ramasser les cadavres et qu'il ait lui-même entendu Seromba tenir ces propos[360]. Le témoin CBR a expliqué qu'il n'y avait aucune divergence dans ces deux affirmations. Il a dit qu'il a entendu le prêtre tenir ces propos et que les autorités ont rapporté aux assaillants ce que le prêtre leur avait dit[361].

180. Le témoin CNJ a rapporté une version constante des faits en date du 15 avril 1994, sauf en ce qui concerne l'heure de son arrivée sur les lieux[362]. La Chambre note qu'aucun élément ne permet de douter de la crédibilité de son témoignage sur les faits.

181. Le témoin CBJ a également affirmé qu'Athanase Seromba a demandé que les cadavres soient ramassés, bien qu'il ait situé cet événement dans la soirée du 15 avril 1994. Quant à son témoignage concernant le fait que Seromba aurait félicité les assaillants, aucun autre témoignage n'en fait mention. La Chambre ne retient donc pas le témoignage de CBJ sur ce point.

182. La Chambre retient que les témoignages de CBR, CBJ, CBI et CDK sont concordants quant à la présence d'Athanase Seromba sur les lieux lors des attaques du 15 avril 1994.

183. La Chambre considère que le témoignage de BZ1 n'est pas fiable sur ce point. En effet, ayant d'abord déclaré au cours de l'interrogatoire principal qu'il n'avait pas vu Athanase Seromba le 15 avril 1994, le témoin a admis au cours du contre-interrogatoire ce qui suit : « En tout état de cause, je vous dis que ces gens s'adressaient à [Seromba], mais je ne peux pas dire que je l'ai vu clairement. Mais lorsqu'ils s'adressaient à lui, j'entendais leurs propos. Au fait, je dirais que je l'ai aperçu. »[363]

184. La Chambre considère que le témoignage de BZ4 n'est pas fiable dans la mesure où il a déclaré qu'il n'est pas resté longtemps à la paroisse de Nyange en cette journée du 15 avril 1994[364].

185. La Chambre estime que le témoin FE31 n'est pas crédible sur ce point. En effet, ayant tout d'abord déclaré qu'Athanase Seromba n'était pas présent lors l'attaque du 15 avril 1994, il a par la suite déclaré que les assaillants ont attaqué Seromba. Or aucun autre témoin ne relate que Seromba a été attaqué le 15 avril 1994.

186. Par ailleurs, la Chambre note que, le témoin F31 a déclaré être arrivé à l'église vers 10h30[365], s'être rendu au niveau de la statue de la Vierge, avant de remontre dans la cour de l'église et n'y être resté que 10 minutes sans pénétrer dans le presbytère[366]. Elle constate que le témoin a soutenu dans ses déclarations antérieures, ne pas avoir été présent à la paroisse de Nyange le 15 avril 1994. En effet, lors du contre-interrogatoire, le Procureur a donné lecture de la question 6 figurant sur la déclaration faite par le témoin aux autorités rwandaises le 14 janvier 2000 et ainsi libellée : « Vous êtes accusé d'avoir participé à l'attaque meurtrière qui a été lancée à l'église, c'était en pleine journée et plusieurs personnes vous ont vu, qu'en dites-vous ? ». La Chambre note que la réponse du témoin a été la suivante : « C'est un pur mensonge, je n'y suis jamais allé. »[367]. Le Procureur a également lu la réponse que le témoin a donné à la question 7 et qui est la suivante : « Je ne me suis jamais rendu à l'église, si je m'y étais rendu, les gens m'auraient vu »[368]. Le Procureur a enfin lu au témoin FE31 un extrait de sa déclaration aux autorités rwandaises en date du 19 novembre 1999 : « Quels sont vos moyens de défense relativement aux faits qui vous sont reprochés par le Ministère public; Réponse : Je n'ai jamais commis ces infractions. Je suis resté à la maison. Je ne suis allé nulle part. Je ne suis pas non plus allé à l'église »[369]. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre constate que les déclarations du témoin FE31 sont contradictoires[370].

187. La Chambre considère le témoin FE35 n'est pas non plus crédible pour avoir témoigné qu'il n'a pas vu Athanase Seromba lors des attaques. Au demeurant, elle constate que son témoignage reste vague lorsqu'il déclare avoir quitté l'église entre 13 heures et 16 heures[371].

188. La Chambre considère que le témoignage de PA1 n'est pas déterminant. En effet, elle note qu'il a témoigné sur les faits et gestes d'Athanase Seromba à sa sortie du presbytère quoique n'ayant pas suivi pour constater de visu le comportement de ce dernier. Elle estime donc que le témoignage de PA1 n'est pas fiable.

189. La Chambre considère que le témoignage de NA1 n'est pas non plus déterminant, ce dernier n'ayant pas assisté à l'entretien au cours duquel le bourgmestre, dans la soirée du 15 avril 1994, aurait promis aux prêtres de faire venir des bulldozers pour ramasser les cadavres.

190. La Chambre considère que le témoin YA1 n'est pas crédible. En effet, son témoignage recèle des contradictions : tantôt il affirme avoir assisté aux événements du 15 avril 1994 en se tenant près de la statue de la vierge Marie, tantôt il indique ne pas être allé à la paroisse le 15 avril 1994[372].

191. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre conclut qu'il est établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable que le 15 avril 1994, Athanase Seromba a demandé aux assaillants, qui s'apprêtaient à attaquer les Tutsis dans la cour du presbytère, d'arrêter les tueries et de ramasser d'abord les cadavres. Elle conclut également que les attaques contre les réfugiés tutsis ont repris après le ramassage des corps.

6.8. De la mort de nombreux réfugiés tutsis parmi lesquels se trouvaient l'enseignant Gatare ainsi qu'Alexia et Meriam, deux femmes tutsies réfugiées

Les témoins du Procureur

192. Le témoin CBT[373] a déclaré avoir vu le 15 avril 1994, aux environs de midi, Athanase Seromba sur l'escalier devant le secrétariat en compagnie de l'enseignant Anicet Gatare[374]. Le témoin a affirmé que Seromba a accompagné Anicet Gatare jusqu'à la porte du secrétariat où il l'a livré aux trois gendarmes qui y étaient de faction. Il a déclaré que ces derniers ont emmené Anicet Gatare et l'ont abattu d'une balle[375]. Il a expliqué que lors de cet incident, Seromba se trouvait sur la véranda du secrétariat de la paroisse[376]. Il a affirmé également qu'après avoir livré Anicet Gatare aux gendarmes, Seromba est retourné dans la « cour intérieure »[377].

193. Le témoin CBJ[378] a déclaré avoir connu Meriam pendant son séjour à l'église de Nyange, du 10 au 16 avril 1994. Il a ajouté que cette dernière faisait partie d'un groupe de privilégiés Tutsis qu'Athanase Seromba avait accueillis au presbytère jusqu'au 14 avril 1994. Le témoin a en outre fait remarquer qu'à la suite de la réunion du 14 avril 1994 dont le but, à son avis, était de tuer les Tutsis, toutes les personnes hébergées au presbytère ont été refoulées par Seromba[379]. Il a également témoigné du fait que les réfugiés sont sortis après l'ouverture des portes de l'église, le matin du 15 avril 1994. Il a déclaré notamment que Meriam est retournée au presbytère pour échapper aux Interahamwe qui avaient commencé leurs attaques contre les réfugiés. Le témoin CBJ a par ailleurs souligné que ces attaques ont eu lieu entre 13 heures et 15 heures et a fait observer que Seromba a une fois de plus refoulé toutes les personnes d'origine tutsie, dont Meriam, qui se trouvaient dans la cour arrière du presbytère. Il a notamment expliqué que Meriam a été « tabassée » devant le secrétariat et traînée jusqu'à l'église par Muringanyi pendant que Fulgence Kayishema la tenait par la tête qu'il cognait contre le sol dans la cour[380]. Le témoin a également affirmé avoir vu la dépouille mortelle de Meriam dénudée[381]. Il a par ailleurs déclaré que le même jour, aux environs 19 heures, il a entendu Seromba appeler son veilleur, Canisius Habiyambere et lui ordonner de fouiller dans la cour arrière du presbytère pour voir s'il n'y avait pas de Tutsis qui s'y étaient cachés[382]. Le témoin CBJ a enfin déclaré avoir vu un gendarme devant le couloir, près du premier étage, tirer à bout portant sur Anicet Gatare qui, atteint d'une balle dans la poitrine, est décédé par la suite[383].

194. Le témoin CBK[384] a déclaré avoir vu de nombreuses victimes parmi lesquelles il a pu identifier Adrienne, une aspirante religieuse venant de la commune de Nyinawajambo, Anicet Gatare, un enseignant, Boniface Gatare, l'encadreur de la jeunesse dans la commune de Kivumu et Kanamugire, employé au MINITRAP[385]. Le témoin a indiqué qu'Anicet Gatare a été tué par des gendarmes le 13 avril 1994. Il a en outre indiqué avoir appris des gendarmes qu'Anicet Gatare leur avait offert de l'argent pour qu'ils le tuent par balle car ne souhaitant mourir à coups de machette[386]. Le témoin CBK a par ailleurs affirmé que Fulgence Kayishema a tué Meriam en cognant sa tête contre des briques[387] pendant que Seromba, présent sur les lieux, n'a rien fait pour l'en empêcher[388].

195. Le témoin BZ1[389] a déclaré qu'Anicet Gatare a demandé à un gendarme de le tuer pour éviter une mort atroce lorsqu'il a vu les assaillants arriver. Il a déclaré que les assaillants qualifiaient Athanase Seromba de complice des Inkotanyi parce qu'il ne voulait pas livrer aux assaillants les personnes qui se trouvaient à la paroisse[390].

196. Le témoin BZ2[391] a déclaré avoir appris que plusieurs personnes avaient succombé à la paroisse de Nyange dont son amie Meriam et un enseignant nommé Anicet Gatare[392].

197. Le témoin FE31[393] a déclaré qu'on lui a rapporté qu'Anicet Gatare aurait dit aux gendarmes de tirer sur lui pour éviter une mort à la machette. Le témoin a en outre affirmé ignorer qu'il ait été livré aux gendarmes. Il a enfin ajouté que les assaillants ont trouvé Anicet Gatare sur place et l'ont tué à coups de machette[394].

198. Le témoin FE55[395] a affirmé que Meriam et Anicet Gatare ont été tués le vendredi 15 avril 1994[396].

6.8.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

199. La Chambre note que les témoins CBT, CBJ, CBK, BZ2 et FE55 ont confirmé la mort des réfugiés tutsis Anicet Gatare et Meriam. Elle relève que les témoins BZ1 et FE31 n'évoquent que la mort d'Anicet Gatare. La Chambre constate enfin qu'aucun témoin en l'espèce ne fait référence à la mort d'Alexia. En conséquence, la Chambre estime que sont établis au-delà de tout doute raisonnable les meurtres de Meriam et d'Anicet Gatare.

200. En ce qui concerne le meurtre d'Anicet Gatare, la Chambre relève que les déclarations des témoins CBT et CBJ ne sont pas concordantes quant aux circonstances de la mort de ce dernier. La Chambre retient plutôt les témoignages des témoins CBK, BZ1 et FE31 selon lesquels Anicet Gatare aurait été tué par un gendarme moyennant une somme d'argent pour mourir par balle et non à coups de machette.

201. S'agissant du meurtre de Meriam, la Chambre retient le témoignage de CBJ selon lequel Athanase Seromba a refoulé plusieurs réfugiés du presbytère, dont Meriam, et que cette dernière a, par la suite, été tuée par les assaillants. La Chambre considère le témoignage de CBJ crédible. Elle observe, en outre, que le témoin CBK livre des détails concordants sur les circonstances entourant la mort de Meriam. Elle estime que ce témoin est crédible.

202. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre conclut que le Procureur n'a pas établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable qu'Athanase Seromba a livré Anicet Gatare aux gendarmes. La Chambre estime

7. Des évenements du 16 avril 1994 à la paroisse de Nyange

7.1. L'Acte d'accusation

203. L'Acte d'accusation allègue ce qui suit :

> « 23. De nombreux réfugiés ont été tués lors de ces attaques. Un bulldozer a été utilisé par trois employés de la société Astaldi (Mitima, Mauricet Flambeau) pour débarrasser [sic] l'église des nombreux cadavres des victimes qui la recouvraient. Fulgence Kayishema a été invité à fournir deux chauffeurs supplémentaires pour achever ce travail. L'un d'eux, Evarist Rwamasirabo, qui avait refusé d'y prendre part, a été tué sur-le-champ.
> 26. Quand les cadavres des victimes ont été enlevés de l'église, Védaste Mupende a ordonné au chauffeur (Athanase alias 2000) de démolir celle-ci. Ce dernier a refusé au motif que l'église était la maison de Dieu.
> 27. Immédiatement après, Védaste Mupende, Fulgence Kayishema et Grégoire Ndahimana ont demandé à Athanase Seromba d'intervenir, suite à quoi il est venu et a ordonné à Athanase alias 2000 de détruire l'église, en lui disant que les Hutus étaient nombreux et qu'ils pourraient en reconstruire une autre.
> 28. À l'aide d'un bulldozer, Athanase a démoli l'église dont le toit s'est effondré tuant du même coup plus de 2000 réfugiés tutsis regroupés en son sein. Les quelques survivants qu'il y avait ont été attaqués par les Interahamwe qui tenaient à les achever.
> 29. Le ou vers le 16 avril 1994, après la destruction de l'église, les autorités ont tenu une réunion dans la paroisse. Peu après, le père Seromba a ordonné aux Interahamwe de nettoyer la « saleté ». Les cadavres des victimes ont été ensevelis dans des fosses communes.
> 30. Le transfert des cadavres dans les fosses communes a duré environ deux jours, sous la supervision d'Athanase Seromba, Fulgence Kayishema, Grégoire Ndahimana et d'autres personnes inconnues du Procureur.
> 47. Après la complète destruction de l'église, le père Athanase Seromba a rencontré Fulgence Kayishema, Grégoire Ndahimana, Gaspard Kanyirukiga et les conducteurs du bulldozer et s'est assis pour boire de la bière avec eux.
> 49. Vers le 15 avril 1994 ou à cette date, le père Athanase Seromba a ordonné ou planifié la destruction de l'église où plus de 2000 Tutsis se trouvaient pris au piège, provoquant ainsi leur mort, ou aidé et encouragé la destruction de ladite église. »

7.2. De la présence d'un bulldozer dans la cour de l'église

7.2.1. La preuve

Les témoins du Procureur

204. Les témoins CBK[397], CDK[398] et CBT[399] ont fait état de la présence d'un bulldozer à la paroisse de Nyange[400]. Quant aux témoins CBJ[401], CBR[402] et CDL[403], ils ont évoqué la présence de deux bulldozers[404].

Les témoins de la Défense

7.2.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

206. La Chambre note que treize témoins ont déclaré avoir vu un bulldozer à l'église de Nyange tandis que sept autres font état de la présence de deux bulldozers. La Chambre est d'avis que la divergence entre les témoins est due à la difficulté qu'ils avaient à identifier la nature des engins présents à l'église de Nyange. Elle considère donc que le Procureur a établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable qu'au moins un bulldozer était présent à l'église de Nyange le 16 avril 1994.

207. Le témoin FE32, un des conducteurs du bulldozer qui a détruit l'église de Nyange[421], a déclaré que le 16 avril 1994, vers 9h30, Fulgence Kayishema est allé le voir à son domicile[422]. Il a expliqué que ce dernier cherchait les chauffeurs de la société Astaldi et leur a demandé les raisons de leur réticence à « aider les autres ». Le témoin a expliqué qu'ils lui ont répondu ne pas être venus pour tuer des « gens ». Il a affirmé que Fulgence Kayishema les a harcelés et qu'ils ont été conduits de force à l'église par les gendarmes[423]. Le témoin a déclaré que Kayishema leur a dit qu'ils devaient aider les « autres » à enterrer les cadavres. Le témoin a expliqué qu'à la suite d'une querelle, un gendarme a tiré une balle dans la tête d'Evariste Ntahomvukiye qui en est mort[424]. Le témoin a indiqué que ce meurtre a eu lieu sur la route principale de Gitarama qui mène vers l'église, entre la statue de la Vierge Marie[425] et la maison Caritas[426].

7.3.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

208. La Chambre considère que le témoin FE32 n'est pas crédible sur ce point. En effet, elle constate qu'il est le seul témoin à rapporter ce meurtre alors que ce fait a eu lieu dans un lieu public. En outre, elle observe la tendance du témoin à utiliser le prétendu décès d'Evariste Ntahomvukiye pour appuyer la thèse selon laquelle il aurait détruit l'église sous la contrainte.

209. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre considère que le meurtre d'Evarist Rwamasirabo n'a pas été établi par le Procureur.

7.4. De l'ordre donné par Athanase Seromba de détruire l'église

7.4.1. La preuve

Les Témoins du Procureur

210. Le témoin CBJ[427] a affirmé qu'une réunion s'est tenue à la Codekoki le 16 avril 1994, à laquelle ont participé Athanase Seromba, l'homme d'affaires Gaspard Kanyarukiga, l'inspecteur de police judiciaire Fulgence Kayishema, l'enseignant Télesphore Ndungutse, le juge Habyambere, l'homme d'affaires François Gashugi et bien d'autres qui travaillaient avec ces personnes. Il a expliqué que des assaillants qui se tenaient près du bâtiment de la Codecoki attendaient qu'on leur donne le signal pour lancer les attaques[428]. Il a expliqué que lorsqu'il a vu cette réunion, il était dans la tour de l'église[429]. Le témoin CBJ a dit avoir vu Seromba devant le bureau du secrétariat des prêtres au moment où les bulldozers se sont mis en marche le 16 avril 1994. Il a dit avoir également vu des Interahamwe et le chauffeur du bulldozer Anastase pénétrer dans la cour du presbytère et en ressortir. Il a déclaré avoir été témoin d'un entretien entre ce dernier et Seromba, qu'il rapporte comme suit :

> « J'ai entendu un chauffeur s'adresser à lui en ces termes : « Vraiment, Monsieur l'Abbé, vous acceptez que je démolisse l'église ? » J'ai vu l'abbé Seromba Athanase hocher la tête. Le chauffeur s'est adressé encore une fois à l'abbé Seromba et il s'est adressé à lui pour la troisième fois : « Monsieur l'abbé, acceptez-vous que je démolisse l'église ? » Et l'abbé

> Athanase Seromba a répondu en ces termes : « À moins que vous autres, vous aussi, vous êtes un Inyenzi, détruisez-là. Tout ce que nous voulons, c'est nous défaire des Inyenzi. Pour le reste, les Hutus… nous, les Hutus, nous sommes nombreux. Si nous arrivons à nous défaire des Inyenzi, nous allons construire une nouvelle église. »[430]

211. Le témoin CBJ a expliqué que suite à cet entretien, il a vu Athanase Seromba retirer un objet de sa poche et le remettre au chauffeur du bulldozer. Ce dernier aurait alors commencé à détruire l'église[431].

212. Le témoin CBK[432] a déclaré avoir vu Athanase Seromba, Kayishema, Ndahimana, Kanyarukiga et d'autres personnes se réunir au secrétariat le matin du 16 avril 1994. Il affirmé avoir entendu Kayishema dire qu'il fallait démolir la tour de l'église parce qu'il y avait des intellectuels tutsis qui s'y cachaient. Il a indiqué qu'il était à moins de trois mètres de l'endroit où se tenait cette réunion. Il a expliqué qu'à la suite de cette conversation, Seromba et ces personnes sont montés au « niveau supérieur du secrétariat »[433].

213. Le témoin CBK a, par ailleurs, soutenu que le chauffeur du bulldozer s'appelait Anastase. Il a affirmé qu'Athanase Seromba était présent lorsque ce dernier est arrivé avec le bulldozer. Il a relaté, à quatre reprises, l'entretien suivant entre le chauffeur et Seromba :

> « […] il a demandé à l'abbé Seromba, il a demandé trois fois à l'abbé Seromba : « Est-ce que nous devons détruire cette église ? ». Alors, il a répondu : « Détruisez l'église. Nous, les Hutus, nous sommes assez nombreux et, de plus, dans la maison de Dieu, il est arrivé des démons… que nous, les Hutus, nous sommes nombreux, nous allons en construire une autre » »[434].
> « Anastase a demandé à Seromba : « Est-ce qu'il faut que je détruise cette église ? » Il lui a posé la question à trois reprises, et il lui a dit : « Détruisez-là. » […] Et en plus, il a dit : « Les Hutus, nous sommes nombreux, nous allons construire une autre église » »[435].
> « […] c'est que ce chauffeur qui est venu détruire l'église lui a demandé trois fois, à trois reprises, s'il devait détruire l'église. Alors, il a dit: « Détruisez-la ! » »[436].
> « C'est Anastase qui a demandé au père Seromba s'il fallait détruire l'église, et Seromba lui a dit : « Écoutez, vous pouvez la détruire. Nous sommes nombreux, nous allons rebâtir l'église. Lorsqu'il y a des démons dans l'église, il faut la détruire. »[437]

214. Selon le témoin CBK, l'ex-bourgmestre de la commune de Gisovu, l'IPJ de la commune, les assistants du bourgmestre, et les policiers communaux de la commune de Kivumu étaient présents lors de cet entretien. Le chauffeur se serait alors mis à démolir l'église. Le témoin a en outre précisé qu'Athanase Seromba n'a rien fait pour empêcher la démolition de l'église. Au moment de la destruction de l'église, le témoin se serait trouvé avec Seromba devant le secrétariat de l'église. Il a déclaré avoir dit à Seromba qu'il avait peur et que ce dernier l'aurait alors rassuré en lui disant que seuls les Tutsis étaient les cibles de ces tueries[438].

215. Le témoin CBK a, par ailleurs, indiqué que c'est Kayishema qui a donné l'ordre d'aller chercher le bulldozer[439]. Le témoin tient Athanase Seromba pour responsable de la destruction de l'église en raison des propos qu'il a tenus au chauffeur du bulldozer[440]. Il a déclaré avoir vu Seromba observer les tueries qui se sont poursuivies après l'effondrement du clocher de l'église[441].

216. Le témoin CNJ[442] a affirmé qu'Athanase Seromba collaborait avec les assaillants, quoi qu'il n'ait pas donné l'ordre de détruire l'église[443]. Il a également rapporté les propos que les autorités ont tenu par rapport à Seromba et à la destruction de l'église : « Lorsque Seromba arrivera, c'est lui qui va prendre la décision si toute l'église doit être carrément détruite ou s'il avait une alternative, si les gens pouvaient entrer à l'intérieur pour avoir accès à l'église »[444]. Il a expliqué qu'après cet entretien, Kayishema s'est dirigé vers l'arrière de l'église et près du presbytère, pour en revenir cinq minutes plus tard en compagnie de Seromba. Ce dernier serait arrivé près du bulldozer et aurait salué les autorités qui se tenaient à proximité de cet engin. Le témoin a expliqué que Kayishema a donné l'ordre au chauffeur du bulldozer, en présence de Seromba, de commencer la destruction de l'église. Le témoin a précisé qu'il se trouvait à environ deux mètres de la scène. Seromba aurait alors dit au chauffeur : « Fais attention, il ne faut pas que le mur tombe sur toi ». Il a indiqué qu'il se tenait à quatre mètres environ de Seromba lorsque celui-ci tenait ces propos. Il a précisé que ces faits se sont déroulés entre 9 heures et 10 heures[445]. Le témoin a enfin déclaré que le 16 avril 1994, Seromba se déplaçait avec les autorités pour suivre les mouvements des bulldozers qui étaient en train de détruire l'église[446].

217. Le témoin CDL[447] a déclaré avoir assisté à un entretien entre le bourgmestre et Athanase Seromba le matin du 16 avril 1994, vers 7h30. Il a expliqué qu'après cet entretien, le bourgmestre s'est entretenu avec d'autres autorités de la commune dont Ndungutse, Habiyambere, Kayishema ainsi que des policiers et réservistes. Selon le témoin, ces différentes autorités ont pris la décision d'utiliser des bulldozers pour détruire l'église. Il a ensuite rapporté que ces dernières se sont rendues alors auprès de Seromba qui se tenait debout devant le secrétariat et lui ont dit qu'ils n'avaient plus d'autres moyens à part les bulldozers pour détruire l'église et atteindre les réfugiés. Seromba leur aurait dit : « Si vous n'avez plus d'autres moyens, amenez ces bulldozers et détruisez l'église». Le témoin a précisé qu'il ne se trouvait pas loin du lieu où Seromba a tenu ces propos[448]. Il a expliqué que la décision de détruire l'église a été prise par ces autorités et que Seromba a accepté cette décision[449].

218. Le témoin CDL a, par ailleurs, affirmé qu'Athanase Seromba a conseillé aux chauffeurs des bulldozers de commencer la destruction de l'église du côté de la sacristie[450]. Il a en outre affirmé ce qui suit : « Comme je l'ai dit, il montrait l'endroit fragile où l'on devait commencer pour tuer les Tutsis. Et chaque fois, quand les décisions étaient prises, il venait toujours de s'entretenir avec le bourgmestre. Aucune chose ne se faisait sans son assentiment. En tout cas, il n'a pas manifesté la volonté de venir au secours de ces réfugiés »[451].

219. Le témoin CBR[452] a déclaré avoir vu, le 16 avril 1994, Ndahimana, Kayishema, Kanyarukiga, Ndungutse, Habiyambere et Murangwabugabo, entrer dans la cour du presbytère et en ressortir quelques instants plus tard en compagnie d'Athanase Seromba[453]. Le témoin a affirmé qu'Athanase Seromba ne dirigeait pas les assaillants le 16 avril 1994. Il a notamment ajouté ce qui suit : « Avant que les autorités ne nous donnent une quelconque instruction, ils devaient d'abord s'entretenir avec le 220. Le témoin FE32, le conducteur du bulldozer qui a détruit l'église de Nyange[455], a affirmé que Védaste Murangwabugabo et Anastase Rushema dirigeaient les activités le 16 avril 1994. Il a précisé que c'est que Kayishema qui l'a obligé à détruire l'église et non Athanase Seromba. Il a expliqué avoir répété à trois reprises à Rushema qu'il était interdit de détruire une église. Le témoin a expliqué qu'il a procédé à la destruction de l'église après avoir été l'objet de menaces de mort. Il a affirmé qu'alors qu'il avait commencé à détruire l'église, Seromba est en fait accouru s'en plaindre à Rushema et lui aurait dit: « Je vous ai interdit, hier, de tuer des gens ici sur place et vous venez aussi de démolir l'église. » Le témoin a affirmé ne pas avoir revu Seromba durant la destruction de l'église. Selon lui, Seromba était impuissant face à cette situation[456]. Le témoin a également indiqué ne pas avoir été informé d'une réunion au cours de laquelle la décision de faire venir les bulldozers a été prise. Le témoin a enfin affirmé qu'étant « simple chauffeur », il ne pouvait pas être au courant de la tenue d'une telle réunion[457].

221. Le témoin BZ1, un Hutu[458], a déclaré ne jamais avoir vu Athanase Seromba du moment où les attaques ont été perpétrées à l'église jusqu'à l'effondrement du clocher[459]. Il a affirmé avoir vu Seromba pour la dernière fois au moment où celui-ci a dit la messe le 11 avril 1994 et qu'il ne l'a plus revu par la suite[460].

222. Le témoin BZ1 a par ailleurs affirmé qu'il est arrivé sur les lieux quand le bulldozer détruisait le clocher. Selon lui, le bulldozer avait été amené pour enterrer les cadavres qui se trouvaient sur les lieux. Par la suite, l'objectif aurait été détourné en vue de la démolition de l'église[461]. Le témoin soutient que ce sont les autorités communales à savoir Kayishema, Ndungutse et Ndahimana qui ont fait venir le bulldozer le jour de la démolition de l'église[462]. Le témoin a notamment déclaré ce qui suit : « les gens disaient qu'il y avait des gens à l'intérieur de l'église qu'on ne pouvait pas atteindre et on a pris, donc, la décision de démolir l'église. On a donné l'ordre à celui qui conduisait ce bulldozer de démolir l'église »[463].

223. Le témoin BZ1 a, par ailleurs, nié s'être joint au groupe des assaillants lors des attaques contre les Tutsis et de la destruction de l'église. Il a déclaré s'être rendu sur les lieux pour assister aux événements tragiques qui s'y déroulaient[464]. Il a affirmé ne pas avoir vu Athanase Seromba les 15 et 16 avril 1994[465].

224. Le témoin BZ4[466] a déclaré s'être rendu près de la paroisse de Nyange le matin du 16 avril 1994, plus précisément au centre commercial de Nyange[467]. Il a en outre indiqué avoir appris que des gens s'étaient concertés et avaient pensé que le bulldozer pouvait servir à la destruction de l'église. Le témoin a également ajouté que Fulgence Kayishema a été cité comme celui ayant demandé au chauffeur Nteziryayo d'utiliser le bulldozer pour détruire l'église où s'étaient retranchés les réfugiés[468].

225. Le témoin BZ4 a par ailleurs soutenu qu'il n'a vu ni Athanase Seromba ni aucun autre religieux sur les lieux au moment de la destruction de l'église et qu'il n'a jamais entendu dire que c'est Seromba qui avait ordonné la destruction de l'église[469]. Il a ajouté avoir quitté les lieux après la destruction de l'église[470]. Il a, en outre, indiqué ne pas avoir vu Seromba les 15 et 16 avril 1994[471].

226. Le témoin a, par ailleurs, indiqué qu'il est arrivé sur les lieux dans la matinée, sans pouvoir préciser l'heure exacte de son arrivée, ni celle du bulldozer à l'église. Le témoin a ajouté cependant qu'il était présent sur les lieux quand le bulldozer est arrivé[472]. Il a déclaré qu'il s'est rendu à Nyange le jour de la destruction de l'église afin de pouvoir suivre l'évolution de la situation et a soutenu qu'il n'a pas participé aux attaques[473].

227. Le témoin CF23[474] a affirmé que le bulldozer était conduit par Anastase Nkinamubanzi ainsi que par d'autres chauffeurs zaïrois[475]. Il a déclaré qu'Anastase Rushema et Ndungutse étaient les coordinateurs des activités de destruction[476]. Le témoin a déclaré qu'il est arrivé à l'Église au moment où la destruction était déjà entamée et qu'il n'y est resté que quelques minutes, ayant ensuite décidé de repartir chez lui[477].

228. Le témoin FE35, un Hutu[478], a affirmé n'avoir jamais entendu dire qu'Athanase Seromba s'était réuni avec les autorités communales pour planifier la démolition de l'église[479]. Le témoin a en outre affirmé que les chauffeurs des bulldozers avaient été réquisitionnés par Anastase Kayishema, Télesphore Ndungutse et les policiers et qu'ils travaillaient sous leurs ordres[480]. Le témoin a soutenu que les « leaders » des assaillants n'ont pas agi de concert avec Athanase Seromba[481]. De l'avis du témoin FE35, Seromba n'a pas ordonné la destruction de l'église et n'a jamais soutenu les assaillants qui ont détruit l'église. Le témoin a insisté sur le fait que Seromba n'a joué aucun rôle dans les massacres perpétrés à Nyange[482] et qu'il ne l'a jamais vu à l'église au cours de sa destruction[483].

229. Le témoin FE35 a, par ailleurs, affirmé que Kayishema, Anastase Rushema et Ndahimana escortaient les bulldozers et supervisaient la destruction de l'église sur les lieux[484].

230. Le témoin PA1[485] a rapporté que lorsque la destruction de l'église a commencé, les prêtres dont Athanase Seromba se trouvaient dans le presbytère. Il aurait entendu « un bruit inqualifiable » avant de réaliser que l'église était en train d'être détruite. Il a expliqué que Seromba est immédiatement sorti du presbytère, tout furieux[486]. Le témoin PA1 a expliqué enfin qu'il n'a pas vu Seromba donner l'ordre de détruire l'église[487].

231. Le témoin NA1[488] a déclaré que le 16 avril 1994, vers 8 heures, il est passé au réfectoire et a aperçu les assaillants qui encerclaient l'église et un tracteur qui évacuait les cadavres. Le témoin a également rapporté que plus tard, il a entendu du bruit et vu de la poussière monter. A ce moment, curieux de savoir ce qui se passait, les prêtres seraient montés à l'étage. Le témoin a ajouté que les prêtres ont observé la destruction de l'église sans faire de commentaire[489].

232. Le témoin NA1 a, par ailleurs, affirmé que les religieux se sont par la suite approchés des gendarmes pour leur demander de sauver la situation. Ces derniers leur auraient répondu qu'ils étaient en nombre insuffisant pour affronter les assaillants et qu'ils n'avaient pas pour mission de tirer sur les gens[490].

233. La Chambre considère que le témoin CBJ est crédible[491] sur le point en discussion. En effet, il n'existe aucune contradiction entre son témoignage et ses déclarations antérieures. En outre, dans son procès-verbal devant les autorités judicaires rwandaises en date du 24 juin 1997, le témoin porte plainte contre Anastase Rushema et ne fait allusion ni à Athanase Seromba ni à la destruction de l'église de manière approfondie, se contentant d'affirmer que Seromba a collaboré avec Rushema dans les attaques du 15 et du 16 avril 1994[492]. Dans un autre procès-verbal devant les autorités judiciaires rwandaises en date du 25 mars 1997, à la question à savoir quels étaient les auteurs des tueries et de la destruction de l'église, le témoin CBJ a répondu que « l'abbé Seromba … a également joué un rôle.»[493].

234. La Chambre considère que le témoin CBJ est également crédible sur deux faits : la tenue d'une réunion le 16 avril 1994 entre Seromba et d'autres personnes et la remise par Seromba d'un objet au conducteur du bulldozer. Par contre, elle est d'avis que son témoignage ne peut être considéré comme fiable sur les propos que Seromba aurait tenus au conducteur du bulldozer, et ce en raison de l'endroit où il se trouvait. En effet, la Chambre constate que de la tour de l'église où il était, il lui était matériellement impossible d'entendre les propos échangés entre Seromba et le conducteur du bulldozer au niveau du secrétariat de la paroisse en raison de la distance séparant ces deux endroits[494].

235. La Chambre estime que témoin CBK est crédible, et ce malgré une variation entre sa déclaration du 15 août 2000 et son témoignage devant la Chambre au sujet de l'identité du conducteur du bulldozer. En effet, lors de son témoignage, le témoin CBK a indiqué que le bulldozer était conduit par Anastase[495]. Interpellé toutefois par le conseil de la Défense sur sa déclaration du 15 août 2000 dans laquelle il a affirmé que Flambeau, un zaïrois, était « l'opérateur du bulldozer »[496], le témoin a répondu qu'il a voulu plutôt dire que « Flambeau surveillait les travaux alors qu'Anastase conduisait le bulldozer »[497]. De l'avis de la Chambre, cette variation sur l'identité des victimes n'entache pas la crédibilité du témoin compte tenu notamment des témoignages de FE32 et de CF23 qui évoquent la présence de plusieurs chauffeurs zaïrois[498] et plus particulièrement le témoignage de FE32 quant au fait qu'il ait été remplacé par un autre conducteur au cours de la destruction de l'église[499]. Enfin, en ce qui concerne les faits allégués par le témoin concernant Athanase Seromba, le témoin a toujours fait référence à Anastase comme étant le chauffeur du bulldozer.

236. La Chambre considère que le témoin CBK est également crédible, d'une part, sur la tenue d'une réunion le matin du 16 avril 1994 à laquelle ont participé Athanase Seromba et d'autres personnes. Au cours de cette réunion, Kayishema aurait dit qu'il fallait détruire la tour de église pour y tuer les intellectuels Tutsis qui s'y trouvaient, et d'autre part, sur la conversation entre le conducteur du bulldozer et Seromba au cours de laquelle le premier a demandé à trois reprises au second s'il devait détruire l'église. Seromba lui aurait alors répondu par l'affirmative. Le témoignage du témoin est fiable étant donné qu'il se trouvait tout près des intéressés lorsque ces faits se sont produits.

237. La Chambre considère que le témoin CNJ n'est pas crédible. En effet, lors du contre-interrogatoire, le conseil de la Défense a relevé dans quatre déclarations antérieures différentes que le témoin CNJ a déclaré être arrivé après le début de la destruction de l'église. Le témoin n'a fourni aucune explication convaincante pour justifier ces contradictions, se contentant plutôt d'affirmer que ces déclarations sont tantôt fausses, tantôt incomplètes ou encore rédigées sous la contrainte ou en vue d'une compensation financière[500].

238. La Chambre considère que le témoin CDL est crédible. En effet, elle note qu'aucune contradiction n'a été relevée dans son témoignage. Elle estime, en outre, qu'il n'y a aucun doute sur le fait que le témoin a était présent lors des entretiens qu'il a évoqué dans son témoignage. La Chambre constate, par ailleurs, que le conseil de la Défense n'a relevé qu'une omission sans importance entre le témoignage de CDL et la lettre que ce dernier a adressé aux autorités rwandaises du 16 avril 1999[501]. En effet, le conseil de la Défense a fait noter au témoin que dans cette déclaration, le témoin n'a pas fait mention du fait que le bourgmestre se serait entretenu avec Athanase Seromba avant de donner le coup d'envoi des attaques. Le témoin a répondu qu'il n'avait pas livré tous les détails lors de ses déclarations antérieures ne l'estimant pas nécessaire à l'époque[502]. Dans cette même déclaration, le témoin a cependant mentionné ce qui suit : « Vers 10 heures, le bourgmestre, l'IPJ et le gendarme se sont convenus avec Seromba de démolir l'église. »[503]

239. La Chambre considère le témoin CDL est également crédible sur deux faits : l'entretien entre Athanase Seromba, Kayishema, Ndahimana, Kanyarukiga, Habarugira et d'autres personnes et au cours de laquelle Seromba aurait accepté la décision de détruire l'église et aurait dit : « Si vous n'avez plus d'autres moyens, amenez ces bulldozers et détruisez l'église », d'une part, et les indications données par Seromba aux conducteurs sur le côté fragile de l'église, d'autre part.

240. La Chambre considère que le témoin CBR est crédible. Le conseil de la Défense a abordé deux points lors du contre interrogatoire qui ne sont pas de nature à entacher la crédibilité du témoin en raison des explications qu'il a fournies. En effet, le conseil de la Défense a interpellé le témoin CBR sur la déclaration qu'il a faite le 29 août 2000 et dans laquelle il aurait déclaré ce qui suit : « Après avoir constaté que les attaques menées… à la façon du bourgmestre n'étaient pas efficaces, le groupe qui accompagnait le bourgmestre s'est dirigé vers le presbytère pour se réunir avec Seromba : Ndahimana, Muraginabugabo, Kayishema, Ndungutse, Habarigira, Kanyarukiga, Habyambere »[504]. Le conseil de la Défense a ensuite interrogé le témoin sur le fait qu'il avait auparavant dit n'avoir vu Seromba qu'une seule fois en date du 16 avril 1994, celui-ci a expliqué qu'en date du 16 avril 1994, les personnes dont il a mentionné les noms se sont rendues au presbytère et que dès leur retour du presbytère, on a tiré sur l'église[505].

241. Le conseil de la Défense a ensuite lu une autre partie de la déclaration du 29 août 2000 du témoin CBR dans laquelle celui-ci dit ce qui suit : « Après que tout se soit effondré, les autorités se sont réunies avec Athanase Seromba, et c'est après cette réunion que j'ai… je l'ai entendu dire de débarrasser les saletés qui se trouvent devant sa maison. Lorsqu'il parlait de saleté, il voulait nous expliquer de déplacer les cadavres »[506]. Le conseil de la Défense a alors demandé au témoin CBR si cette déclaration ne signifiait pas que le témoin a vu Seromba après la destruction de l'église. Le témoin a répondu par la négative[507]. Il a précisé avoir vu Seromba le matin du 16 avril 1994 et ne pas l'avoir revu après. Le témoin a rappelé être retourné à son domicile après l'effondrement de l'église. Il a indiqué que Seromba a tenu ses propos sur le « débarrassage de la saleté » le 15 avril 1994 et que la réunion s'est tenue le 15 avril 1994 et non le 16 avril 1994. Le témoin CBR a soutenu qu'il y a une confusion de dates dans la consignation de sa déclaration faite en kinyarwanda[508].

242. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre considère que le témoin CBR est encore crédible sur autre fait : les entretiens et rencontres entre Athanase Seromba et les autorités le 16 avril 1994.

243. La Chambre considère que le témoin de la Défense FE32 n'est pas crédible sur les événements du 16 avril 1994, et ce en raison des nombreuses contradictions qui existent entre son témoignage, d'une part, et dans ses déclarations antérieures d'autre part. La Chambre ne relèvera ici que les contradictions les plus importantes.

244. Dans le bulletin d'accusation no 2 d'African Rights, le témoin FE32 a dit :

> « L'abbé Seromba, qui était en faveur de cette solution a dit: « Elle doit être détruite afin que nous puissions nous débarrasser de l'ennemi. Dès que l'ennemi ne sera plus là, nous en reconstruirons une autre.
> Anastase rechignait à passer l'église au bulldozer, mais il a dit que Seromba apaisa ses craintes. L'abbé Seromba a dit : « Il y a beaucoup de chrétiens à l'étranger, cette église sera reconstruite en trois jours »[509].

245. Le témoin FE32 a affirmé que ces déclarations sont mensongères et insiste sur le fait que les autorités rwandaises ne veulent pas reconnaître qu'il a été forcé de détruire l'église[510].

246. Dans une déclaration aux autorités rwandaises le 27 août 1996, le témoin FE32 a dit ce qui suit :

> « Ils m'ont ordonné de détruire cette église. J'ajoute que le curé de cette paroisse répondant au nom de Seromba était présent et il n'a rien dit au sujet de la destruction de l'église. J'ai exécuté les ordres pour sauver ma vie. À part ces militaires, l'IPJ Kayishema ainsi que le curé de ladite paroisse – Seromba – personne d'autre n'était sur place. Je me suis acquitté de cette tâche durant trois jours et ils me surveillaient pour m'empêcher de m'échapper »[511].

247. Le témoin FE32 a précisé qu'il a fait cette déclaration sous la contrainte pour « sauver sa peau »[512].

248. Dans une déclaration aux autorités rwandaises le 19 avril 1995, le témoin FE32 a identifié « Seromba le curé de la paroisse de Nyange » comme l'un de ses collaborateurs. Il a indiqué qu'Athanase Seromba était présent lorsque Kayishema, le bourgmestre, et le juge-président du tribunal de canton l'ont ordonné d'amener le bulldozer[513]. Le témoin n'a pas contesté la validité de ce document et les informations qui y sont contenues à l'exception des mentions relatives à Seromba. Il a expliqué, en outre, avoir donné cette déclaration sous la contrainte[514].

249. Dans une déclaration aux autorités rwandaises le 22 juillet 1997, le témoin FE32 a dit ce qui suit : « Lorsque j'ai demandé à Kayishema ce qui allait se passer vu qu'on y avait tué des gens, il est allé à la cour arrière du presbytère et est revenu en compagnie d'Athanase Seromba. Celui-ci m'a dit de détruire l'église et a ajouté qu'ils allaient en construire une autre. Je lui ai demandé : « Allons-nous détruire l'église de Dieu ? » Il m'a répondu : « Détruisez-la, nous en construirons une autre »[515]. Le témoin FE32 a expliqué qu'il a fait cette déclaration « pour faire plaisir à ces gens qui voulaient que j'impute certaines allégations au prêtre Seromba »[516].

250. Dans une déclaration faite aux enquêteurs du Tribunal le 27 juillet 2000, le témoin FE32 a déclaré qu'il avait d'abord refusé de démolir l'église, que les autorités étaient alors allées au presbytère et étaient revenues accompagnées d'Athanase Seromba, qui s'est adressé directement à lui en ces termes : « il a été décidé, il faut bien la détruire, nous en construirons une autre »[517]. Le témoin FE32 commente ce passage en affirmant que les enquêteurs du Tribunal avaient leurs propres objectifs en se fiant uniquement sur les déclarations aux autorités rwandaises, lesquelles, soutient-il, ont été obtenues sous la contrainte[518]. Un autre passage de cette déclaration est lu au témoin, dans lequel le témoin affirmait qu'après avoir démoli le mur droit près du clocher, Seromba était allé vers lui et lui a dit : « détruisez tous ces murs, rien ne doit être laissé debout »[519].

changement[522]. Une confirmation de sa déclaration du 4 avril 2002 datée du 11 février 2003[523] lui a été présentée, qui indiquait que les enquêteurs lui avaient donné lecture de sa déclaration du 4 avril 2002, à laquelle il avait apporté une modification, laquelle avait été consignée dans la version finale, ce qu'il a lui-même reconnu[524]. La Chambre note que cela dément les allégations du témoin selon lesquelles les enquêteurs du Tribunal avaient refusé d'apporter des modifications aux déclarations.

252. Dans une lettre que le témoin a adressée à la Cour suprême du Rwanda le 7 novembre 2001[525], le témoin FE32 a dit ce qui suit:

> « Le fait est que j'ai reconnu devant le Tribunal et que je persiste à le reconnaître aujourd'hui que j'ai détruit l'église à l'aide d'un Caterpillar sous l'ordre des autorités communales et ecclésiastiques de l'époque »[526].
> « C'est le jour suivant, le 15/4/94, qu'ils m'ont amené en compagnie d'un camarade du nom d'Évariste Ntahonkiriye (Kibali-Byumba), puis, ils nous ont sommé de détruire l'église, ce que nous avons refusé. Ils l'ont (mon camarade) tué sur place et toute résistance m'a alors abandonné si bien que j'ai obéi à ce qu'ils m'ordonnaient ; d'ailleurs, on venait de faire venir le père Seromba qui a dit que cette décision avait été prise. »[527]
> « Le Tribunal a négligé les déclarations du témoin de l'Accusation. Celui-ci a déclaré qu'il avait vu l'IPJ au moment où Kayishema me faisait venir en me forçant de détruire l'église, chose à laquelle je me suis refusé jusqu'à ce qu'il fasse venir le père Seromba ; après cela, l'église a été détruite. »[528]

253. Le témoin a refusé de commenter cette lettre, se contentant d'indiquer que sa requête n'a pas été reçue par la Cour suprême du Rwanda[529]. Il a précisé ensuite qu'il a écrit cette lettre avec l'aide d'une autre personne mais qu'une erreur s'y était glissée[530].

254. Le témoin FE32 a été incapable de fournir des explications sur les nombreuses contradictions existant entre son témoignage devant la Chambre et les propos qu'il a tenus devant African Rights, d'une part, les autorités Rwandaises et les enquêteurs du Tribunal, d'autre part, et ce pendant sur une période de dix ans. Il n'a pas été capable non plus d'expliquer les contradictions qui subsistent dans la lettre qu'il a écrite à la Cour suprême du Rwanda.

255. Quant aux prétentions de la Défense selon lesquelles le témoin aurait agi sous la contrainte, la Chambre rappelle qu'il lui appartient de rapporter la preuve de la contrainte[531]. En l'espèce, elle estime que la Défense n'a pas produit aucune preuve de ce que les déclarations antérieures du témoin FE32 auraient été obtenues sous la contrainte. Elle note, en effet, que le témoin a constamment varié dans ses explications quand il ne refusait pas d'en donner aucune. Elle constate, en outre, que témoin n'a jamais déclaré avoir été torturé ou donné des déclarations sous la contrainte ni devant les enquêteurs du Tribunal, ni devant ceux de la Défense. Elle constate, enfin, que lors de son témoignage, en réponse à une question du Procureur sur la lettre qu'il a adressée à la Cour suprême du Rwanda, le témoin a notamment déclaré ce qui suit: « Pourquoi est-ce qu'ils continuent à se fonder sur un tel document ? À mon sens, ce document n'a pas de valeur. Vous êtes en train de me contraindre. Il s'agit d'une pression que vous me mettez dessus, tout comme on se présentait devant les juridictions rwandaises, on vous obligeait à dire un certain nombre de choses. Je crois qu'il s'agit là d'une contrainte également »[532]. Eu égard aux nombreuses contradictions décelées dans les déclarations du témoin, la Chambre est d'avis que ce passage ne suffit pas à établir qu'il aurait subi une quelconque contrainte.

256. La Chambre note également que le témoin FE32 apparaît comme un témoin cherchant à disculper Athanase Seromba. En effet, pour justifier la décision qu'il a prise de témoigner comme témoin à décharge et non plus comme témoin à charge comme précédemment envisagé, le témoin FE32 a déclaré ceci : « […] la vie sur terre est courte, et je n'ai pas voulu me mettre dans les mauvais termes avec Dieu»[533].

257. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre considère que le témoin FE32 n'est pas crédible sur les faits qui se sont produits le 16 avril 1994.

258. La Chambre considère que le témoignage de BZ1 n'est pas déterminant. Il s'est exprimé en des termes généraux et son affirmation selon laquelle il n'a pas vu Athanase Seromba les 15 et 16 avril 1994 ne suffit pas à établir que Seromba n'était pas présent sur les lieux. Il est, en effet, bien possible que le témoin n'ait pas vu Seromba dans la foule nombreuse qui se trouvait à l'église. Au demeurant, le témoin n'est arrivé à l'église qu'après le commencement la destruction de l'église. Enfin, les affirmations du témoin sur les individus qui ont amené le bulldozer relèvent du ouï-dire et comme telles ont peu de valeur probante.

259. La Chambre considère que le témoignage de BZ4 n'est pas déterminant. En effet, le témoin s'exprime en des termes généraux et son témoignage manque de précision sur le déroulement des événements. Il a été notamment il est incapable de préciser l'heure de son arrivée ainsi que l'heure de l'arrivée du bulldozer à l'église le 16 avril 1994[534]. L'affirmation selon laquelle il n'aurait pas vu Athanase Seromba pendant les 15 et 16 avril 1994 ne suffit pas à établir que Seromba n'était pas présent sur les lieux. En effet, il est bien possible que le témoin n'ait pas vu Seromba dans la foule nombreuse qui se trouvait à l'église[535]. Enfin, les affirmations du témoin sur les individus qui ont amené le bulldozer relèvent du ouï-dire et comme telles ont peu de valeur probante.

260. La Chambre considère que le témoin CF23 n'est pas crédible. En effet, elle note que quand ce témoin arrivait dans les environs de l'église, la destruction de l'église avait été déjà entamée. Elle conséquence, elle ne saurait accorder de valeur à son témoignage sur les événements qui se sont déroulés le 16 avril 1994 à l'église de Nyange.

261. La Chambre estime que le témoignage de FE35 n'est pas crédible. En effet, elle note qu'il s'exprime en des termes généraux. Elle relève également de nombreuses contradictions entre son témoignage et ses déclarations antérieures[536].

262. La Chambre considère que le témoin PA1 n'est pas crédible. En effet, elle note de nombreuses contradictions dans son témoignage et ses déclarations antérieures au sujet des événements du 16 avril 1994. Ainsi dans sa déclaration à la Défense du 27 janvier 2005[537], le témoin n'a pas fait mention du fait qu'Athanase Seromba serait sorti furieux du presbytère alors qu'il a soutenu ce fait dans son témoignage »[538]. Le Procureur a lu au témoin un passage de sa déclaration du 27 janvier 2005 dans lequel le témoin a indiqué que les prêtres n'osaient pas s'approcher des assaillants[539]. Le Procureur a relevé qu'il y a une contradiction avec le témoignage du témoin, qui a pourtant affirmé que Seromba est sorti. Pour justifier cette omission, le témoin s'est contenté de dire qu'il s'agissait simplement d'un oubli involontaire[540]. Il ajoute en outre que dans la proposition « nous n'osions pas nous approcher », on ne fait pas référence à un moment précis, mais on décrit simplement la situation qui prévalait. Le témoin fait état une nouvelle fois de l'impuissance des prêtres face à la situation. Il a précisé encore que Seromba est sorti du presbytère en exprimant sa colère et son incompréhension[541].

263. Le témoin PA1 a été également interrogé quant au contenu de sa déclaration du 8 octobre 2003. Le Procureur a lu au témoin l'extrait suivant : « Question : « Que faisaient ces assaillants ? » Réponse : « Ils rentraient dans la maison des prêtres, et ils demandaient à Seromba pourquoi ils me gardaient à ses côtés car ils me prenaient pour un Tutsi de par mon physique mais Seromba leur répondait que j'étais Hutu » »[542]. Le témoin a confirmé que cela correspondait à ce qu'il avait dit devant la Cour[543]. Le Procureur a lu un deuxième extrait au témoin : « À chaque fois les autorités sont venues au presbytère pour savoir l'attitude à adopter face à ces problèmes »[544]. Le témoin a dit que cette phrase est fausse[545]. Le Procureur a lu un troisième extrait au témoin : « Question : « Est-ce que vous êtes en mesure de confirmer que ces personnes ne sont jamais venues au presbytère, en dehors de votre connaissance personnelle ? » Réponse : « C'est possible qu'elles soient venues à mon insu car je me cachais et je n'étais pas toujours à l'extérieur de la Chambre pour voir ce qui se passait » »[546]. Le témoin a précisé qu'il s'agit d'un résumé de ce qu'il a dit, et que son intention était d'expliquer aux enquêteurs « qu'il n'était peut-être pas toujours comme lié à Seromba par une corde, qu'il était avec lui mais pas chaque minute »[547]. Le Procureur a lu un quatrième extrait au témoin : « Question : « Est-ce que le bourgmestre ou – plutôt – lors du creusement de la tranchée, le bourgmestre était-il présent sur les lieux ? » Réponse : « Je ne sais pas car je ne voyais l'engin. Pour ma part, j'étais cloîtré dans pas Chambre » »[548] Le témoin a indiqué que cette phrase était fausse[549]. La Chambre considère toutes les explications du témoin comme invraisemblables.

264. La Chambre observe, enfin, que le témoin PA1 a admis ne pas être sorti avec Athanase Seromba et ne pas avoir directement été avec lui à ce moment. Il ne pouvait donc pas savoir les propos que Seromba a tenus à l'extérieur du presbytère au moment de la destruction de l'église[550].

265. La Chambre considère que le témoin NA1 n'est pas crédible. Elle note, en effet, qu'il existe de nombreuses contradictions dans le récit qu'il donne des événements du 16 avril 1994. Ainsi, dans sa déclaration du 9 décembre 1996, le témoin a dit ceci : « c'est Seromba qui a joué un rôle dans les tueries. Toutefois, je ne l'accuse de rien de concret mais je le voyais circuler avec les autorités »[551]. Commentant cette mention de sa déclaration, le témoin NA1 s'est contenté de dire qu'on a voulu orienter ses réponses vers un but précis, d'une part, et que les autorités rwandaises écrivaient ce qu'elles voulaient, d'autre part. Il a en outre ajouté qu'en faisant cette déclaration à l'époque, il voulait sauver sa peau et qu'il ne fallait pas oublier le contexte du Rwanda en 1996[552].

266. La Chambre relève également des contradictions dans le témoignage de NA1 quant à l'ordre de faire venir le bulldozer. Devant la Chambre, le témoin a affirmé qu'Athanase Seromba n'a jamais demandé « aux gens » d'aller évacuer les cadavres. Le témoin a soutenu avoir appris que le bulldozer était là et que le bourgmestre avait dit qu'il allait envoyer un bulldozer pour évacuer les cadavres[553]. Le Procureur a interpellé le témoin par rapport à une déclaration qu'il avait faite le 9 décembre 1996 et dans laquelle il avait indiqué que le lendemain, Seromba avait demandé aux gens de dégager les corps mais qu'ils avaient refusé et que c'est à ce moment-là que le bourgmestre Ndahimana et Seromba ont fait venir une pelle mécanique pour enlever ces cadavres[554]. Le témoin a répondu que cette déclaration devait être située dans le contexte dans lequel son procès a été conduit. Il a précisé par ailleurs que dans ce document, il n'y avait pas de ponctuation et que cela montrait que celui qui l'avait interrogé avait un objectif à atteindre[555]. Le témoin a dit : « Oui, le lendemain, le père Seromba a demandé aux gens de dégager les corps mais ils ont refusé, mais le bourgmestre Grégoire a décidé de… de faire venir un bulldozer pour évacuer ces cadavres. Moi quand je parle de Grégoire, chaque fois, on ajoutait Seromba. Alors… parce qu'on voulait que j'accuse Seromba »[556]. Le témoin a précisé qu'il a bel et bien dit qu'ils ont mandaté Seromba pour aller voir le bourgmestre mais qu'il n'avait pas lui-même assisté personnellement à la prise de décision d'évacuer les cadavres[557].

268. La Chambre estime toutefois que le Procureur a établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable qu'Athanase Seromba a été informé par les autorités de leur décision de détruire l'église et qu'il a accepté cette décision.

269. La Chambre estime également que le Procureur a établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable qu'Athanase Seromba a tenu des propos au conducteur du bulldozer FE32 de manière à encourager celui-ci à détruire l'église. La Chambre conclut qu'ayant reçu l'ordre des autorités de détruire l'église, le chauffeur du bulldozer FE32 a demandé à Seromba s'il devait détruire l'église et que Seromba a répondu par l'affirmative en indiquant au témoin que les Hutus seraient en mesure de la reconstruire. Par ailleurs, la Chambre conclut que Seromba a donné des indications aux conducteurs des bulldozers sur le côté fragile de l'église.

7.5. De la destruction de l'église de Nyange à l'aide du bulldozer entraînant la mort d'au moins 1 500 personnes

7.5.1. La Preuve

270. Le témoin CBR[558] a affirmé que la destruction de l'église de Nyange a commencé vers 10 heures le matin du 16 avril 1994. Il a expliqué que les murs ont été détruits en premier, la tour ne s'étant effondrée que vers 17 heures[559].

271. Le témoin CBJ[560] a déclaré qu'il était présent dans la tour de l'église le 16 avril 1994. Le témoin a affirmé, en outre, que la démolition de l'église a commencé vers 15 heures et a duré trois heures d'horloge[561]. Il a estimé le nombre de victimes de cette destruction à plus de 1500 personnes[562].

272. Le témoin CBK[563] a affirmé qu'il était devant le secrétariat lorsque l'église a été détruite. Il a soutenu que cette destruction a débuté vers 10 heures et que la tour a été la dernière partie de l'édifice à s'effondrer[564].

273. Le témoin CDL[565] a déclaré qu'il était présent sur les lieux lors de la destruction de l'église. Il a affirmé avoir vu deux bulldozers vers 10 heures détruire l'église et la tour. Il a ajouté que le 15 avril 1994, il y avait entre 1500 et 2000 réfugiés rassemblés à la paroisse[566] et a estimé qu'environ 1500 personnes ont été tuées lors de la destruction de l'église de Nyange[567].

274. Le témoin CBI[568] a estimé le nombre de réfugiés présents lors de son arrivée à l'église à 2000. Il a ajouté que ce nombre a augmenté pour atteindre le chiffre de 5000 personnes[569].

275. Le témoin CBS[570] a déclaré qu'à son arrivée à l'église de Nyange le 12 avril 1994, il y avait approximativement 2000 personnes sur les lieux[571].

276. Le témoin CNJ[572] a estimé le nombre de personnes tuées à près de 2000[573]. Il a expliqué qu'entre le 15[574] et le 16[575] avril 1994 près de 2000 Tutsis ont été tués[576].

277. Le témoin CBN[577] a estimé le nombre de réfugiés tutsis rassemblés à l'église le 15 avril 1994 à 2000 personnes[578].

278. Le témoin FE32[579] a déclaré que la destruction de l'église a commencé vers 10h30 le 16 avril 1994 et s'est terminée vers 15 ou 16 heures[580]. Il a ajouté qu'il n'a pas eu de survivants parmi les réfugiés à la suite de la destruction de l'église[581]. Il a indiqué, en outre, qu'il y avait « moins » de 2 000 personnes à l'intérieur de l'église au moment de sa destruction[582].

279. Le témoin BZ1[583] a déclaré qu'il a vu le bulldozer démolir l'église et le clocher. Le témoin a ajouté que la destruction de l'église a duré entre trois et cinq heures et que le clocher s'est écroulé vers 15 heures[584]. Il a également affirmé qu'après la chute du clocher, il a quitté les lieux après avoir noté « l'absence de réfugiés »[585].

280. Le témoin BZ8[586] a déclaré qu'en avril 1994, il vivait dans la commune de Kivumu[587]. Le témoin a soutenu qu'il a observé à distance la destruction de l'église. Il a explique que l'engin est arrivé et a commencé à détruire les murs arrières de l'église[588]. Il a, en outre, affirmé que toute l'église ne s'est pas effondrée tout de suite et que le clocher n'a été détruit que le jour suivant[589]. Il a précisé enfin qu'il n'était pas sûr des dates[590].

281. Le témoin FE35[591] a déclaré qu'une partie du mur de l'église a d'abord détruite avant que l'autre ne suive. Il a ajoute que le clocher s'est effondré vers midi[592].

7.5.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

282. La Chambre relève que le témoin Rémy Sahiri, un enquêteur du Bureau du Procureur[593] a rédigé un rapport intitulé Rapport préliminaire d'identification des sites du génocide et des massacres d'avril-juillet 1994 au Rwanda dans lequel il a indiqué que l'église de Nyange avait été détruite[594]. Il a par ailleurs présenté à la Chambre un document photographique indiquant l'emplacement de la paroisse de Nyange et où figurent les ruines de l'ancienne église[595].

283. La Chambre note que les témoins du Procureur aussi bien que ceux de la Défense sont crédibles. En effet, leurs témoignages sont tous concordants sur le fait que l'église de Nyange a été détruite le 16 avril 1994 à l'aide d'un bulldozer

284. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre considère que le Procureur a établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable que l'église de Nyange a été détruite le 16 avril 1994 à l'aide d'un bulldozer.

285. La Chambre note, par ailleurs, que les témoignages sont concordants sur le fait que la destruction de l'église a entraîné la mort de nombreux réfugiés tutsis qui s'y étaient retranchés, certains témoins estimant le nombre de victimes à 1500 tandis que d'autres avancent le chiffre de 2000. A cet égard, la Chambre rappelle ses conclusions dans lesquelles elle a établi que l'église de Nyange avait une capacité d'accueil d'au moins 1500 personnes[596]. Elle en déduit que le 16 avril 1994, la destruction de l'église de Nyange a provoqué la mort d'au moins 1500 réfugiés qui s'y était abrités pour fuir les attaques des assaillants.

286. Le témoin FE35[597] a déclaré qu'après la démolition de l'église, Athanase Seromba n'a pas tenu de réunion à la paroisse avec les autorités communales. Il a relevé qu'après la destruction de l'église de Nyange, des camions de la compagnie ASTALDI ont enterré les corps des victimes dans une fosse commune creusée dans la bananeraie des prêtres[598]. Le témoin a affirmé que Seromba n'a pas donné l'ordre d'enterrer les corps. Il a soutenu que Kayishema accompagné de Ndahimana aurait donné un tel ordre aux Interahamwe[599].

287. Le témoin FE32[600] a déclaré qu'il a enterré les cadavres dans une fosse commune suite à la destruction de l'église[601].

289. Le témoin FE13[605] a déclaré qu'un bulldozer présent sur les lieux le 16 avril 1994 a creusé la fosse dans laquelle les corps des victimes de la destruction de l'église ont été enterrés[606].

7.6.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

290. La Chambre note que le Procureur n'a produit aucune preuve pour soutenir allégation discutée. Au surplus, elle constate qu'aucun témoin de la Défense ne soutient qu'Athanase Seromba ait donné l'ordre d'ensevelir les cadavres après la destruction de l'église[607]. En effet, ces derniers affirment que cet ordre serait plutôt venu des autorités. De ce qui précède, la Chambre considère que le Procureur n'a pas établi ce fait au-delà de tout doute raisonnable.

7.7.1. La Preuve

Le témoin du Procureur

291. Le témoin CBK[608] a déclaré qu'après les massacres du 16 avril 1994, Athanase Seromba, Fulgence Kayishema, le colonel Nzapfakumunsi, Gaspard Kanyarukiga, Grégoire Ndahimana, Anastase Rushema et Télésphore Ndungutse se sont réunis à l'étage supérieur du bâtiment du presbytère pour boire de la bière de banane et du vin[609]. Le témoin a ajouté que Seromba se tenait au « niveau supérieur » du bâtiment du presbytère et qu'il distribuait la bière aux assaillants qui se trouvaient dans la cour arrière du presbytère. Il a affirmé, en outre, qu'il y avait une ambiance de fête à cette occasion et que toutes ces personnes étaient satisfaites du massacre qui venait d'être perpétré[610].

Cependant, au cours du contre-interrogatoire, il a précisé que cette réunion s'est tenue à la paroisse le 15 avril et non le 16 avril 1994 (Transcriptions du 20 janvier 2005, pp. 62 et 63 (audience publique)).

292. Le témoin FE32[611] a déclaré ne pas avoir vu Athanase Seromba ni boire ni se réjouir de la destruction de l'église. Il a ajouté qu'il n'a pas reçu de la bière de la part de Seromba[612].

293. Le témoin PA1[613] a déclaré qu'il est impossible qu'Athanase Seromba ait récompensé les destructeurs de l'église en leur distribuant de la bière[614]. Le témoin a ajouté qu'il n'a vu personne remercier Seromba pour la destruction de l'église et a considéré cela comme impensable : « Déjà, l'état dans lequel il était, je ne sais pas s'il y avait personne qui osait l'approcher parce que, pour voir cette église qui était détruite […] »[615]. Il a indiqué enfin que les destructeurs de l'église n'ont reçu aucune rémunération[616].

7.7.2. Conclusions de la Chambre

294. La Chambre estime que le témoignage de CBK n'est pas fiable sur ce point. En effet, il est le seul témoin à affirmer qu'Athanase Seromba ait adopté se serait réjoui de la destruction de l'église. La Chambre considère qu'un doute raisonnable subsiste quant à la véracité du récit livré par le témoin CBK.

295. S'agissant des témoins FE32 et PA1, la Chambre considère qu'ils ne sont pas crédibles. En effet, leurs témoignages ne sont que le reflet de leurs opinions personnelles.

296. Au regard de ce qui précède, la Chambre conclut que le Procureur n'a pas établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable le fait qu'Athanase Seromba aurait célébré la destruction de l'église en compagnie d'autres personnes.

Chapitre III : Conclusions juridiques de la Chambre

297. La Chambre dégagera ses conclusions juridiques en se fondant sur les conclusions factuelles qu'elle a tirées au chapitre II ci-dessus.

298. L'Acte d'accusation comporte quatre chefs d'accusation : génocide, complicité dans le génocide, entente en vue de commettre le génocide et crimes contre l'humanité (extermination).

299. Les deux premiers chefs d'accusation mis à la charge de l'accusé, génocide et complicité dans le génocide, sont alternatifs alors que les chefs d'accusation 1, 3 et 4 sont cumulatifs. En conséquence, la Chambre examinera si le Procureur a rapporté la preuve de la responsabilité de l'accusé au regard de chacun de ces chefs d'accusation.

1. Mode de participation aux crimes

1.1. L'Acte d'accusation

300. Dans l'Acte d'accusation, la responsabilité pénale de l'accusé est engagée sur la base de l'article 6 (1) du Statut qui dispose comme suit : « Quiconque a planifié, incité à commettre, ordonné, commis ou de toute autre manière aidé et encouragé à planifier, préparer ou exécuter un crime visé aux Articles 2 à 4 du présent Statut est individuellement responsable dudit crime ».

1.2. Droit applicable

301. Les différents modes de participation qui sont énoncés à l'article 6 (1) recouvrent un certain nombre d'actes propres à engager la responsabilité de l'accusé au titre des chefs d'accusation retenus contre lui. Les différents modes de participation à une infraction envisagés à l'article 6 (1) du Statut sont présentés de façon succincte ci-dessous :

302. La participation par « commission » s'entend de la participation directe physique ou personnelle de l'accusé à la perpétration d'un crime ou d'une omission coupable d'un acte requis en vertu d'une règle de droit pénal[617].

303. La participation par « planification » suppose qu'une ou plusieurs personnes envisagent de programmer la commission d'un crime, aussi bien dans ses phases de préparation que d'exécution[618]. En ce qui concerne ce mode de participation, le Procureur doit démontrer que le degré de participation de l'accusé a été substantiel[619] et que la planification a été un élément déterminant dans la commission du crime[620].

304. La participation par « incitation » implique d'inciter ou d'encourager autrui à commettre un crime[621]. Pour que ce mode de participation soit retenu, le Procureur doit établir que l'incitation a été un élément déterminant du comportement d'une autre personne qui a commis le crime. Il n'est toutefois n'est pas obligé de prouver que le crime n'aurait pas été commis sans l'intervention de l'accusé[622].

305. La participation par le fait d'« ordonner » suppose qu'une personne en position d'autorité donne à une autre l'ordre de commettre une infraction. Ce mode de participation implique l'existence d'une relation de subordination entre celui qui donne l'ordre et celui qui l'exécute[623]. Il n'est toutefois pas nécessaire que cette relation revête un caractère officiel[624]. Un tel lien de subordination s'établit en démontrant l'existence d'un rapport hiérarchique officiel ou non dans le cadre duquel l'accusé exerçait un contrôle effectif sur les auteurs principaux de l'infraction[625].

306. L'élément moral requis pour établir les quatre modes de participation énoncés ci-dessus est l'intention directe de celui qui a commis, planifié, incité à commettre ou ordonné le crime[626].

307. La participation par « aide et encouragement » renvoie à tout acte d'assistance et de soutien à la commission du crime[627]. Ce mode de participation peut prendre la forme d'une aide matérielle, de déclarations verbales. Il peut aussi consister dans la simple présence de l'accusé sur le lieu de commission du crime conceptualisée par la théorie du « spectateur approbateur »[628]. L'aide ou l'encouragement doit avoir un effet important sur la commission du crime, mais ne doit pas nécessairement constituer un élément indispensable, une condition sine qua non de ce crime[629]. Sauf dans le cas du « spectateur approbateur », l'assistance peut être fournie avant ou pendant la commission du crime et il n'est pas nécessaire que l'accusé soit présent au moment des faits incriminés[630].

308. Dans le cas du « spectateur approbateur », la seule présence de l'accusé sur les lieux ne suffit pas par elle-même à établir que ce dernier a aidé et encouragé à commettre le crime, à moins qu'il ne soit démontré qu'elle a eu pour effet de légitimer ou d'encourager sensiblement les agissements de l'auteur principal[631]. La responsabilité pénale du « spectateur approbateur » n'est engagée que s'il est effectivement présent sur le lieu du crime ou, tout au moins, à proximité de celui-ci, et que sa présence est interprétée par l'auteur principal du crime comme une approbation de sa conduite[632]. L'autorité de l'accusé constitue un facteur important dans l'évaluation de l'effet de la présence de l'accusé[633].

309. L'élément moral dans l'hypothèse de la participation par aide et encouragement exige que l'accusé ait conscience que son comportement contribuerait de façon substantielle à la réalisation de l'élément matériel de cette infraction ou qu'il ait conscience que la perpétration du crime résulterait vraisemblablement de sa conduite[634]. L'accusé doit avoir connaissance des éléments essentiels du crime, y compris de l'intention de l'auteur principal. Il n'est toutefois pas nécessaire que l'accusé partage cette intention[635].

310. Pour ce qui est de l'élément moral requis dans le cas plus spécifique du « spectateur approbateur », l'accusé doit savoir que sa présence sera interprétée par l'auteur principal de l'infraction comme un encouragement ou un appui[636]. La mens rea du spectateur-approbateur peut se déduire des circonstances et même s'étendre à sa conduite antérieure : s'il a, par exemple, permis que des crimes soient commis en toute impunité ou s'il en a verbalement encouragé la commission[637].

1.3. Conclusions de la Chambre sur la forme de participation de l'accusé aux infractions retenues contre lui

Le mode participation de l'accusé aux infractions qui lui sont reprochées

311. Sur la base de ses conclusions factuelles, la Chambre considère que la responsabilité pénale de l'accusé Athanase Seromba ne peut être envisagée que pour sa participation par aide et encouragement pour les infractions dont il sera éventuellement déclaré coupable.

312. La Chambre est d'avis que le Procureur n'a pas établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable que Seromba a planifié ou commis les massacres des réfugiés tutsis[638]. S'agissant de la participation par incitation ou par le fait d'ordonner, le Procureur n'a pas établi qu'Athanase Seromba avait l'intention génocidaire, c'est-à-dire le dolus specialisis, requise pour engager ces deux modes de participation à son encontre. Plus spécifiquement par rapport au fait d'ordonner, la Chambre estime que le Procureur n'a pas établi que l'accusé Athanase Seromba exerçait un contrôle effectif sur les auteurs principaux des crimes.

L'exclusion de la théorie du spectateur-approbateur dans le cas d'espèce

313. La Chambre note en l'espèce que dans ses conclusions finales, la Défense a présenté des arguments sur l'hypothèse du spectateur-approbateur[639]. Elle constate toutefois que ni l'Acte d'accusation ni le mémoire préalable du Procureur ne font allusion à la théorie du spectateur-approbateur. Elle en déduit que le Procureur n'a pas entendu plaider cette forme de participation par rapport aux charges retenues contre l'accusé Athanase Seromba. En conséquence, la Chambre n'examinera pas l'hypothèse du spectateur-approbateur dans ses conclusions.

2. Chef d'accusation 1 – Génocide

2.1. L'Acte d'accusation

314. Dans l'Acte d'accusation sous considération, le Procureur du Tribunal pénal international pour le Rwanda accuse Athanase Seromba de génocide, sous l'empire de l'article 2 (3) (a) du Statut, en ce que, entre le 6 avril 1994 et le 20 avril 1994 ou à ces dates, dans la commune de Kivumu, préfecture de Kibuye au Rwanda, Athanase Seromba a été responsable de meurtre ou d'atteintes graves à l'intégrité physique ou mentale de membres de la population tutsie, commis dans l'intention de détruire, en tout ou en partie, un groupe racial ou ethnique.

2.2. Droit applicable

315. L'article 2 (2) du Statut[640] dispose que :

> Le génocide s'entend de l'un quelconque des actes ci-après, commis dans l'intention de détruire, en tout ou en partie, un groupe national, ethnique, racial ou religieux, comme tel:
> (a) meurtre de membres du groupe;
> (b) atteinte grave à l'intégrité physique ou mentale de membres du groupe;
> (c) soumission intentionnelle du groupe à des conditions d'existence devant entraîner sa destruction physique totale ou partielle;
> (d) mesures visant à entraver les naissances au sein du groupe;
> (e) transfert forcé d'enfants du groupe à un autre groupe.

316. Les éléments constitutifs du crime de génocide sont : premièrement, la perpétration d'un des actes énumérés à l'article 2 (2) du Statut; deuxièmement, la commission de cet acte à l'encontre d'un groupe national, ethnique, racial ou religieux, spécifiquement ciblé en tant que tel; et troisièmement, la commission de cet acte dans l'intention de détruire, en tout ou en partie, le groupe ciblé.

317. Dans l'Acte d'accusation, le Procureur met notamment à la charge de l'accusé les actes de meurtre et d'atteintes graves à l'intégrité physique ou mentale de membres du groupe. Dans son approche par rapport à chacun de ces actes, la Chambre s'appuiera sur la définition qu'en donne jurisprudence. Ainsi, dans l'affaire Musema, la Chambre de première instance a défini le meurtre comme un « homicide commis avec l'intention de donner la mort »[641]. S'agissant de l'atteinte grave à l'intégrité physique ou mentale, la même Chambre, dans l'affaire Kayishema, a considéré que cette notion vise tout « acte qui porte gravement atteinte à la santé de la victime ou qui a pour effet de la défigurer ou de provoquer des altérations graves de ses organes externes, internes ou sensoriels »[642]. La notion d'atteinte grave à l'intégrité mentale vise des actes aux conséquences plus graves qu'une simple atteinte mineure ou temporaire aux facultés mentales de la victime[643] et au nombre desquels figurent de manière non exhaustive, les actes de torture physique ou de torture mentale, les traitements inhumains ou dégradants, le viol, les violences sexuelles et la persécution[644]. Il n'est toutefois pas nécessaire que les effets d'une atteinte grave soient permanents ou irrémédiables[645].

[639] Conclusions finales de la Défense, pp. 25-28.
[640] La définition du génocide donnée à l'article 2 du Statut du Tribunal est une reprise des articles 2 et 3 de la Convention pour la prévention et la répression du crime de génocide. Le Rwanda a adhéré à cette convention mais a déclaré ne pas être lié par l'article 9 de ladite convention (Sur ce point, voir le Décret-loi du 12 février 1975, Journal Officiel de la République Rwandaise, 1975, page 230).

318. Quant à la notion de « membres du groupe » qui symbolise l'appartenance à un groupe, la jurisprudence la considère de façon subjective en exigeant que la victime soit perçue par l'auteur du crime comme appartenant au groupe dont la destruction est visée[646] et que la détermination du groupe visé devrait être faite au cas par cas[647].

319. Le génocide se distingue d'autres crimes en ce qu'il comporte un dol spécial : un accusé ne peut être reconnu coupable du crime de génocide que s'il est établi qu'il a commis l'un des actes énumérés à l'article 2 (2) du Statut dans l'intention spécifique d'obtenir comme résultat la destruction totale ou partielle d'un groupe protégé. La notion de destruction du groupe s'entend de « la destruction matérielle d'un groupe déterminé par des moyens soit physiques, soit biologiques, et non pas [de] la destruction de l'identité nationale, linguistique, religieuse, culturelle ou autre de ce groupe »[648]. Aucun nombre minimal de victimes n'est requis pour établir le génocide[649]. Pour prouver l'élément intentionnel du génocide, il n'est pas nécessaire d'établir que l'auteur entendait procéder à l'anéantissement complet d'un groupe dans le monde entier[650], mais seulement qu'il avait l'intention d'en détruire une partie substantielle[651].

320. Au regard de la jurisprudence du Tribunal de céans, l'élément intentionnel du génocide peut se déduire de certains faits ou indices, notamment (a) du contexte général de perpétration d'autres actes répréhensibles systématiquement dirigés contre le même groupe, que ces autres actes aient été commis par l'accusé ou par d'autres, (b) de l'échelle des atrocités commises, (c) de leur caractère général, (d) de leur exécution dans une région ou un pays, (e) du fait que les victimes ont été délibérément et systématiquement choisies en raison de leur appartenance à un groupe particulier, (f) de l'exclusion, à cet égard, des membres d'autres groupes, (g) de la doctrine politique qui a inspiré les actes visés, (h) de la répétition d'actes de destruction discriminatoires et (i) de la perpétration d'actes portant atteinte au fondement du groupe ou considérés comme tels par leurs auteurs[652].

322. Au regard de ses conclusions factuelles, la Chambre considère que le Procureur n'a pas établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable qu'Athanase Seromba a planifié, incité à commettre, ordonné ou commis les massacres contre les réfugiés tutsis de Nyange[653]. La Chambre conclut cependant que ce dernier a par ses faits et gestes les 12, 14, 15 et 16 avril 1994 aidé et encouragé la commission de meurtres et d'atteintes graves à l'intégrité physique et mentale des Tutsis qui s'étaient réfugiés à l'église de Nyange lors des événements visés dans l'Acte d'accusation.

2.3.1. Des atteintes graves à l'intégrité physique ou mentale de membres du groupe ethnique tutsi

L'actus reus par rapport aux faits d'atteintes graves à l'intégrité physique et mentale des réfugiés de l'église de Nyange

323. Au regard du paragraphe 12 de l'Acte d'accusation, la Chambre a conclu qu'Athanase Seromba a interdit aux réfugiés de s'alimenter dans la bananeraie de la paroisse et qu'il a ordonné aux gendarmes de tirer sur les réfugiés qui s'y rendraient[654]. La Chambre a en outre conclu que Seromba a refusé de célébrer la messe pour les Tutsis dans l'église de Nyange[655].

324. Au regard des paragraphes 13 et 14 de l'Acte d'accusation, la Chambre a conclu que le 13 avril 1994, au moment où la situation sécuritaire dans la commune de Kivumu était devenue précaire, Athanase Seromba a refoulé quatre employés tutsis de la paroisse dont l'un d'eux Patrice, revenu le lendemain, a été tué par les assaillants après avoir été de nouveau refoulé du presbytère[656].

325. Au regard du paragraphe 22 de l'Acte d'accusation, la Chambre a conclu que Seromba a refoulé plusieurs réfugiés du presbytère dont Meriam qui a par la suite été tuée par les assaillants[657].

326. La Chambre est d'avis que l'interdiction faite par Seromba aux réfugiés de s'alimenter dans la bananeraie, son refus de célébrer la messe dans l'église de Nyange, sa décision de refouler les employés et les réfugiés tutsis de la paroisse et du presbytère ont aidé à la perpétration d'actes portant gravement atteinte à l'intégrité mentale des réfugiés tutsis de l'église de Nyange. Elle estime, en effet, que lorsqu'ils se sont réfugiés dans l'église de Nyange, les Tutsis étaient dans une position très vulnérable pour avoir été auparavant la cible de nombreuses attaques[658]. À cela s'ajoute le fait que le lieu de refuge que constituait l'église de Nyange et où ils pensaient pouvoir se protéger de ces attaques était encerclé par des miliciens et Interahamwe à partir 12 avril 1994[659]. Il apparaît ainsi que ces réfugiés de l'église de Nyange ont vécu dans une angoisse constante dans la mesure où ils savaient que leur vie ainsi que celle de leurs proches étaient en danger à tout moment. La Chambre est convaincue qu'en adoptant un tel comportement, Seromba a contribué de manière substantielle à la commission d'actes portant gravement atteinte à l'intégrité mentale des réfugiés tutsis de l'église de Nyange.

327. La Chambre conclut également que l'interdiction faite par Athanase Seromba aux réfugiés de s'alimenter dans la bananeraie a aidé à la perpétration d'actes portant gravement atteinte à l'intégrité physique des réfugiés. En effet, en date du 14 avril 1994, les réfugiés étaient en manque de nourriture et avaient un accès très limité à des vivres de l'extérieur en raison de l'encerclement de l'église. Dans de telles circonstances, le refus de Seromba de laisser les réfugiés s'alimenter dans la bananeraie a contribué de manière substantielle à physiquement affaiblir les réfugiés qui étaient privés de nourriture. La Chambre est convaincue qu'en adoptant un tel comportement, Seromba a contribué de manière substantielle à la commission d'actes portant gravement atteinte à l'intégrité physique des réfugiés tutsis de l'église de Nyange.

La mens rea de l'accusé Athanase Seromba par rapport aux faits d'atteintes graves à l'intégrité physique et mentale des réfugiés de l'église de Nyange

329. La Chambre est convaincue qu'Athanase Seromba ne pouvait ignorer que l'interdiction qu'il a faite aux réfugiés de s'alimenter dans la bananeraie, son refus de célébrer une messe en leur faveur et le refoulement d'employés et de réfugiés tutsis auraient un impact négatif certain sur le moral des réfugiés qui faisaient face à une situation très difficile, liée aux persécutions dont ils étaient l'objet pendant les événements d'avril 1994.

330. La Chambre est également convaincue qu'Athanase Seromba savait que les réfugiés étaient en manque de nourriture[660]. Elle considère donc qu'il avait la pleine connaissance que son refus de laisser les réfugiés s'alimenter dans la bananeraie contribuerait de manière substantielle à les affaiblir physiquement.

2.3.2. Des meurtres de membres du groupe tutsi

L'actus reus par rapport aux faits de meurtres des réfugiés tutsis de l'église de Nyange

332. Au regard des paragraphes 13, 14 et 22 de l'Acte d'accusation, discutés plus haut, la Chambre a conclu qu'Athanase Seromba a refoulé des employés et réfugiés tutsis de la paroisse de Nyange[661]. De l'avis de la Chambre, en agissant ainsi, Seromba a aidé à la commission des meurtres de plusieurs réfugiés tutsis, dont notamment Patrice et Meriam.

333. Au regard des paragraphes 24 et 25 de l'Acte d'accusation, la Chambre a conclu que le 15 avril 1994, Athanase Seromba a demandé aux assaillants, qui s'apprêtaient à attaquer les Tutsis qui s'étaient réfugiés dans la cour du presbytère, d'arrêter les tueries et de ramasser les cadavres qui jonchaient la cour de l'église. La Chambre a également conclu que les attaques contre les réfugiés tutsis ont repris après le dégagement des corps[662]. La Chambre conclut cependant qu'il n'est pas établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable que cette demande ait constitué une aide ou un encouragement à la commission de meurtres des réfugiés tutsis.

334. Au regard des paragraphes 26 et 27 de l'Acte d'accusation, la Chambre a conclu qu'Athanase Seromba s'est entretenu avec les autorités et a accepté la décision prise par celles-ci de détruire l'église. Elle a en outre conclu que Seromba s'est également adressé au conducteur du bulldozer en lui tenant notamment des propos qui l'ont encouragé à détruire l'église. La Chambre a enfin conclu que Seromba a même donné des indications au conducteur du bulldozer sur le côté fragile de l'église[663]. La Chambre est convaincue qu'en adoptant un tel comportement, Seromba a contribué de manière substantielle à la destruction de l'église de Nyange, laquelle destruction a entraîné la mort de plus de 1500 réfugiés tutsis.

La mens rea de l'accusé Athanase Seromba par rapport aux faits de meurtres des réfugiés tutsis de l'église de Nyange

336. La Chambre est convaincue qu'en raison de la situation sécuritaire qui prévalait dans la paroisse de Nyange, Athanase Seromba ne pouvait ignorer qu'en refoulant des réfugiés du presbytère, il contribuerait de manière substantielle à leurs meurtres par les assaillants.

337. La Chambre est par ailleurs d'avis qu'Athanase Seromba ne pouvait ignorer l'effet légitimateur que ses propos auraient sur les actions des autorités de la commune et le conducteur du bulldozer. La Chambre estime, en outre, que Seromba avait une parfaite connaissance du fait que son approbation de la décision de détruire l'église de Nyange prise par les autorités ainsi que les paroles d'encouragement qu'il a eues pour le conducteur du bulldozer auraient pour effet de contribuer de manière substantielle à la destruction de l'église et à la mort de nombreux réfugiés qui s'y étaient retranchés.

2.3.3. Les éléments constitutifs du génocide

339. La Chambre considère qu'il est établi que les Tutsis constituaient un groupe ethnique dans la commune de Kivumu au moment des faits visés dans l'Acte d'accusation[664] et qu'ils constituaient donc un groupe protégé au sens de l'article 2 (2).

340. La Chambre considère également qu'il ne peut être contesté que pendant les événements d'avril 1994 à l'église de Nyange, des assaillants et autres miliciens interahamwe ont commis des meurtres contre les réfugiés tutsis de l'église de Nyange et ont gravement porté atteinte à leur intégrité physique et mentale en raison de leur appartenance ethnique, et ce dans l'intention de les détruire, en tout ou en partie, en tant que groupe ethnique.

342. En conséquence, la Chambre considère comme établi à l'encontre de l'accusé Athanase Seromba le crime de génocide par aide et encouragement visé au chef d'accusation 1.

3. Chef d'accusation 2 – Complicité dans le génocide

343. Le chef d'accusation 2 est alternatif au chef d'accusation 1[667]. Aussi, ayant déjà déclaré l'accusé coupable de génocide au premier chef d'accusation, la Chambre ne retiendra pas le chef de complicité dans le génocide et le rejette en conséquence.

4. Chef d'accusation 3 – Entente en vue de commettre le génocide

4.1. L'Acte d'accusation

344. Le Procureur du Tribunal pénal international pour le Rwanda accuse Athanase Seromba d'entente en vue de commettre le génocide, sous l'empire de l'article 2 (3) (b) du Statut, en ce que, entre les 6 et 20 avril 1994 ou à ces dates, dans la préfecture de Kivumu au Rwanda, Seromba s'est effectivement entendu avec Grégoire Ndahimana, bourgmestre de la commune de Kivumu, Fulgence Kayishema, inspecteur de police de la commune de Kivumu, Télesphore Ndungutse, Gaspard Kanyarukiga et d'autres personnes inconnues du Procureur, pour tuer des membres de la population tutsie ou porter des atteintes graves à leur intégrité physique ou mentale, dans l'intention de détruire, en tout ou en partie, un groupe racial ou ethnique.

4.2. Droit applicable

345. La Chambre s'appuie sur la jurisprudence du Tribunal qui définit l'entente en vue de commettre le génocide comme « une résolution d'agir sur laquelle au moins deux personnes se sont accordées, en vue de commettre le génocide »[668]. Ainsi, l'élément essentiel de l'infraction d'entente en vue de commettre le génocide est constitué par « l'acte d'entente per se, autrement dit le 'procédé' de l'entente' […] et non pas son résultat »[669].

346. La Chambre prend également acte du fait que dans l'affaire Nahimana, la Chambre d'appel a conclu que l'entente en vue de commettre le génocide pouvait être déduite des actions coordonnées d'individus ayant un objectif commun et agissant dans un cadre uni[670]. Pour sa part, la Chambre de première instance, dans l'affaire Niyitegeka, a déduit l'existence d'une entente en vue de commettre le génocide de par la participation de l'accusé à des rencontres dont l'objet était le massacre de Tutsis, ses paroles et le leadership qu'il a exercé lors de ces rencontres, son implication dans la planification d'attaques contre des Tutsis et son rôle dans la distribution d'armes aux assaillants[671].

347. L'élément moral de l'infraction d'entente en vue de commettre le génocide est identique à celui qui est requis pour l'infraction de génocide et réside dans l'intention spécifique de commettre le génocide[672].

4.3. Conclusions de la Chambre

348. Les paragraphes 33 à 47 de l'Acte d'accusation étayent de manière détaillée les allégations ayant trait au chef d'accusation de l'entente en vue de commettre le génocide. La Chambre a principalement discuté de ces allégations dans les sections 3, 4, 5, 6 et 7 du chapitre II portant sur les conclusions factuelles. Cette partie de l'Acte d'accusation fait état de l'élaboration d'un plan, en trois phases, visant l'extermination des Tutsis dans la commune de Kivumu. Cette partie met également à la charge d'Athanase Seromba l'élaboration d'une liste de Tutsis à rechercher, l'interdiction faite aux réfugiés de s'alimenter dans le presbytère ou la bananeraie, le refus de célébrer la messe et la supervision de massacres de réfugiés.

349. Dans ses conclusions factuelles, la Chambre a conclu que le Procureur n'a pas établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable qu'Athanase Seromba a participé à des réunions avec les autorités communales les 11[673] et 12 avril 1994[674]. La Chambre a également conclu qu'il n'est pas établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable que l'accusé Seromba a tenu des réunions avec les autorités communales les 10[675], 15[676] et 16[677] avril 1994 et dont l'objet aurait été de planifier l'extermination des réfugiés tutsis de la paroisse de Nyange.

350. Par ailleurs, la Chambre estime que le Procureur n'a pas établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable qu'Athanase Seromba a élaboré une liste de Tutsis devant être recherchés[678], qu'il aurait ordonné ou supervisé l'attaque contre les réfugiés le 15 avril 1994[679] et qu'il aurait ordonné la destruction de l'église de Nyange le 16 avril 1994[680]. En ce qui concerne des faits établis contre Seromba comme l'interdiction faite aux réfugiés de s'alimenter dans la bananeraie ou encore son refus de célébrer la messe, la Chambre considère qu'ils ne suffisent pas, à eux seuls, à établir l'existence d'une entente en vue de commettre le génocide.

351. La Chambre conclut que le Procureur n'a donc pas prouvé au-delà de tout doute raisonnable qu'Athanase Seromba s'est entendu avec d'autres personnes pour commettre le génocide tel que visé au chef d'accusation 3 de l'Acte d'accusation.

5. Chef d'accusation 4 – Crime contre l'humanité (extermination)

5.1. L'Acte d'accusation

352. Le Procureur du Tribunal pénal international pour le Rwanda accuse Athanase Seromba de crime contre l'humanité (extermination) sous l'empire de l'Article (3) (b) du Statut, en ce que, entre les 7 et 20 avril 1994 ou à ces dates, dans la préfecture de Kibuye (Rwanda), Seromba a tué ou fait tuer des personnes lors de massacres perpétrés dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée ou systématique ou dirigée contre une population civile en raison de son appartenance politique, ethnique ou raciale.

5.2. Droit applicable

353. L'article 3 du Statut dispose que :

> Le tribunal international pour le Rwanda est habilité à juger les personnes responsables des crimes suivants lorsqu'ils ont été commis dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée et systématique dirigée contre une population civile quelle qu'elle soit, en raison de son appartenance nationale, politique, ethnique, raciale ou religieuse :
> (a) Assassinat ;
> (b) Extermination ;

(c) Réduction en esclavage ;

(d) Expulsion ;

(e) Emprisonnement ;

(f) Torture ;

(g) Viol ;

(h) Persécutions pour des raisons politiques, raciales et religieuses ;

(i) Autres actes inhumains.

354. L'article 3 du Statut relatif aux crimes contre l'humanité comporte un élément général applicable à tous les actes qui y sont énumérés : la perpétration de l'un quelconque de ces actes par un accusé ne sera constitutif d'un crime contre l'humanité que s'il a été commis dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée ou systématique dirigée contre une population civile en raison de son appartenance nationale, politique, ethnique, raciale ou religieuse.

355. La notion d'attaque, au sens de l'article 3, s'entend de tout acte ou fait ou toute série de faits contraires à la loi, du type de ceux énumérés à l'article 3 du Statut[681].

356. Cette attaque doit être généralisée ou systématique[682]. Dans la pratique, ces deux critères tendent à se chevaucher[683]. Le caractère « généralisé » suppose une attaque massive, fréquente, à grande échelle ou menée collectivement, revêtant une gravité considérable et dirigée contre une multitude de victimes[684]. Le caractère « systématique » suppose que l'attaque a été soigneusement organisée selon un modèle régulier en exécution d'une politique concertée mettant en œuvre des moyens publics ou privés considérables[685]. L'existence d'une politique ou d'un plan peut être pertinente quant à la preuve, en ce qu'elle peut servir à établir que l'attaque en cause était généralisée ou systématique, mais elle ne saurait être considérée en soi comme un élément constitutif distinct du crime[686].

357. Il n'est nullement exigé que l'acte criminel soit en lui-même généralisé ou systématique, un seul meurtre pouvant constituer un crime contre l'humanité s'il s'inscrit dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée ou systématique[687].

358. L'attaque doit être dirigée contre une population civile c'est-à-dire « des personnes qui ne participent pas directement aux hostilités, y compris les membres des forces armées qui ont déposé les armes et les personnes qui ont été mises hors de combat par maladie, blessure, ou pour toute autre cause »[688]. La présence de certaines personnes qui ne sont pas des civils ne prive pas cette population de sa qualification en tant que population civile[689].

359. L'attaque contre une population civile doit avoir été inspirée par des motifs discriminatoires c'est-à-dire qu'elle doit avoir été commise contre une population en raison de « son appartenance nationale, politique, ethnique, raciale ou religieuse ». Ce qualificatif caractérise uniquement la nature de l'attaque en générale et non la volonté criminelle de l'accusé[690].

360. Il doit y avoir un lien entre l'acte criminel et l'attaque[691]. L'accusé doit avoir la connaissance objective ou raisonnée du contexte général dans lequel s'inscrit l'attaque et savoir que ses actes font partie intégrante d'une attaque généralisée ou systématique dirigée contre une population civile[692].

361. Dans l'Acte d'accusation, le Procureur met à la charge de l'accusé un acte énuméré à l'article 3 : l'« extermination ». La qualification d'extermination exige la preuve que l'accusé a pris part à un grand massacre généralisé ou systématique, ou qu'il a contribué à l'imposition à un grand nombre de personnes, c'est-à-dire de façon généralisée, ou à un certain nombre de personnes, mais de façon systématique, de conditions de vie devant inévitablement entraîner la mort[693]. L'extermination se distingue de l'assassinat ou du meurtre en ce qu'elle vise précisément la mort d'un nombre important de personnes[694], sans que ce nombre doive pour autant atteindre un minimum donné[695]. L'élément moral de l'extermination réside quant à lui dans l'intention de commettre un massacre ou d'y participer[696].

5.3. Conclusions de la Chambre

362. Les paragraphes 48 à 50 de l'Acte d'accusation étayent de manière détaillée les allégations ayant trait au chef d'accusation du crime contre l'humanité. La Chambre a déjà discuté de ces allégations dans les sections 5, 6 et 7 du Chapitre II portant sur les conclusions factuelles.

363. Au regard du paragraphe 48 de l'Acte d'accusation, la Chambre a conclu que le Procureur n'a pas établi qu'Athanase Seromba aurait ordonné la fermeture des portes de l'église aux fins de causer la mort des réfugiés tutsis à l'église de Nyange[697]. Ainsi, la Chambre ne retient aucune responsabilité individuelle de Seromba sur ce fait.

364. Au regard du paragraphe 49 de l'Acte d'accusation, la Chambre a conclu qu'Athanase Seromba s'est entretenu avec les autorités et a accepté la décision prise par celles-ci de détruire l'église. Elle a en outre conclu que Seromba s'est également adressé au conducteur du bulldozer en lui tenant notamment des propos qui l'ont encouragé à détruire l'église. La Chambre a enfin conclu que Seromba a même donné des indications au conducteur du bulldozer sur le côté fragile de l'église[698]. La Chambre est convaincue qu'en adoptant un tel comportement, Seromba a contribué de manière substantielle à la destruction de l'église de Nyange.

365. La Chambre est d'avis que la destruction de l'église, ayant entraîné la mort de 1500 réfugiés tutsis[699], a constitué l'infraction de l'extermination dans le sens de l'article 3 du Statut.

La mens rea d'Athanase Seromba par rapport à la destruction de l'église de Nyange

367. La Chambre est par ailleurs d'avis qu'Athanase Seromba ne pouvait ignorer l'effet légitimateur que ses propos auraient sur les actions des autorités de la commune et le conducteur du bulldozer. La Chambre estime, en outre, que Seromba avait une parfaite connaissance du fait que son approbation de la décision de détruire l'église de Nyange prise par les autorités ainsi que les paroles d'encouragement qu'il a eues pour le conducteur du bulldozer auraient pour effet de contribuer de manière substantielle à la destruction de l'église et à la mort de nombreux réfugiés qui s'y étaient retranchés.

368. De ce qui précède, la Chambre considère comme établie au-delà de tout doute raisonnable à l'égard de l'accusé la mens rea de l'aide et l'encouragement à la commission du crime d'extermination des réfugiés tutsis de l'église de Nyange.

Les éléments constitutifs du crime contre l'humanité

369. La Chambre considère que les conditions requises pour la commission du crime contre l'humanité sont réunies en l'espèce. La Chambre a en effet conclu qu'il est établi qu'en avril 1994, dans la commune de Kivumu, des attaques avaient été dirigées contre les Tutsis[700]. L'attaque qui s'est terminée par la destruction de l'église de Nyange, le 16 avril 1994, était « généralisée » en ce sens qu'elle était massive, menée collectivement et dirigée contre une multitude de victimes. Cette attaque avait également un caractère « systématique » dans la mesure où les conclusions factuelles tendent à montrer qu'elle a été soigneusement organisée selon un modèle régulier, allant de l'encerclement de l'église le 12 avril 1994 à sa destruction le 16 avril 1994, en passant par l'intensification des attaques contre les réfugiés les 14 et 15 avril 1994. Enfin, la Chambre est d'avis que cette attaque était dirigée contre la population civile tutsie réfugiée à l'église de Nyange pour des motifs discriminatoires.

370. Par ailleurs, la Chambre estime que l'accusé Athanase Seromba avait connaissance du caractère généralisé et systématique de cette attaque ainsi que des motifs discriminatoires qui la sous-tendaient. Elle est en outre convaincue qu'il savait également que le crime d'extermination commis à l'encontre des réfugiés tutsis s'inscrivait dans le contexte de cette attaque.

371. En conséquence, la Chambre considère comme établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable à l'encontre de l'accusé Athanase Seromba le crime d'extermination constitutif de crime contre l'humanité visé au chef d'accusation 4.

Chapitre IV : Verdict

372. Par ces motifs, la Chambre statue à l'unanimité comme suit :

Chef d'accusation 1 : Génocide	COUPABLE
Chef d'accusation 2 : Complicité dans le génocide	CHEF REJETÉ
Chef d'accusation 3 : Entente en vue de commettre le génocide	NON COUPABLE
Chef d'accusation 4 : Crimes contre l'humanité (extermination)	COUPABLE

Chapitre V : Détermination de la peine

[700] Voir Chapitre II, section 3.2.

1. Introduction

373. Ayant jugé l'accusé Athanase Seromba coupable de génocide et de crime contre l'humanité (extermination) par aide et encouragement, la Chambre en vient maintenant à la question de la détermination de la peine à lui imposer.

374. Dans ses conclusions finales, le Procureur a prié la Chambre de condamner Athanase Seromba à des peines concurrentes d'emprisonnement à vie pour chacun des chefs d'accusation dont la Chambre l'a déclaré coupable[701]. Il a notamment mis l'accent sur la gravité des crimes et les circonstances aggravantes que la Chambre devrait prendre en compte pour déterminer la peine.

375. Dans ses conclusions finales, la Défense n'a fait valoir aucun argument quant à la sentence. Elle a affirmé que l'accusé jouissait d'une bonne réputation et qu'il était respecté par les paroissiens hutus et tutsis de Nyange avant les événements du 6 avril 1994[702].

2. Droit applicable

376. La Chambre dispose d'un large pouvoir discrétionnaire de condamner les personnes reconnues coupables de crimes relevant de sa compétence[703]. La Chambre rappelle que la sentence doit viser la rétribution, la dissuasion, la réprobation, la réinsertion sociale, la réconciliation nationale, la protection de la société et le rétablissement de la paix.

377. La détermination de la peine par la Chambre est encadrée par les dispositions juridiques suivantes : l'article 23 du Statut ainsi que l'article 101 du Règlement.

> (i) L'existence de circonstances aggravantes ;
> (ii) L'existence de circonstances atténuantes, y compris l'importance de la coopération que l'accusé a fournie au Procureur avant ou après la déclaration de culpabilité ;
> (iii) La grille générale des peines d'emprisonnement appliquée par les tribunaux du Rwanda ;
> (iv) La mesure dans laquelle la personne reconnue coupable a déjà purgé toute peine qui pourrait lui avoir été infligée par une juridiction nationale pour le même fait (…)

379. La Chambre estime qu'elle peut également considérer tout autre facteur lui permettant de déterminer une peine qui reflète totalement les circonstances de l'affaire[704].

3. Conclusions de la chambre

3.1. La gravité des infractions

380. La Chambre note que dans ses conclusions finales, le Procureur a soutenu que les crimes commis par l'accusé Athanase Seromba sont graves[705]. A l'appui de son allégation, il invoque le fait que ce dernier aurait agi avec préméditation[706], et sans contrainte[707].

[704] Voir Rutaganda, Jugement (Ch.), 6 décembre 1999, para. 454.

381. La Chambre rappelle que la gravité des infractions est mesurée en fonction des faits reprochés à l'accusé, c'est-à-dire les circonstances particulières qui entourent la commission des infractions et non en fonction d'une hiérarchie des crimes[708].

382. La Chambre constate qu'en l'espèce, le Procureur n'a pas établi au-delà de tout doute raisonnable que l'accusé Athanase Seromba a planifié ou ordonné à titre principal les infractions dont il a été reconnu coupable. Elle ne retient pas non plus à son encontre la thèse de la préméditation avancée par le Procureur. Enfin, la Chambre considère que l'accusé n'a pas agi sous la contrainte lorsqu'il a approuvé la destruction de l'église à l'aide du bulldozer. En cela, la Chambre conclut que les infractions de génocide et de crimes contre l'humanité par aide et encouragement dont l'accusé Athanase Seromba a été reconnu coupable revêtent une gravité particulière.

3.2. La situation personnelle de l'accusé

383. La Chambre rappelle que la situation personnelle de l'accusé est perçue dans la jurisprudence des tribunaux ad hoc comme un facteur d'individualisation de la peine[709]. Elle estime, en outre, que par situation personnelle, il faut entendre toute circonstance propre à l'accusé pouvant conduire à une aggravation ou une atténuation de la peine.

384. La Chambre note, par ailleurs, que dans ses conclusions finales, le Procureur a soutenu que rien dans la situation personnelle d'Athanase Seromba n'atténue la gravité des crimes retenus à son encontre.

385. La Chambre note que l'accusé Athanase Seromba a été ordonné prêtre le 18 juillet 1993[710]. Elle est d'avis qu'à ce titre sa formation et son expérience au sein de l'église devaient lui permettre de comprendre le caractère répréhensible de son comportement lors des événements.

386. Elle relève par ailleurs que l'accusé Athanase Seromba n'était présent à l'église de Nyange que depuis la fin de l'été ou le début de l'automne 1993[711]. Elle constate qu'il n'était que vicaire à la paroisse de Nyange au moment des événements d'avril 1994, n'ayant été amené à assumer les fonctions de responsable de ladite paroisse que parce qu'aucun curé n'y était en fonction[712].

3.3. Les circonstances aggravantes

387. Dans ses conclusions finales, le Procureur a fait valoir l'existence de plusieurs circonstances aggravantes. Le Procureur a mis en avant le fait qu'Athanase Seromba était connu dans la communauté de Nyange[713] et qu'il est directement intervenu dans les massacres de Tutsis[714]. Il a soutenu également que l'accusé a abusé de la confiance de ses paroissiens en tant que prêtre[715]. Il a fait par ailleurs observer que les crimes commis lors des événements d'avril 1994 à la paroisse de Nyange s'accompagnaient d'une violence excessive et revêtaient un caractère humiliant pour les victimes[716] qui ont subi de grandes souffrances avant de mourir[717].

388. La Chambre rappelle que l'existence des circonstances aggravantes doit être prouvée au-delà de tout doute raisonnable[718]. Une circonstance aggravante ne peut s'assimiler aux circonstances ayant donné lieu à la commission d'un élément constitutif pour lesquels l'accusé a été déclaré coupable[719].

389. Au titre des circonstances aggravantes, la Chambre examinera en l'espèce le statut de l'accusé et l'abus de confiance dont il s'est rendu responsable à l'égard des réfugiés tutsis[720] ainsi que la fuite de l'accusé après la destruction de l'église.

Statut de l'accusé et abus de confiance

390. La Chambre rappelle qu'Athanase Seromba, prêtre catholique, était responsable de la paroisse de Nyange au moment des faits visés dans l'Acte d'accusation[721]. L'accusé était connu et respecté dans la communauté catholique de Nyange. Elle rappelle qu'il est établi que de nombreux Tutsis de la commune de Kivumu se sont réfugiés dans l'église de Nyange afin d'échapper aux attaques[722]. La Chambre considère comme une circonstance aggravante le fait que l'accusé n'ait absolument rien entrepris de visible pour mériter la confiance de ces personnes qui croyaient avoir la vie sauve en cherchant refuge à la paroisse de Nyange. En conséquence, la Chambre retiendra le statut de l'accusé et l'abus de confiance comme des circonstances aggravantes.

De la fuite de l'accusé après la destruction de l'église

391. La Chambre note qu'il n'est pas contesté que l'accusé a utilisé une identité autre que la sienne pour s'exiler en Italie comme en atteste le passeport qui lui a été délivré par les autorités zaïroises de l'époque[723]. Elle observe pourtant que d'autres prêtres qui ont vécu les événements d'avril 1994 à l'église de Nyange en compagnie de l'accusé n'ont pas eu recours à ce stratagème. Au surplus, elle rappelle que ces prêtres restés au Rwanda ont même fait l'objet de poursuites judiciaires au terme de laquelle ils ont tous été acquittés[724]. Dès lors, la Chambre considère qu'il y a lieu de considérer la fuite d'Athanase Seromba au titre des circonstances aggravantes.

3.4. Les circonstances atténuantes

392. Dans ses conclusions finales, le Procureur a soutenu qu'Athanase Seromba ne saurait bénéficier d'aucune circonstance atténuante aux motifs que sa reddition n'était pas « réellement volontaire », d'une part, et que l'accusé n'avait pas coopéré avec le Procureur tout en faisant obstruction à des pans entiers de son procès. Il a ajouté également que l'accusé n'a manifesté aucun remords pour le rôle qu'il a joué dans la commission des crimes considérés. Enfin, le Procureur a souligné que la preuve du bon comportement de l'accusé avant et après la commission des crimes qui lui sont reprochés n'a pas été rapportée[725].

393. Dans ses conclusions finales, la Défense a soutenu que l'accusé jouissait d'une bonne réputation et qu'il était respecté par les paroissiens hutus et tutsis de Nyange avant les événements d'avril 1994[726].

De la bonne réputation dont jouissait Athanase Seromba avant les événements d'avril 1994 à la paroisse de Nyange 395. La preuve de la bonne considération dont bénéficiait Athanase Seromba a été rapportée par plusieurs témoins du Procureur et de la Défense. Parmi ces derniers, CBJ[729], CBK[730], BR1[731], BZ1[732] et BZ4[733] ont affirmé qu'Athanase Seromba en tant que prêtre était respecté des populations. Sur la base de ces informations, la Chambre considère qu'il y a lieu de retenir cet élément comme circonstance atténuante de la peine à infliger à l'accusé.

De la reddition de l'accusé

396. Le Procureur a soutenu que la reddition d'Athanase Seromba ne saurait constituer une circonstance atténuante vu qu'elle n'a pas été réellement volontaire[734]. Il fait observer que l'accusé ne s'est constitué prisonnier qu'une fois son arrestation devenue imminente par les autorités italiennes[735]. Le Procureur a soutenu, en outre, que si reddition il y a, celle-ci ne saurait pour autant constituer une circonstance atténuante puisqu'elle ne coïncide pas avec les critères retenus dans le jugement Babic[736].

397. La Chambre note que la reddition volontaire de l'accusé peut constituer une circonstance atténuante[737]. Elle est d'avis que les circonstances et les délais entourant une reddition de l'accusé doivent être évalués au cas par cas. Ainsi, la Chambre constate que dans l'affaire Blaskic, le fait que l'accusé se soit rendu seulement après avoir préparé sa défense[738], et dans l'affaire Simic, le fait que la reddition de l'accusé ait eu lieu trois ans après la reddition d'autres individus se trouvant dans les mêmes circonstances ont limité l'effet atténuateur de ces redditions[739]. Elle observe, à l'opposé, que dans l'affaire Babic, la reddition volontaire de l'accusé a été retenue comme une circonstance atténuante parce qu'elle est intervenue « peu après la confirmation de l'Acte d'accusation établi à son encontre »[740] tandis que dans l'affaire Plavsic, la circonstance atténuante de reddition a été accordée à l'accusé pour s'être volontairement livré aux autorités du Tribunal 20 jours après avoir eu connaissance de l'Acte d'accusation[741].

398. En l'espèce, la Chambre note que l'accusé Athanase Seromba s'est livré aux autorités du Tribunal le 6 février 2002, sans que le mandat d'arrêt pris à son encontre n'ait eu à être exécuté par les autorités italiennes[742]. La Chambre considère qu'il s'agit d'une reddition volontaire. Dans ces conditions, la Chambre retient la reddition volontaire de l'accusé comme une circonstance atténuante dans la détermination de la peine.

Du jeune âge de l'accusé

399. La Chambre prend note de l'âge relativement jeune de l'accusé Athanase Seromba, qui avait 31 ans au moment des faits[743], et de la possibilité de sa réhabilitation éventuelle.

3.5. La fixation de la peine

La Grille générale des peines d'emprisonnement appliquée au Rwanda

400. La Chambre note que la loi rwandaise du 26 janvier 2001[744] classe les personnes poursuivies pour aide et encouragement au génocide et au crime contre l'humanité dans la catégorie 1 (b) : « b. La personne qui, agissant en position d'autorité au niveau national, provincial ou du district, au sein des partis politiques, de l'armée, des confessions religieuses ou des milices, a commis des infractions ou encouragé les autres à les commettre ».

401. Elle note également que le Rwanda, à l'instar d'autres pays qui ont incorporé le génocide ou le crime contre l'humanité dans leur législation interne a prévu pour ces crimes les peines les plus lourdes de sa législation pénale[745].

402. La Chambre rappelle toutefois que la loi rwandaise et les sanctions prononcées par les Tribunaux rwandais ne revêtent qu'un caractère indicatif[746], ne constituant qu'un des facteurs parmi d'autres qu'elle se doit de prendre en compte dans la détermination des peines[747]. En effet, le Tribunal ne peut imposer que des peines d'emprisonnement allant jusqu'à l'emprisonnement à vie, à l'exclusion de la peine de mort appliquée au Rwanda[748].

403. La Chambre note, par ailleurs, que la participation directe d'un accusé aux infractions commises est généralement plus sévèrement punie qu'une participation criminelle pour l'aide et l'encouragement qu'il apporte dans la commission de ces dernières[749]. Ainsi, la peine d'emprisonnement à vie est généralement prononcée à l'encontre des personnes qui ont directement planifié ou ordonné les actes incriminés, en particulier ceux qui disposaient d'une autorité et d'une influence certaines au moment des faits incriminés, ainsi que pour celles qui ont participé à ces actes avec un zèle ou un sadisme particulier[750].

Multiplicité des peines

404. Conformément aux dispositions de l'article 101 (C) du Règlement, la Chambre dispose d'un pouvoir discrétionnaire pour déterminer si les peines qu'elle prononce doivent être purgées de façon consécutive ou si elles doivent être confondues[751]. A cet égard, la Chambre rappelle que la Chambre d'appel a constaté « qu'aucune disposition du Statut ou du Règlement n'oblige expressément une Chambre de première instance à imposer des peines distinctes à raison de chaque chef d'accusation dont un accusé est reconnu coupable »[752]. Elle note, en outre, que dans l'affaire Blaskic, la Chambre d'appel a notamment déclaré ce qui suit : « lorsque les crimes imputés à un accusé, quelle que soit leur qualification, font partie d'un ensemble unique de faits criminels commis sur un territoire et au cours d'une période déterminée, il y a lieu d'infliger une peine unique pour l'ensemble des chefs dont l'accusé a été reconnu coupable, si la Chambre de première instance le décide ainsi »[753].

Déduction de la durée de la détention préventive

405. L'accusé Athanase Seromba s'est livré aux autorités du Tribunal le 6 février 2002. Aussi, la Chambre déduira de la durée de la peine prononcée contre Seromba le temps écoulé depuis sa détention provisoire jusqu'au présent jugement, et ce conformément à l'article 101 (D) du Règlement de procédure et de preuve.

Chapitre VI : Dispositif

PAR CES MOTIFS, la Chambre de première instance, statuant publiquement, contradictoirement et en premier ressort, conformément au Statut et au Règlement de procédure et de preuve ;

APRES AVOIR EXAMINE tous les éléments de preuve ainsi que les arguments des parties ;

APRES AVOIR DECLARE COUPABLE Athanase Seromba du crime de génocide et du crime contre l'humanité (extermination);

CONDAMNE Athanase Seromba à la peine unique de quinze (15) ans d'emprisonnement ;

DÉCIDE que cette peine est immédiatement exécutoire ;

DIT qu'en application de l'article 101 (D) du Règlement, Athanase Seromba a droit à ce que la période passée en détention préventive, calculée à compter de la date de sa reddition le 6 février 2002, ainsi que toute période supplémentaire qu'il passera en détention dans l'attente d'une décision en appel, soient décomptées de la durée de la peine.

DIT qu'en vertu de l'article 103 du Règlement, Athanase Seromba restera sous la garde du Tribunal jusqu'à ce que soient arrêtées les dispositions nécessaires à son transfert vers l'Etat dans lequel il purgera sa peine.

Fait à Arusha, le mercredi 13 décembre 2006.

Annexe I : Historique de la Procédure

1. Phase préalable au procès

1. L'Acte d'accusation dressé contre Athanase Seromba a été déposé par le Procureur le 8 juin 2001 et confirmé le 3 juillet 2001 par le Juge Lloyd Williams, sous réserve de la correction de fautes grammaticales et typographiques[1]. Suite à une demande du Procureur, le juge confirmateur a également ordonné la non divulgation au public, aux médias et au suspect des noms de témoins et suspects visés dans les éléments justificatifs de l'Acte d'accusation ainsi que d'autres renseignements permettant de les identifier.

2. Le 4 juillet 2001, le Juge Lloyd Williams a émis un mandat d'arrêt à l'encontre de l'Accusé[2]. Le 10 juillet 2001, en exécution de l'ordonnance de transfert rendu par ledit juge, le Greffier du Tribunal a notifié le mandat d'arrêt et l'Acte d'accusation établie contre l'Accusé au Ministre italien de la justice.

3. Le 6 février 2002, l'Accusé s'est livré aux autorités du Tribunal et a été placé en détention. L'Accusé a comparu pour la première fois devant le Juge Navanethem Pillay le 8 février 2002 et a plaidé non coupable au regard de chacun des chefs d'accusation portés contre lui[3]. Le 12 février 2002, le Procureur a adressé à l'Accusé une première demande d'entretien.

4. Le Procureur a déposé une requête en prescription de mesures de protection des témoins le 14 mai 2002.

5. Dans une requête déposée le 3 juin 2002, le Procureur a prié le Président du Tribunal d'autoriser la Chambre de première instance à exercer ses fonctions hors du siège du Tribunal et à tenir le procès de l'Accusé au Rwanda[4]. Le 20 juin 2002, le Juge Navanethem Pillay a décidé du report d'une décision y relative jusqu'à ce que le Greffier ait attribué à l'Accusé un conseil pour sa défense[5].

6. Le 10 septembre 2002, le Procureur a introduit un additif à sa requête en mesures de protection des témoins.

7. Le 3 mars 2003, le Greffier a nommé Maître Alfred Pognon Conseil principal de la Défense.

8. Le 17 avril 2003, dans une lettre adressée à la Défense, le Procureur a invité l'Accusé à examiner les éléments de preuve.

9. Le 2 mai 2003, la Défense a déposé une requête aux fins d'annulation de l'Acte d'accusation, selon laquelle le défaut du Procureur d'interroger le suspect avant sa mise en accusation constituait un vice de procédure entraînant la nullité de l'Acte d'accusation.

10. Le 30 juin 2003, le Juge Erik Møse a fait droit à la requête du Procureur en mesures de protection des victimes et des témoins, lui ordonnant de communiquer ses déclarations de témoins non caviardées 21 jours avant la reprise du procès[6].

11. Le 8 janvier 2004, le Procureur a retiré sa requête aux fins de la tenue d'un procès au Rwanda[7].

12. Le 13 janvier 2004, la Chambre de première instance, siégeant en la personne du Juge Erik Møse, a rejeté la requête de la Défense aux fins d'annulation de l'Acte d'accusation[8], en affirmant que ni le Statut ni le Règlement n'obligent le Procureur à interroger un suspect avant sa mise en accusation.

13. Une conférence de mise en état en vue de déterminer l'état de préparation du procès s'est également tenue le 13 janvier 2004. La Chambre a invité le Procureur à déposer le mémoire préalable au procès[9]. La Défense a indiqué qu'elle ne pourra être prête qu'en septembre 2004[10].

14. Le 14 janvier 2004, le Juge Erik Møse a autorisé le Procureur à retirer sa requête aux fins de la tenue d'un procès au Rwanda[11].

15. Le 20 janvier 2004, le Procureur a déposé la version initiale de son mémoire préalable au procès.

16. Le Procureur a communiqué à la Défense la liste de pièces à conviction le 20 août 2004.

17. Le 27 août 2004, le Procureur a déposé la version définitive du mémoire préalable au procès. Les pièces à conviction ont été déposées le 30 août 2004. Un rectificatif au mémoire préalable au procès a été déposé le 7 septembre 2004. Le 15 septembre 2004, d'autres pièces à conviction ont été déposées, ainsi que l'ordre de comparution des témoins du Procureur.

18. Une conférence préalable au procès s'est tenue le 20 septembre 2004. La Chambre a noté l'absence de l'Accusé à cette conférence[12]. Le Procureur a déclaré avoir complètement remplis ses obligations préalables au procès, notamment en ce qui a trait à la communication des pièces à la Défense[13]. La Défense a demandé que le Procureur lui remette les déclarations des témoins auxquelles font référence les décisions des Tribunaux rwandais déposées par le Procureur[14].

2. Phase du procès

19. Le procès de l'Accusé a débuté le 20 septembre 2004. L'accusé a participé à un mouvement de grève déclenché par certains accusés du Tribunal et s'est absenté pendant les trois premiers jours du procès. Les conseils de la Défense, Maîtres Pognon et Monthé, ont expliqué que leur client leur avait demandé de ne pas le représenter durant cette grève[15]. La Chambre a décidé que les instructions données par l'Accusé ne pouvaient pas être considérées comme ayant mis fin au mandat de représentation des conseils de la Défense et a ordonné à ces derniers de continuer à représenter l'Accusé aussi longtemps qu'il persisterait dans son refus de se présenter devant la Chambre[16]. Après avoir indiqué qu'ils ne pouvaient représenter l'Accusé sans son autorisation, les conseils de la Défense ont quitté la salle d'audience obligeant la Chambre à suspendre les débats jusqu'au 27 septembre, date de leur retour.

20. Dans des lettres datées respectivement du 24 septembre 2004 et du 27 septembre 2004, les conseils de la Défense et l'Accusé, ainsi que l'Association des Avocats de la Défense (ADAD), dans une requête aux fins d'intervention comme amicus curiae, ont prié la Chambre de revenir sur sa décision orale du 21 septembre 2004. La Chambre a rejeté cette première requête, ayant conclu que l'avertissement du 21 septembre 2004 ne constituait pas une sanction professionnelle[17] et que la décision d'avertissement était juridiquement fondée, en ce qu'elle rentrait dans le domaine de son pouvoir inhérent de direction et de contrôle des débats à l'audience, et donc qu'elle ne saurait souffrir d'une quelconque contestation, même en présence de circonstances particulières[18]. En ce qui concerne la requête de l'ADAD, la Chambre a décidé de ne pas l'autoriser à intervenir comme amicus curiae, ayant constaté que le mémoire présenté par celle-ci ne soulevait pas de question pertinente de nature à éclairer la Chambre[19].

21. La Chambre a entendu 15 témoins à charge, 12 témoins du 27 septembre au 22 octobre 2004 et 3 témoins du 19 janvier au 25 janvier 2005, date de clôture de la présentation des moyens de preuve à charge par le Procureur.

22. Le 20 janvier 2005, la Défense a déposé une requête aux fins de prescription de mesures de protection des témoins.

23. Une conférence de mise en état s'est tenue le 25 janvier 2005. La Chambre a demandé à la Défense de déposer la liste de témoins à décharge le plus tôt possible et a ordonné la reprise du procès pour le 1er mars 2005[20].

24. La Chambre a rendu une décision portant protection des témoins de la Défense le 31 janvier 2005 et a ordonné à la Défense de communiquer ses déclarations de témoins non caviardées 21 jours avant la reprise du procès[21].

25. Le 9 février 2005, la Défense a déposé une requête aux fins de prolongation du délai pour la communication de ses déclarations de témoins non caviardées et une autre requête aux mêmes fins le 17 février 2005. Le 1er mars 2005, la Chambre a ordonné à la Défense de déposer, au plus tard le 14 mars 2005, son mémoire préalable au procès, la liste complète et précise des témoins qu'elle entendait citer, le résumé des faits et la durée probable de chaque déposition[22]. La Chambre a ajourné le procès au 4 avril 2005 pour la présentation par la Défense de ses moyens de preuve à décharge[23].

26. Le 11 mars 2005, la Défense a déposé une nouvelle requête aux fins d'octroi de délais supplémentaires. Lors d'une conférence de mise en état tenue le 5 avril 2005, la Chambre a reporté la reprise du procès au 10 mai 2005 et a ordonné à la Défense de remettre son mémoire préalable, le résumé et les déclarations de témoins dans le délai prescrit pour que le procès puisse reprendre le 10 mai 2005[24].

27. Le 9 avril 2005, l'Accusé a adressé une lettre à son conseil principal, Me Pognon, dans laquelle il déclarait ne plus vouloir que celui-ci le représente parce qu'il n'avait plus confiance en lui.

28. Le 13 avril 2005, la Chambre a ordonné à la Défense de communiquer au Procureur les déclarations non caviardées de ses témoins au plus tard 21 jours avant la reprise du procès[25].

29. Le 15 avril 2005, l'accusé a écrit au Greffier pour lui demander de retirer la commission d'office de Maître Pognon, son conseil principal. Le 18 avril 2005, Maître Pognon a accepté de ne plus représenter l'accusé et de se retirer immédiatement.

30. Le 19 avril 2005, la Défense a déposé une déclaration préliminaire à la présentation des moyens à décharge, mais n'a pas respecté les ordonnances aux fins de communication des déclarations non caviardées des témoins à décharge.

31. Le 10 mai 2005, étant donné le retrait de Me Pognon et l'absence de Maître Monthé, la Chambre a décidé d'ajourner le procès sine die[26].

32. Le 19 mai 2005, la Chambre a ordonné au Greffier de répondre au plus tard le 27 mai 2005 à la demande de l'Accusé du 15 avril 2005 concernant la commission d'office d'un nouveau conseil[27]. Le 20 mai 2005, le Greffier a retiré la commission d'office du conseil principal[28] et le 8 juin 2005, a commis d'office Maître Monthé en qualité de conseil principal de l'Accusé.

33. Le 23 juin 2005, la Défense a déposé une requête aux fins de retrait de la déclaration liminaire à la présentation des moyens à décharge déposée par l'ancien conseil principal.

34. Lors de la Conférence de mise en état tenue le 24 juin 2005, la Chambre a fait droit à la demande d'ajournement de la Défense et a fixé la date de reprise du procès au 31 octobre 2005[29].

35. Dans une décision du 7 juillet 2005[30], la Chambre a autorisé la Défense à déposer une nouvelle déclaration préalable à la présentation de ses moyens à décharge et a déclaré que la demande de la Défense en retrait de la déclaration liminaire du 19 avril 2005 était sans objet. La Chambre a également autorisé le Procureur à examiner les pièces à conviction dont la Défense entendait se prévaloir, au moins 21 jours avant le début de la présentation des moyens à décharge. La Chambre a ordonné à la Défense de communiquer au Procureur la nouvelle déclaration liminaire et les déclarations non caviardées des témoins à décharge au moins 21 jours avant la date de reprise du procès et les déclarations caviardées et non caviardées des témoins à décharge respectivement au moins 60 jours et 21 jours avant la date de reprise du procès.

36. La Défense a déposé un nouveau mémoire préalable communiqué le 10 octobre 2005, qu'elle a fait suivre d'un rectificatif le 19 octobre 2005. Elle a déposé les déclarations de témoins à décharge, sans communiquer leur identité, les 25 et 27 octobre 2005. Le 28 octobre 2005, la Défense a déposé l'ordre de comparution des témoins à décharge, sans communiquer leur identité.

37. Le 31 octobre 2005, la Défense a commencé la présentation des moyens de preuve à décharge.

38. Le 16 décembre 2005, la Chambre a rendu cinq décisions : une décision fixant la date de reprise du procès au 13 février 2006[31]; une décision ordonnant le transfert à Arusha de témoins détenus[32]; une décision ordonnant l'ouverture d'une enquête sur la rétraction du témoin FE36[33]; une décision ordonnant l'ouverture d'une enquête sur la demande des mesures de protection à long terme des témoins FE36, FE35 et CF14[34]; et une décision ordonnant au Procureur de communiquer à la Défense l'identité et les adresses de certains témoins qu'il n'a pas retenus par le canal de la Section d'aide aux victimes et aux témoins et autorisant la Défense à prendre contact avec certains d'entre eux[35].

39. Dans un mémorandum en date du 7 février 2006, le Président du Tribunal a reporté la date de reprise du procès au 23 mars 2006.

40. Le 7 mars 2006, la Défense a déposé une requête aux fins d'ajouter les témoins PS1 et PS2, et de ne pas retenir les témoins CF3 et FE25, dans la liste de témoins à décharge.

41. La Défense a effectivement repris la présentation des moyens de preuve à décharge le 23 mars 2006

42. Le 24 mars 2006, la Chambre a fait droit à la requête tendant à ajouter PS1 et PS2 à la liste des témoins de la Défense[36].

43. Le 29 mars 2006, la Chambre a fait droit à la requête du Procureur pour une visite des sites au Rwanda[37]. Du 8 au 11 avril 2006, la Chambre, la Défense, le Procureur et le Greffier ont visité des sites à Kivumu, au Rwanda.

44. Le 12 avril 2006, la Défense a écarté CF4 et CF13 de sa liste de témoins et a modifié l'ordre de comparution des témoins PA1, PS1, PS2 et de l'Accusé. La Chambre a décidé d'ajourner le procès au 18 avril 2006[38].

45. Le 18 avril 2006, la Défense a écarté PS1 de sa liste de témoins et a déclaré que le témoin PS2 ne pouvait pas venir déposer à Arusha avant mai 2006[39].

46. Le 20 avril 2006, la Chambre a fait droit à la requête de la Défense aux fins de recueillir les dépositions du témoin PS2 par voie de vidéoconférence[40].

47. Le 21 avril 2006, la Chambre a ordonné à l'Accusé de faire sa déposition le 24 avril 2006[41] et a autorisé les parties à envoyer des représentants en Afrique du Sud pour la déposition du témoin PS2 par voie de vidéoconférence[42].

49. La Défense a par la suite présenté au Bureau du Tribunal une requête aux fins de récusation de la Chambre. Le 25 avril 2006, le Bureau a rejeté la requête de la Défense[46].

50. Le procès a repris le 26 avril 2006. La Défense a indiqué qu'elle interjetait appel de la décision du Bureau et a demandé que le procès soit suspendu en attendant une décision de la Chambre d'appel[47]. La Chambre a rejeté la demande en suspension de procédure présentée par la Défense[48]. La Défense ayant refusé d'interroger le témoin PS2, la Chambre a considéré qu'elle avait renoncé à interroger ce témoin[49]. La Chambre a suspendu ses travaux pour ajourner les débats au lendemain pour permettre à l'accusé de se présenter à l'audience[50].

51. Le 27 avril 2006, la Défense a déclaré que l'Accusé avait décidé de ne comparaître qu'après que la Chambre d'appel ait vidé sa saisine sur l'appel initié contre la décision du Bureau en récusation[51]. La Chambre a conclu que la Défense avait renoncé au droit d'interroger l'Accusé, qu'elle n'avait donc plus de témoin à entendre et que la présentation de la preuve à décharge était arrivée à sa fin. La Chambre a ordonné que les dernières conclusions écrites du Procureur soient déposées au plus tard le 26 mai 2006, celles de la Défense au plus tard le 16 juin 2006 et que les parties présentent leurs réquisitions et plaidoiries finales le 27 juin 2006[52].

52. Le 22 mai 2006, la Chambre d'appel a rejeté l'appel de la Défense interjeté contre la décision du Bureau du Tribunal sur la requête aux fins de récusation[53].

53. Le 5 juin 2006, la Défense a déposé une requête aux fins d'obtenir une prorogation du délai de dépôt de son mémoire final au 22 juin 2006. La Chambre y a fait droit le 8 juin 2006[54].

54. Le Procureur a déposé son mémoire final le 26 mai 2006 et la Défense a fait de même le 22 juin 2006. La Défense a également déposé un Corrigendum à son mémoire final le 26 juin 2006.

55. Les parties ont présenté leurs plaidoiries et réquisitions finales les 27 et 28 juin 2006.

56. Le 28 juin 2006, la Chambre a fait droit à la requête du Procureur aux fins de non admission du Corrigendum du mémoire final de la Défense et a ordonné son retrait des pièces constituant le dossier de la procédure[55].

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA,

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Defence Motion for Protection of Witnesses under Article 21 of the Statute, Rules 69 and 75 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence", which was filed on 29 May 2006;

NOTING that the Prosecution does not oppose the motion;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

1. This motion for measures to protect the identity of witnesses to be called on behalf of the Serugendo Defence is brought under Article 21 of the Statute and Rule 75 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("the Rules"). Article 21 of the Statute obliges the Tribunal to provide in its Rules for the protection of victims and witnesses. Such protection measures shall include, but shall not be limited to, the conduct of in camera proceedings and the protection of the victim's identity. Rule 75 of the Rules elaborates several specific witness protection measures that may be ordered, including sealing or expunging names and other identifying information that may otherwise appear in the Tribunal's public records, assignment of a pseudonym to a witness, and permitting witness testimony in closed session. Subject to these measures, Rule 69 (C) requires the identity of witnesses to be disclosed to the Prosecution in adequate time for preparation.

2. Measures for the protection of witnesses are granted on a case by case basis. The jurisprudence of this Tribunal and of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia requires that the witnesses for whom protective measures are sought must have a real fear for the safety of the witness or his or her family, and there must be an objective justification for this fear. These fears may be expressed by persons other than the witnesses themselves. A further consideration is trial fairness, which favours similar or identical protection measures for Defence and Prosecution witnesses.[6160]

3. The Serugendo Defence submits that the witnesses for whom protection is sought have legitimate fears for their safety due to a combination of the following factors: their close relationship to the Accused, pre-existing vulnerabilities which have already created a need for their relocation to third countries and other well-founded fears of reprisals. Based on the information provided, the Chamber follows previous decisions regarding protection for Defence witnesses and accepts the existence of these fears amongst Defence witnesses, and their objective justification.[6161] Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the conditions for ordering witness protection measures are satisfied.

HEREBY ORDERS that:

1. The Serugendo Defence shall be permitted to designate pseudonyms for each of the witnesses for whom it claims the benefits of this Order, for use in trial proceedings, and during discussions between the Parties in proceedings.

2. The names, addresses, whereabouts, and other identifying information concerning the protected witnesses shall be sealed by the Registry and not included in any non-confidential Tribunal records, or otherwise disclosed to the public.

3. In cases where the names, addresses, locations and other identifying information of the protected witnesses appear in the Tribunal's public records, this information shall be expunged from the said records.

4. The names and identities of the protected witnesses shall be forwarded by the Serugendo Defence to the Registry in confidence.

5. No person shall make audio or video recordings or broadcastings and shall not take photographs or make sketches of the protected witnesses, without leave of the Chamber or the witness.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA,

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED of the "Defence Motion for Admission of Written Statements" etc. under Rule 92 bis of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("the Rules)", filed on 29 May 2006;

NOTING that the Prosecution does not oppose the motion;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Defence seeks to admit into evidence the written statements of four witnesses (FG, JF, CN and BN) in lieu of oral testimony, pursuant to Rule 92 bis of the Rules. It is argued that all statements confirm to the requirements of that provision. The Defence also contends that the admission of these statements will save judicial time and resources, as well as minimise disruption to the witnesses' lives and risks to their safety. The Prosecution does not oppose the admission of the statements and has waived its right to require the witnesses to be called for cross-examination.

Deliberations

2. The relevant parts of Rule 92 bis read as follows:

> Rule 92 bis: Proof of Facts Other Than by Oral Evidence

(c) that the person making the statement was informed that if the content of the written statement is not true then he or she may be subject to proceedings for giving false testimony; and

(d) the date and place of the declaration.

The declaration shall be attached to the written statement presented to the Trial Chamber.

(E) Subject to any order of the Trial Chamber to the contrary, a party seeking to adduce a written statement or transcript shall give fourteen days notice to the opposing party, who may within seven days object. The Trial Chamber shall decide, after hearing the parties, whether to admit the statement or transcript in whole or in part and whether to require the witness to appear for cross-examination.

3. Rule 92 bis was adopted from the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia. The Appeals Chamber has described Rule 92 bis as "lex specialis which takes the admissibility of written statements of prospective witnesses and transcripts of evidence out of the scope of the lex generalis of Rule 89 (C), although the general propositions which are implicit in Rule 89 (C) – that evidence is admissible only if it is relevant and that it is relevant only if it has probative value – remain applicable to Rule 92 bis".[1] Therefore, statements sought to be admitted under Rule 92 bis must also comply with the requirements of relevance and probative value required by Rule 89 (C).

4. Rule 92 bis (A) specifically prohibits the admission of evidence going to the acts and conduct of the Accused as charged in the Indictment.[2] By contrast, one of the factors in favour of admitting statements is that the evidence sought relates to issues of the character of the Accused. The Defence cites this factor in arguing for the admission of the statements.

5. Even if a statement fulfils all these requirements, the Chamber must decide whether or not to exercise its discretion to admit, bearing in mind the overarching necessity of ensuring a fair trial as provided for in Articles 19 and 20 of the Statute. If, in exercising its discretion, the Chamber permits the admission of the statement, it must also decide whether or not to require cross-examination of the witness. Again, a relevant factor is the need to ensure a fair trial.[3]

6. The Chamber observes that the four witness statements tendered for admission do not go to proof of the Accused's acts and conduct as charged but attest to his good character and professional competence prior to the events mentioned in the Indictment; a factor in favour of admission under Rule 92 bis (A) (i) (e). The statements are relevant and probative as factors in mitigation of sentence. Furthermore, the formal requirements of admission of a written statement under Rule 92 bis (B) have been met by way of attestations attached to all the four written statements. Having considered the statements as a whole, the Chamber finds that fair trial requirements do not require their admission with cross-examination, bearing in mind the uncontested nature of their contents and the waiver of this right by the Prosecution.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA,

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Prosecutor's Extremely Urgent Motion for the Deposition of Joseph Serugendo", of 2 June 2006;

NOTING the Defence response, which was filed on 5 June 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Prosecution seeks the deposition of Joseph Serugendo on the basis that Serugendo is in extremely poor health. A medical report filed before the Tribunal in the context of Serugendo's sentencing hearing on 1 June 2006 states that he suffers from a terminal illness.[1] Serugendo's current state of health is fragile and deteriorating, and his prognosis is poor.[2] The Prosecution fears that the medical condition of Serugendo may soon deteriorate to the point that he may be unable to testify.[3] Deposition is accordingly sought to preserve, for use in future proceedings, the testimony of Serugendo contained in approximately 200 pages of debriefing provided by him to the Prosecution.[4] The Prosecution intends to use the deposition in various ongoing and future trials. As Serugendo's state of health may not permit him to await the outcome of various decisions, and in order to save time and judicial resources, this Motion is a consolidated request to introduce the deposition in all such future proceedings. In so doing, the Prosecution acknowledges its obligation to provide notice to each Accused person against whom the deposition may be used and his counsel of the time of the deposition so as to accord them an opportunity to cross-examine Serugendo.[5] It further acknowledges that the decision as to the admissibility of the deposition as Prosecution evidence in any future proceeding is reserved to the Trial Chambers in which the Prosecution may seek to introduce the deposition.[6]

2. The Defence does not oppose the motion.

Deliberations

3. Rule 71 (A) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("the Rules") provides the Chamber with the discretion to grant the taking of depositions where exceptional circumstances exist and where it would be in the interests of justice. In addition, Rule 71 (B) stipulates certain requirements with which the request for deposition must comply.[7]

4. The rapidly deteriorating health of Serugendo, as attested to by the Prosecution and the above-mentioned medical report, constitutes an exceptional circumstance within the meaning of Rule 71.[8] Although to date, most depositions have been taken in the context of ongoing trials, the Chamber takes note of Serugendo's terminal illness and poor prognosis, as well as the Prosecution's submissions on the extensive and significant character of his testimony and its likely relevance to many current and

On 2 June 2006, Joseph Serugendo was sentenced to a term of imprisonment of six years, having previously pleaded guilty to one count of direct and public incitement to commit genocide and to one count of persecution as a crime against humanity. His substantial cooperation with the Prosecution and his terminal illness were determined by the Trial Chamber to be significant factors in mitigation of punishment (Serugendo, Judgement and Sentence (TC), 8 June 2006, paras. 62, 74). His state of health was acknowledged by the Chamber to require a modified regime of detention and hospitalization. (Id., para. 74, disposition).

future proceedings.[9] The Chamber accordingly finds it to be in the interests of justice to permit his deposition to be taken in order to preserve this evidence for future use. The decision as to the admissibility of the deposition in any future proceeding is ultimately a matter for the Trial Chambers before which the Prosecution may seek to introduce the deposition as evidence.

5. The Chamber recalls the right of the Defence to be present during the deposition, and to cross-examine Serugendo if they so wish.[10] In the present circumstances, this right extends to Counsel of all Accused against whom the Prosecution intends to use the deposition.[11]

6. Rule 71 (B) requires that a motion should include "a statement of the matters on which the person is to be examined". In the motion, the Prosecution states that the witness "has given an extensive statement on what he knows regarding the genocide in Rwanda in 1994" and that it "bears important prosecution evidence in a number of trials both on-going and yet to be started".[12] Although the Prosecution undertakes to disclose Serugendo's statement to all Defence parties,[13] the information provided in the motion is vague and insufficiently precise to constitute a statement of the matters for examination.[14]

7. Given the exceptional circumstances of the present case, the Chamber does not deny the motion on this basis, on the condition that further particularization is provided by the Prosecution forthwith. The Chamber further requests that the Prosecution specify the date and place at which the deposition is to be taken, following consultation with the Registry and all Defence parties, as soon as reasonably practicable.

FOR THE AFOREMENTIONED REASONS, THE CHAMBER

I. GRANTS the Prosecutor's Extremely Urgent Motion for the Deposition of Joseph Serugendo, and ORDERS that the deposition be recorded on videotape, and placed under seal;

II. ORDERS that the deposition be taken at a place to be chosen by the Registry at the earliest practicable date to be agreed between the Prosecution and all Defence parties, and that this date be communicated to the Chamber as soon as practicable;

III. ORDERS the Prosecution to immediately provide a statement of the matters on which Serugendo is to be examined to the Chamber and all Defence parties;

IV. ORDERS the Prosecution to disclose the statement of Joseph Serugendo to all Defence parties as soon as practicable, but no less than one week prior to the agreed date of the deposition, so as to allow adequate time for preparation of the Defence;

V. ORDERS the Registrar to appoint a Presiding Officer for the taking of the deposition of Joseph Serugendo and to make all necessary arrangements to facilitate the taking of the deposition.

I. Procedural History and Plea Agreement

1. Joseph Serugendo was charged by the Office of the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda with conspiracy to commit genocide, genocide, complicity in genocide, direct and public incitement to commit genocide and persecution as a crime against humanity in an Indictment confirmed by Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov on 22 July 2005.

2 On 16 September 2005, Serugendo was arrested and on 23 September 2005 transferred to the Tribunal. He made his initial appearance on 30 September 2005, and entered a plea of not guilty to all five counts of the Indictment. Serugendo immediately commenced discussions with the Prosecution with the view to full co-operation and an eventual guilty plea.

3. A joint motion for consideration of a plea agreement between Joseph Serugendo and the Prosecution was filed on 12 January 2006.[1] On the same date, the Prosecution also requested leave to amend the Indictment.[2] The proposed Amended Indictment sought to withdraw five charges[3] and to retain two counts.[4]

4. The plea agreement was filed jointly on 16 February 2006. Serugendo agreed to plead guilty to Counts 1 and 2 of the proposed Amended Indictment, alleging direct and public incitement to commit genocide pursuant to Articles 2 (3) (c) and 6 (1) of the Statute of the Tribunal, and persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 3 (h) and Article 6 (1) of the Statute.

5. At a Plea Hearing of 15 March 2005, pursuant to Rule 62 bis of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("the Rules"), the Chamber granted the Prosecution motion to amend the Indictment.[5] During the same hearing, Serugendo pleaded guilty to the Amended Indictment. This Amended Indictment and Plea Agreement comprised the commonly agreed basis for the guilty plea and for the present Judgement and Sentence.

6. The Plea Agreement states that Serugendo intends to enter a plea of guilty to the two above-mentioned counts.[6] It emphasises that he is "aware of both the consequences and scope of the offences he committed in 1994 while in Rwanda".[7] Through the provision of complete and truthful information regarding these events and his own involvement therein, the Plea Agreement records Serugendo's desire "to contribute to the necessary process of national reconciliation in Rwanda".[8]

7. The Plea Agreement acknowledges that Serugendo agreed to plead guilty "freely and voluntarily".[9] He also understands that, by entering into the Plea Agreement, he has given up the rights related to the presumption of innocence and to a full trial.[10] The undertakings contained in the Plea Agreement include Serugendo's co-operation with the Prosecution.[11]

8. In exchange for Serugendo's guilty plea, his genuine co-operation with the Prosecution, and the fulfillment of all his obligations under the Plea Agreement, the Prosecution agreed to recommend to the Chamber the imposition of a term of imprisonment in the range of six to fourteen years.[12] A Chamber is not bound by any agreement reached between the parties on the preferred sentence.[13]

9. Both counts retained in the Amended Indictment refer to crimes under Articles 2 and 3 of the Statute. The elements of the offence of direct and public incitement to commit genocide under Article 2 (3) (c) of the Statute are described in both the Plea Agreement and the Tribunal jurisprudence as:

- that the accused incited others to commit genocide;
- that the incitement was direct;
- that the incitement was public; and
- that the accused had the specific intent to commit genocide, that is, destroying in whole or in part a national, ethnic, racial or religious group.[14]

10. The elements of the crime against humanity of persecution under Article 3 (h) of the Statute are described in both the Plea Agreement and the Tribunal jurisprudence as:

- the accused committed specific violations of basic or fundamental rights;
- the specific crimes were committed due to political or racial discrimination;
- the accused had real or constructive knowledge of the general context in which the offences were committed;
- the crimes were committed as part of widespread or systematic attacks against a civilian population; and
- the attacks were carried out on political, ethnic, racial or religious grounds.[15]

11. At the Plea Hearing on 15 March 2006, the Chamber confirmed that the plea was based on sufficient facts to establish the crimes and Serugendo's participation in their commission.[16] Following its conclusion that the plea was voluntary, informed and unequivocal, in conformity with Rule 62 (B) of the Rules, the Chamber entered a finding of guilt for each count to which Serugendo pleaded guilty.[17]

12. The Chamber received the Prosecution Sentencing Brief on 3 May 2006 and the Defence Sentencing Brief on 18 May 2006.

13. The Sentencing Hearing was held on 1 June 2006. In the course of this hearing, the Defence called two witnesses who gave evidence of the good character of the Accused prior to the crisis in Rwanda and of assistance rendered to a Tutsi individual during the genocide.[18] Additionally, the Chamber admitted into evidence written statements of four Defence witnesses. All addressed the previous good character and professional competence of the Accused.[19]

14. Finally, Serugendo made a brief oral statement and tendered into evidence two statements prepared by him expressing his genuine remorse and conveying an apology to the people of Rwanda.[20] On the following day, Friday 2 June 2006, the Chamber rendered its judgment orally by reading out a summary.

II. Factual Basis

15. Joseph Serugendo was born in Kipushi, Democratic Republic of Congo on 24 August 1953.[21]

16. At all times material to the Amended Indictment, Serugendo was a member of the Comité d'Initiative, the governing board of Radio Television Libre des Mille Collines ("the RTLM"); the adviser on technical matters to the RTLM radio station; Chief of the Maintenance Section of Radio Rwanda in the Office Rwandais d'Information ["ORINFOR"] and a member of the enlarged National Committee of the Interahamwe za MRND that exercised authority over the Interahamwe of Kigali.[22]

17. The Chamber will now review the facts specific to each of the counts in the Amended Indictment. It is recalled that the Chamber is bound by the assessment contained in the Plea Agreement and the factual basis underlying that agreement. The Accused has admitted the veracity of each of these facts.

18. The Amended Indictment alleges that during the course of 1994, and in particular between 6 April 1994 and 17 July 1994, the minority Rwandan ethnic or racial group known as Tutsi was attacked by soldiers, Interahamwe militia and armed civilians on the basis that they were Tutsi, with the intent to destroy the Tutsi population in Rwanda in whole or in part.[23] Hundreds of thousands of civilians were killed as a result of these attacks.[24]

[16] Plea Hearing, T. 15 March 2006, p. 7. The parties further agreed that, if the Prosecution were to proceed with adducing evidence at trial on the facts set forth in the Plea Agreement, the facts thus proven would support a finding of guilt as to all counts contained in the Amended Indictment (Plea Agreement, paras. 30, 49).

[17] Plea Hearing, T. 15 March 2006, p. 7. Rule 62 (B) of the Rules provides that: "If an accused pleads guilty in accordance with Rule 62 (A) (v), or requests to change his plea to guilty, the Trial Chamber shall satisfy itself that the guilty plea: (i) is made freely and voluntarily; (ii) is an informed plea; (iii) is unequivocal; and (iv) is based on sufficient facts for the crime and accused's participation in it, either on the basis of objective indicia or of lack of any material disagreement between the parties about the facts of the case. Thereafter the Trial Chamber may enter a finding of guilt and instruct the Registrar to set a date for the sentencing hearing."

[18] Witness AX testified that the Accused had rescued him from attackers during the genocide (T. 1 June 2006, pp. 5-8). Witness BG testified to the Accused's positive relationships with persons from all ethnic groups and the medical condition of his family members (id., pp. 9-20).

[19] These statements were admitted following the Chamber's "Decision on Defence Motion for the Admission of Written Witness Statements under Rule 92 bis", 1 June 2006.

19. The Plea Agreement acknowledges that in 1994, widespread and systematic attacks against a civilian population, notably Tutsi and moderate Hutu, occurred on political and ethnic grounds, resulting in the death of hundreds of persons, mainly civilians, throughout Rwanda. This is evidenced by the indiscriminate nature of the killings, which targeted unarmed women, children, young persons and the aged alike, who were massacred at roadblocks or places where they sought refuge.[25]

20. The charges against Serugendo concern the Interahamwe and the killing campaign, RTLM broadcasts, and RTLM re-installation and operation in July 1994. With regard to the first of these issues, Serugendo, as a member of the Interahamwe, is alleged to have planned with other leaders of the MRND between 1992 and 17 July 1994 political meetings and rallies in order to indoctrinate, sensitize, and incite members of the Interahamwe to kill or cause serious bodily or mental harm to members of the Tutsi population, with the aim of destroying the Tutsi ethnic group.[26]

21. Serugendo acknowledges that from early 1992 through 1994, as a member of the Interahamwe, he planned with other leaders of the MRND, and the Interahamwe militias, political meetings and rallies aimed at inciting members of the Interahamwe to kill or cause serious harm to members of the Tutsi population with the goal of destroying the Tutsi ethnic group.[27]

22. He is further alleged from 8 April 1993 through July 1994 to have planned, in concert with others, the establishment, funding and operation of the RTLM as a radio station to disseminate an anti-Tutsi message and to further ethnic hatred between Hutu and Tutsi. This had the objective of killing or causing serious harm to members of the Tutsi population, with the aim of destroying the Tutsi ethnic group.[28] Serugendo admits that during this period, he and others planned to establish, fund and operate the RTLM as a radio station which disseminated an anti-Tutsi message, intended to foment racial hatred and ultimately to destroy the Tutsi ethnic group.[29]

23. According to the Indictment, the RTLM broadcasted from Kigali and disseminated an anti-Tutsi message from 8 April 1993 until 4 July 1994.[30] Between April and July 1994, the RTLM, as a leading source of information to the population of Rwanda, broadcasted information identifying the location of Tutsi and inciting members of the Rwandan population to find and kill all Tutsi.[31] During this period, RTLM broadcasted messages that incited the killing of hundreds of thousands of civilian Tutsi throughout Rwanda.[32] Serugendo admits that during 1993 and 1994, the RTLM broadcasted messages aimed at disseminating an anti-Tutsi message and that such broadcasts in fact incited the killing of hundreds of thousands of civilian Tutsi throughout Rwanda.[33]

24. As a member of the Comité d'Initiative, and as adviser on technical matters, Serugendo is alleged to have aided and abetted these broadcasts by RTLM employees during the period when it was on air from 8 July 1993 to 17 July 1994.[34] In particular, he is alleged to have gone to the RTLM studios between 6 April 1994 and 12 April 1994, accompanied by armed militia, to offer technical assistance and moral encouragement to ensure that RTLM broadcasting continued uninterrupted.[35] Serugendo admits to having provided these forms of technical assistance and moral support which facilitated RTLM broadcasts during this period.[36]

25. Following the destruction by RPF forces of the RTLM transmitter located in Kigali on or around 4 July 1994, which rendered the RTLM unable to broadcast, Serugendo is alleged to have met with important RTLM personnel at the Hotel Méridien in Gisenyi in order to plan the setting up of a new studio and transmission facility in Gisenyi.[37] He admits to having attended this meeting in order to enable RTLM broadcasts to continue.[38]

26. Between 5 July 1994 and 14 July 1994, RTLM technicians under the authority of Serugendo are alleged to have taken the RTLM equipment salvaged from Kigali to the top of Mount Muhe near Gisenyi and to have used the transmission equipment installed previously on Mount Muhe to create a makeshift studio, thus allowing RTLM broadcasts to resume. These broadcasts continued to disseminate the call to exterminate the Tutsi ethnic group and incited the killing and injuring of civilian Tutsi throughout Rwanda. In the same period, the Accused is further alleged to have provided technical expertise that enabled RTLM journalists to record programs calling for the extermination of Tutsi on tapes which were then broadcast over the RTLM from Mount Muhe.[39]

27. Serugendo admits to having provided this expertise. By successfully establishing a makeshift transmitter on Mount Muhe and restoring the RTLM's broadcast capability, he admits to having aided and abetted the killing of members of the Tutsi ethnic group.[40]

28. Serugendo is alleged to be criminally responsible for these acts by virtue of his position of authority as a member of the Comité d'Initiative, and his supervisory and managerial functions associated with this role. In consequence of his position, he is alleged to have exercised authority over subordinates, including RTLM technicians and other support personnel.[41] As a member of the National Committee of the Interahamwe, Serugendo is further alleged to have exercised authority over the members of the Interahamwe militias.[42] Specifically, he is alleged to have ordered those over whom he had authority as a result of the positions he held, and instigated and aided and abetted those over whom he did not have such control.[43]

29. Serugendo admits that, as a member of the Comité d'Initiative, the governing board of the RTLM, and as adviser on technical matters, he exercised authority over RTLM technical employees and other support staff in this manner.[44] He further acknowledges that he was at all material times aware of the persecution of some persons on political grounds and of mass discrimination against the Tutsi.[45] He admits that, despite this knowledge, he nevertheless continued to work with the RTLM and to discharge his functions.[46]

30. The Chamber accordingly finds that both the actus reus and mens rea of the crimes to which the Accused has pleaded guilty have been established.

III. Applicable Law and Sentencing

[42] Id., para. 4.
[43] Id., paras. 7, 19. The Accused is further alleged to have participated in a joint criminal enterprise whose object, purpose and foreseeable outcome was the direct and public incitement to commit genocide against the Tutsi racial or ethnic group throughout Rwanda (id., para. 4).

31. This Tribunal was established with the objective of prosecuting and punishing the perpetrators of the atrocities in Rwanda with a view to ending impunity and thereby promoting national reconstruction and reconciliation.[47] As an entity established under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations, the Tribunal was also established to contribute to the restoration and maintenance of international peace and security.[48]

32. A guilty plea indicates that an accused is admitting the veracity of the charges contained in an indictment. This also means that the accused acknowledges responsibility for his actions, which tends to further a process of reconciliation.[49] A guilty plea protects victims from having to relive their experiences and re-open old wounds. As a side-effect, albeit not really a significant mitigating factor, it also saves the Tribunal's resources.[50]

33. Fundamental principles taken into consideration when imposing a sentence in the jurisprudence of the ad hoc Tribunals are deterrence[51] and retribution.[52] Rehabilitation has also been acknowledged as one of the purposes of punishment in the Tribunal jurisprudence.[53]

34. The Chamber is of the opinion that, when an accused pleads guilty, he or she takes an important step in these processes.[54] By pleading guilty, the Accused should be seen as setting an example that may encourage others to acknowledge their personal involvement in the massacres committed in Rwanda in 1994.[55]

B. Article 23 of the statute and Rule 101 of the Rules

35. Article 23 of the Statute provides a non-exhaustive list of the factors to be taken into account by the Trial Chamber in determining the sentence and reads in its relevant parts:

> 1. The penalty imposed by the Trial Chamber shall be limited to imprisonment. In determining the terms of imprisonment, the Trial Chambers shall have recourse to the general practice regarding prison sentences in the courts of Rwanda.
> 2. In imposing the sentences, the Trial Chambers should take into account such factors as the gravity of the offence and the individual circumstances of the convicted person. […]

36. Rule 101 of the Rules further states in its relevant parts:

> (A) A person convicted by the Tribunal may be sentenced to imprisonment for a fixed term or the remainder of his life.
> (B) In determining the sentence, the Trial Chamber shall take into account the factors mentioned in Article 23 (2) of the Statute, as well as such factors as:
> (i) Any aggravating circumstances;
> (ii) Any mitigating circumstances including the substantial co-operation with the Prosecutor by the convicted person before or after conviction;
> (iii) The general practice regarding prison sentences in the courts of Rwanda; […]

37. Neither the Statute nor the Rules specify a concrete range of penalties for offences under the Tribunal's jurisdiction. Determination of the appropriate sentence is left to the discretion of each Trial Chamber, although guidance as to which factors should be taken into account is provided by both the Statute and the Rules.[56]

IV. Sentencing Factors

38. The Prosecution submits that in determining the sentence of an accused, the Chamber should be guided by "the objectives of criminal law, which include the confirmation of the rule of law, which is a condition of a peaceful society, through a just sentence, which reflects the standard of proportionality between the gravity of the offence, the degree of responsibility of the offender, deterrence of the accused and future perpetrators, retribution, and the need to encourage others to come to terms with their respective roles in the 1994 genocide and accept responsibility for their actions".[57] The Defence invites the Chamber to fully consider the Plea Agreement, embodying the Accused's admission of guilt and acceptance of full responsibility, in determining sentence.[58]

39. The gravity of the offence is a factor of primary importance in determining an appropriate sentence.[59] It is necessary to consider the nature of the crime and "the particular circumstances of the case, as well as the form and degree of the participation of the accused in the crime" in order to determine the gravity of the crime.[60] A sentence must reflect "the predominant standard of proportionality between the gravity of the offence and the degree of responsibility of the offender".[61] The Chamber also understands its obligation to ensure that the sentence is commensurate with the individual circumstances of the offender.[62]

40. In determining the sentence, the Chamber is obliged to take into account any aggravating and mitigating circumstances, but the weight to be given to such circumstances is within the discretion of the Chamber.[63] The aggravating circumstances should be proven beyond reasonable doubt,[64] while the standard to be met for mitigating factors is the balance of probabilities.[65]

41. The Rules specify only substantial co-operation with the Prosecutor as a mitigating factor. Other factors often taken into account by this Tribunal in mitigating a sentence are, inter alia, a guilty plea,[66] co-operation with the Prosecution,[67] expression of genuine remorse,[68] assistance given to the victims by an accused,[69] absence of previous criminal record,[70] ill health,[71] and the accused's family and social situation.[72] Mitigating circumstances may also include those not directly related to the offence.[73]

A. Aggravating Circumstances

(i) Submissions

42. The Prosecution submits that the innate gravity and the absolute prohibition against direct and public incitement to commit genocide and persecution render their commission inherently aggravating.[74]

43. Additionally, by virtue of his position and authority as a member of the Comité d'Initiative, and technical adviser to RTLM, the Prosecution submits that Serugendo exercised authority over subordinates, including RTLM technicians and other support personnel.[75]

44. Joseph Serugendo's actions helped ensure that the RTLM broadcasting continued uninterrupted during this period, and comprised oversight of the radio station equipment, technical assistance, and moral encouragement to staff when he personally visited the RTLM studios between 6 and 12 April 1994.[76] His actions therefore contributed to the dissemination by the RTLM, a leading source of information to the population of Rwanda, of information identifying the location of the Tutsi population and inciting the Rwandan population to find and kill all Tutsi, resulting in the killing of hundreds of thousands of civilian Tutsi.[77]

45. The Defence agrees that the offences to which the Accused pleaded guilty are by their nature grave, but that this factor has been reflected in the sentencing range stipulated in the Plea Agreement.[78]

(ii) Findings

Gravity of the crimes and the authority exercised by the Accused

46. The Chamber observes that the seriousness of the crimes and the extent of the involvement of Serugendo in their commission are factors to be considered in assessing aggravating circumstances. Genocide and crimes against humanity are inherently aggravating offences because they are heinous in nature and shock the collective conscience.[79]

47. Account must be taken of the particular circumstances of the case, including the form and the degree of the participation of an accused in the crimes.[80] The Chamber finds that Serugendo's position as a member of the managerial staff of the RTLM, the authority he therefore exercised over the personnel of the radio station, and his active role in ensuring the proper functioning of the radio station are indeed aggravating factors.

48. Accordingly, Serugendo's position of authority qualifies as an aggravating circumstance, in accordance with the case law of the Tribunal, due to the far-reaching consequences of his improper exercise of his or her authority and power.[81]

49. However, the Chamber notes that Serugendo was not a particularly high-ranking or influential personality in Rwanda during 1994.[82] Nor did he personally make anti-Tutsi or inflammatory statements over the RTLM or commit any violent acts during the massacres in Rwanda.

B. Mitigating Circumstances

(i) Submissions

50. The Prosecution and Defence both point to significant mitigating circumstances in the instant case.[83] They rely principally upon Serugendo's timely guilty plea, his ill health, and substantial co-operation with the Prosecution as factors in mitigation.[84]

51. Both parties also acknowledge that Serugendo was a person of previous good character, with no history of extremism prior to the events of 1994, and with no previous criminal record.[85] Finally, it is jointly noted that Serugendo has shown remorse for the crimes for which he has pleaded guilty.[86]

(ii) Findings

(a) Guilty plea

52. The Chamber agrees with the parties that Serugendo's guilty plea will assist in the administration of justice and in the process of national reconciliation in Rwanda. It will also spare victims from coming to testify before the Tribunal.[87]

53. Further, by pleading guilty, Serugendo may be seen as setting an example that may encourage others to acknowledge their personal involvement in the massacres committed in Rwanda in 1994.[88]

54. The Prosecution submits that Serugendo deserves credit for not delaying his guilty plea until the last minute so as to secure a tactical advantage. By this timely plea, he has therefore saved the Tribunal considerable expense and time. He has assisted the Tribunal and the international community in making substantial savings in terms of time, human and financial resources.[89] The Defence adds that the Accused's decision to plead guilty from the outset reflects his genuine remorse, and that this plea has been entered at great personal risk to both the Accused himself and his family.[90]

55. The jurisprudence of the Tribunal has accepted that a guilty plea may go to the mitigation of sentence because, according to the circumstances, it may: demonstrate repentance, honesty, and readiness to take responsibility;[91] help establish the truth;[92] contribute to peace and reconciliation;[93] set an example to other persons guilty of committing crimes;[94] relieve witnesses from giving evidence in court; and save the Tribunal's time and resources.[95] The timing of a guilty plea is also a factor.[96]

56. The Chamber observes that in the Plea Agreement, Serugendo states that by pleading guilty, he indicates his desire to tell the truth and thus genuinely contribute to the search for truth by revealing the knowledge and information in his possession.[97]

57. The Chamber concurs with previous decisions of this Tribunal that some form of consideration should be given to those who have confessed their crimes in order to encourage others to come forward.[98] Moreover, the Chamber is of the view that the guilty plea of the Accused may contribute to the process of national reconciliation in Rwanda.[99] Further, by pleading guilty prior to the commencement of the trial, the Accused relieved the victims of the need to open old wounds.

58. The Chamber finds that Serugendo's change of plea to one of guilty is a mitigating circumstance.[100] The plea was accompanied by a publicly expressed acknowledgement of his responsibility.[101] Further, the timely nature of the guilty plea facilitates the administration of justice and saves the Tribunal's resources.[102]

59. Therefore, the Chamber recognises the importance of Serugendo's guilty plea as an expression of his readiness to take responsibility, and as a contribution to reconciliation in Rwanda.

60. The Chamber concludes that Joseph Serugendo's guilty plea is an important factor going to the mitigation of sentence.

(b) Co-operation with the Prosecution

61. Both the Prosecution and Defence concur that Serugendo has provided substantial co-operation to the Prosecution.[103] This co-operation is described as wide-ranging, leading to the clarification of many areas of investigative doubt, in relation also to crimes previously unknown by the Prosecution.[104] Consequently, he can be seen as setting an example that may encourage others to acknowledge their personal involvement in the massacres that occurred in Rwanda in 1994.

62. Based on the submissions of the parties, it is clear that Serugendo's co-operation with the Prosecution has been substantial. The Chamber finds this factor to be a significant mitigating circumstance.

(c) Remorse

See also Prosecution Final Pre-Sentencing Brief, para. 5; Sentencing Hearing, T. 1 June 2006, pp. 26, 28-30.
[104] Defence Sentencing Brief, para. 44.

63. An accused's remorse may be treated as a mitigating circumstance, provided that it is sincere.[105] Both in the Plea Agreement and during the Sentencing Hearing, Serugendo publicly expressed regret and remorse for his crimes.[106] The Chamber accepts that this remorse is genuine.

64. The Chamber therefore finds that his expression of remorse is one mitigating factor among others.

(d) Good character

65. Both parties note that as far as is known, Serugendo was of good character and had no record of extremism before 1994.[107] The Accused has no previous criminal record, a factor to be taken into account for mitigation.

(e) Personal and family circumstances

66. The jurisprudence of the Tribunal has taken into consideration various personal circumstances as mitigating factors, such as the advanced age of an accused,[108] and his family situation.[109] However, the Tribunal has generally attached only limited importance to these factors.[110]

67. The Chamber notes that Serugendo is married and that he is 53 years old. It considers that these factors taken together amount to personal circumstances of a kind which may be accorded some, although very limited, weight in mitigation.

(f) Assistance given to certain victims

68. During the Sentencing Hearing, the Defence called Witness AX, a Tutsi, who testified that on 10 or 11 April 1994, he was chased by armed attackers. Serugendo rescued the witness by transporting him in his car and refusing to relinquish him to the angry mob.[111] This evidence was uncontested by the Prosecution.

69. The Chamber accepts that Serugendo saved the life of Witness AX during the genocide as a factor in mitigation.

(g) Ill health

70. Serugendo has been recently diagnosed with a terminal illness.[112] Both parties concur that his fragile health and poor prognosis must be taken into account in determining a fair sentence.[113]

71. The Chamber has noted the content of the confidential Medical Report which was tendered by the Accused into evidence during the Sentencing Hearing on 1 June 2006. This Report suggests that the Accused is suffering from an incurable and inoperable condition and that his life expectancy is accordingly reduced. Further, he is likely to require intensive ongoing medical treatment and palliative care.[114]

72. Ill health has been considered as a mitigating factor in sentencing by both this Tribunal[115] and the ICTY.[116] The weight it has been accorded has varied. There is no case law concerning the significance of terminal illness.[117] The Chamber shares the view of the ICTY that when the medical condition of an accused is such as to become incompatible with a state of continued detention, it is the duty of the Tribunal to provide the necessary remedies.[118]

73. Although both parties view Serugendo's state of health as a significant mitigating factor, they do not seek medical care as an alternative to confinement.[119] They submit, however, that irrespective of the sentence to be imposed, the Accused must continue to be provided with medical treatment, including referral to appropriate facilities where necessary.[120]

74. The Chamber considers that the Accused's current state of health, as established by the Medical Report, constitutes a significant mitigating circumstance in sentencing. Further, the palliative care and ongoing treatment necessary to treat his condition requires a modified regime of detention.

C. Sentencing Practice in the Courts of Rwanda

75. Although neither party places particular reliance on the sentencing practice in the courts of Rwanda, the Chamber recalls Article 23 of the Statute and Rule 101 of the Rules, which oblige the Tribunal to take into account the general practice regarding prison sentences in the courts of Rwanda. The Tribunal is not bound by the sentencing practice of Rwanda.[121]

76. Under Rwandan law, genocide and crimes against humanity carry the possible penalties of death or life imprisonment, depending on the nature of the accused's participation.[122]

77. Previous jurisprudence has noted that the Rwandan Organic Law setting up Gacaca Jurisdictions[123] and the Organic Law modifying and completing it[124] may be of relevance to guilty pleas

[117] The ICTY has on one occasion considered the impact of terminal illness on Tribunal proceedings, albeit in the context of an ongoing trial rather than at sentencing. (Decision on the Motion for Provisional Release of the Accused Momir Talić, 20 September 2002). Given Talić's incurable condition, inability to stand trial, and the incompatibility of his medical treatment with any regime of detention, he was granted provisional release and placed under a supervised regime of house arrest and hospitalization. Talić subsequently died on 28 May 2003 (Order Terminating Proceedings Against Momir Talić, 12 June 2003).
[118] The ICTY found that it would be extremely damaging to the institutional authority of the Tribunal were the Chamber to disregard the stark reality of Talic's medical condition and ignore the fact that it is a Tribunal created to assert, defend and apply humanitarian law (Decision on the Motion for Provisional Release of the Accused Momir Talić, 20 September 2002, p. 6).

He needs proper health care and attention. … It would serve no useful purpose confining him." His submissions are, however, toward a proposed reduction in sentence in consequence of his client's state of health (e.g. id., "It is for this reason that I implore the Honourable Chamber to consider the medical condition of the Accused, which is of a terminal nature, as a serious mitigating factor, calling upon the Chamber to go way below the range proposed.")

A person acting in a position of authority at the municipal level,[125] who has encouraged others to commit a crime against humanity, may, after pleading guilty and under certain conditions,[126] be sentenced to a term of imprisonment ranging from twenty-five years to life.[127]

78. The Chamber is also mindful of Article 83 of the Rwandan Penal Code which provides that where there are mitigating circumstances, sentences shall be amended or reduced as follows: a death penalty shall be replaced by a sentence of imprisonment of no less than five years; a sentence of life imprisonment shall be replaced by a sentence of no less than two years imprisonment; and a sentence of imprisonment of five to twenty years or more than twenty years may be reduced to a sentence of one year's imprisonment.[128]

D. Sentencing Recommendations of the Parties

79. In the Plea Agreement, the Prosecution undertook to recommend a sentence of between six and fourteen years imprisonment.[129] At the Sentencing Hearing, the Prosecution revised this range and instead proposed a sentencing range of six to ten years given the substantial nature of the co-operation received from Joseph Serugendo to date.[130]

80. Although both parties acknowledge that, pursuant to Rule 62 bis (B), the Chamber is not bound by the recommendations of the parties, the Appeals Chamber has nevertheless emphasised that Trial Chambers shall give due consideration to the recommendation of the parties and, should the sentence diverge substantially from that recommendation, give reasons for the departure.[131]

V. Determination of Sentence

A. Gravity of the Offences

81. All crimes under the Tribunal's Statute are serious violations of international humanitarian law.[132] When determining a sentence, a Trial Chamber has considerable, though not unlimited, discretion on account of its obligation to individualize penalties to fit the individual circumstances of an accused and to reflect the gravity of the crimes for which the accused has been convicted.[133]

82. In determining an appropriate sentence, the Appeals Chamber has stated that sentences of like individuals in like cases should be comparable. However, it has also noted the inherent limits to this approach because "any given case contains a multitude of variables, ranging from the number and type of crimes committed to the personal circumstances of the individual".[134]

83. The Chamber has found Serugendo guilty of genocide and persecution as a crime against humanity for his managerial role in the RTLM under Article 6 (1) of the Statute. In the Tribunal's jurisprudence, principal perpetration generally warrants a higher sentence than aiding and abetting.[135] However, this alone does not mean that a life sentence is the only appropriate sentence for a principal perpetrator of genocide and crimes against humanity.[136] In this Tribunal, a sentence of life imprisonment is generally reserved those who planned or ordered atrocities and those who participate in the crimes with particular zeal or sadism.[137] Offenders receiving the most severe sentences also tend to be senior authorities.[138]

84. At all relevant times, Serugendo had no formal position within the government, military, or political structures of Rwanda. In addition, Serugendo did not personally broadcast any anti-Tutsi messages during the relevant period. However, his technical and managerial role was important to the ability of the RTLM to continue to transmit such messages.

85. Although Serugendo's crimes are grave, the Chamber is not satisfied that he is deserving of the most serious sanction available under the Statute. The Chamber finds some guidance from cases that include convictions for direct participation in genocide and crimes against humanity that did not result in life sentences.

86. In Semanza, the Appeals Chamber determined twenty-five years' imprisonment to be the appropriate sentence for the direct perpetration of genocide and extermination at a massacre site.[139] Semanza was a former bourgmestre and a newly appointed parliamentarian who exercised influence in the locality where his crimes were committed.[140] In Gacumbitsi, the Trial Chamber decided that a single sentence of thirty years' imprisonment for the Accused sufficiently reflected the Tribunal's sentencing goals for genocide and extermination as a crime against humanity.[141] In reaching this conclusion, the Trial Chamber noted that the Accused, a bourgmestre at the time of his involvement, was not involved in the long term planning of the events in his commune. In Ruzindana, the Appeals Chamber affirmed the Accused's sentence of twenty-five years' imprisonment for genocide, based on his participation in a common purpose or design, which included mutilating and humiliating his victim.[142]

87. On examination of the sentencing practice of this Tribunal and the ICTY, the Chamber notes that principal or co-perpetrators convicted of the crime against humanity of persecution have received sentences ranging from five years to life imprisonment.[143] Persons convicted of secondary forms of participation have generally received lower sentences.[144]

B. Individual, Aggravating and Mitigating Circumstances

88. The Chamber will consider the individual circumstances of Serugendo, including aggravating and mitigating factors.

89. In general, the Chamber agrees with the Prosecution that the maximum sentence should be reserved for the most serious examples of its kind, and that it should have regard to the range of cases which is actually encountered in practice.[145] Further, the maximum sentence should in general not be imposed where an accused has pleaded guilty. The Chamber reiterates that some form of consideration should be given to those who have confessed their crimes in order to encourage others to come forward. Moreover, Serugendo's guilty plea may contribute to the process of national reconciliation in Rwanda.[146]

90. Among the aggravating factors, the Chamber notes Serugendo's managerial position within the RTLM. The influence he derived from this status made it likely that other employees would follow his example.[147] The number of victims which resulted from the incitement to genocide and persecutions is indeed an aggravating factor. Serugendo played an active role in ensuring the proper functioning of the radio station.

91. Despite the gravity of the Accused's crimes and his official position, the Chamber nevertheless finds that significant mitigation is warranted in view of his guilty plea with publicly expressed remorse and his substantial co-operation with the Prosecution. His family situation, his good character prior to these events, his lack of prior criminal convictions and his age, while factors in mitigation, are of substantially less weight.

92. By contrast, the Chamber finds Serugendo's ill health, and consequently reduced life expectancy and quality of life, to be a significant factor in mitigation.

93. It is noted that the Plea Agreement and its recommendation as to sentence was filed jointly, with the Prosecution subsequently recommending a lower sentencing range in view of Serugendo's substantial co-operation.[148] While the Chamber is not bound by such a recommendation, it is nonetheless of assistance when deciding the range of sentence to be imposed.[149] It finds that he should be given a sentence at the lower end of the recommended range.

94. This said, it is clear that Serugendo is not in a position to serve a sentence under normal prison conditions. He has recently been diagnosed with a terminal illness, has very fragile health and a poor prognosis. The Tribunal must continue to ensure that he receives adequate medical treatment, including hospitalization to the extent needed. This should be reflected in the disposition of this Judgement.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED of the Defence "Extremely Urgent Motion for Partial Enforcement of Sentence under Article 26 of the Statute and Rule 104 of the Rules", filed on 12 June 2006;

NOTING the Prosecution's response and the Registrar's submissions, both filed on 19 June 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. On 12 June 2006, following Joseph Serugendo's earlier guilty plea, the Trial Chamber sentenced him to a term of six years imprisonment.[1] In light of his very fragile health and poor prognosis, the Chamber noted the need for a modified regime of detention and accordingly instructed the Registry to ensure that Serugendo continued to receive adequate medical treatment, including hospitalization to the extent needed.[2]

Submissions

2. The Defence requests that Serugendo be immediately transferred to a specialized treatment facility in France "or any other suitable institution to save his life".[3] It also contends that the ICTR medical personnel responsible for his care are "in neglect of their professional duty and obligation" and "in contempt of the specific directives" of the Chamber regarding Serugendo's modified regime of detention.[4] It is further requested that his wife should be with him in light of his condition.[5]

3. In response, the Prosecution notes that on 14 June 2006, Serugendo was evacuated to Nairobi for further medical follow up, "leaving open the argument that this response is now moot".[6] It observes that as enforcement of sentence is a Registry competence under the Tribunal's Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("the Rules"), the Registry is competent to deal with this matter.[7] As grave allegations are made in the motion, with no factual basis provided in support of the alleged acts of contempt of a court decision or dereliction of duty on the part of Tribunal medical officials, the Prosecution submits that the Registry must be heard on the matter before a decision is reached.[8] The Prosecution continues to support all measures that are necessary and feasible in the current circumstances regarding the enforcement of Serugendo's sentence.[9]

4. The Registrar has provided submissions to the Chamber under Rule 33 (B) of the Rules, describing the medical treatment provided to Serugendo under the Registry's supervision. According to information contained in a confidential report from the ICTR Chief Medical Officer, Serugendo's condition has deteriorated. The Chief Medical Officer's opinion is that the only medical care that can be administered to him at this stage of his illness is of a palliative nature.[10]

5. It follows from the Registrar's submissions that at the time of filing of the motion, Serugendo remained at the AICC Hospital in Arusha where he was provided with the required medical care for his condition. As a result of a sudden deterioration in his condition, he was evacuated to the Nairobi Hospital in the Republic of Kenya on 14 June 2006. Serugendo is being treated by a specialist there. It is envisaged that he will remain under the care of Nairobi Hospital until such time as the hospital sees fit to release him.[11] The Registrar notes that no grounds are specified in the motion for why Serugendo, who is terminally ill, would benefit from better care and medical treatment at the suggested medical facility in France than at the AICC Hospital in Arusha or the Nairobi Hospital. Measures have been taken by the Registry to enable Mrs. Serugendo to be with her husband.[12]

6. The Registrar undertakes to continue to abide by the advice of the medical professionals entrusted with Serugendo's care in providing appropriate medical care and support measures to him, in accordance with the Chamber's instructions.[13]

Deliberations

7. In its judgement, the Chamber instructed the Registry to ensure that Serugendo continued to receive adequate medical treatment, including hospitalization to the extent required. To date, the Registrar has placed him under the care of the ICTR Chief Medical Officer and a medical specialist. The Registry has further provided all measures indicated by these medical professionals as necessary for Serugendo's ongoing palliative care. This has included his emergency air evacuation to Nairobi Hospital when this was adjudged to have been medically necessary by the ICTR Chief Medical Officer. The medical professionals entrusted with Serugendo's care have not indicated that medical evacuation to France is likely to benefit him, given the latter's current medical condition and prognosis.

8. The assessment of the medical professionals responsible for Serugendo's ongoing care is that his present condition and prognosis are inherent consequences of the terminal illness with which he has been diagnosed. The Chamber has been provided with no basis which would cause it to depart from this assessment. The Defence allegations appear to be unsubstantiated.

9. The Chamber observes that the Registry is presently making all efforts to facilitate Mrs. Serugendo's travel to Nairobi in the Republic of Kenya so that she may rejoin her husband there before the end of the present week.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the Defence request that Serugendo be transferred to a medical facility in France;

INSTRUCTS the Registry to continue its efforts to facilitate the transfer of Mrs. Serugendo to Nairobi with all expeditiousness.

I. Rappel de la procédure et accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité

1. Le Bureau du Procureur du Tribunal pénal international pour le Rwanda a accusé Joseph Serugendo d'entente en vue de commettre le génocide, de génocide, de complicité dans le génocide, d'incitation directe et publique à commettre le génocide et de persécution constitutive de crime contre l'humanité dans un acte d'accusation confirmé le 22 juillet 2005 par le juge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov.

2. Serugendo a été arrêté le 16 septembre 2005 et transféré au Tribunal le 23 septembre 2005. Le 30 septembre 2005, il a fait sa comparution initiale et a plaidé non coupable des cinq chefs retenus dans l'acte d'accusation. Immédiatement, il a entamé des discussions avec le Bureau du Procureur dans le but de lui apporter une coopération sans réserve et de plaider finalement coupable.

3. Le 12 janvier 2006, une Requête commune tendant à l'examen d'un accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité conclu entre Joseph Serugendo et le Bureau du Procureur a été déposée[1]. Le même jour, le Procureur a également sollicité l'autorisation de modifier l'acte d'accusation[2]. Dans le projet d'acte d'accusation modifié, il a abandonné cinq chefs d'accusation[3] et en a retenu deux[4].

4. L'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité a été déposé par les deux parties le 16 février 2006. Serugendo y a accepté de plaider coupable des chefs 1 et 2 du projet d'acte d'accusation modifié, à savoir l'incitation directe et publique à commettre le génocide que le Procureur lui imputait en application des articles 2 (3) (c) et 6 (1) du Statut du Tribunal et la persécution constitutive de crime contre l'humanité qu'il lui imputait en application des articles 3 (h) et 6 (1) dudit Statut.

5. Au cours d'une audience tenue le 15 mars 2005 en application de l'article 62 bis du Règlement de procédure et de preuve (le « Règlement ») pour entendre la position de Serugendo sur les accusations portées contre lui, la Chambre a fait droit à la requête du Procureur tendant à modifier l'acte d'accusation[5]. Lors de la même audience, Serugendo a plaidé coupable des chefs retenus dans l'acte d'accusation modifié. L'acte d'accusation modifié et l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité ont été adoptés d'un commun accord comme base de son aveu de culpabilité et du présent Jugement portant condamnation.

6. Dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, Serugendo déclare qu'il entend plaider coupable des deux chefs d'accusation susmentionnés[6]. Il souligne qu'il a « pris la […] mesure des conséquences et de l'ampleur des infractions qu'il avait commises au Rwanda en 1994 »[7]. Par les informations complètes et véridiques que l'accusé a fournies sur les événements qui s'étaient produits au Rwanda en 1994 et sur sa participation personnelle à ces événements, l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité illustre la volonté « de concourir à l'impérieux processus de réconciliation nationale dans ce pays »[8] dont Serugendo est animé.

7. L'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité précise que Serugendo a accepté de plaider coupable « librement et volontairement »[9]. En outre, il est conscient que la conclusion de cet accord emporte abandon de ses droits liés à la présomption d'innocence et de ceux qu'il aurait exercés dans le cadre d'un procès complet[10]. Dans l'accord, Serugendo s'engage, entre autres, à coopérer avec le Procureur[11].

8. En échange de l'aveu de culpabilité de Serugendo, de sa franche coopération avec le Bureau du Procureur et de l'exécution de toutes les obligations mises à sa charge par l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, le Procureur a accepté de recommander à la Chambre de lui infliger une peine d'emprisonnement se situant dans une fourchette de 6 à 14 ans[12]. La Chambre n'est liée par aucun accord conclu entre les parties relativement au quantum de la peine[13].

9. Les deux chefs retenus dans l'acte d'accusation modifié sont des crimes visés aux articles 2 et 3 du Statut. Les éléments constitutifs du crime d'incitation directe et publique à commettre le génocide prévu par l'article 2 (3) (c) du Statut sont énoncés dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité et dans la jurisprudence du Tribunal comme suit :

- L'accusé a incité des gens à commettre le génocide ;
- L'incitation était directe ;
- L'incitation était publique ;
- L'accusé était animé de l'intention précise de commettre le génocide, c'est-à-dire de détruire en tout ou en partie un groupe national, ethnique, racial ou religieux[14].

10. Les éléments de l'infraction de persécution constitutive de crime contre l'humanité prévue par l'article 3 (h) du Statut sont énoncés dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité et dans la jurisprudence du Tribunal comme suit :

- L'accusé a commis certaines violations des droits élémentaires ou fondamentaux de l'homme ;
- Les crimes considérés ont été commis pour des raisons discriminatoires d'ordre politique ou racial ;
- L'accusé connaissait effectivement ou avait des raisons de connaître le contexte général dans lequel il a commis ces infractions ;
- Les crimes visés ont été commis dans le cadre d'attaques généralisées ou systématiques dirigées contre une population civile ;
- Ces attaques ont été perpétrées en raison de l'appartenance politique, ethnique, raciale ou religieuse des victimes[15].

11. Lors de l'audience du 15 mars 2006, la Chambre s'est assurée que l'aveu de culpabilité était fondé sur des faits suffisants pour établir les crimes retenus et la participation de Serugendo à leur commission[16]. Ayant conclu que cet aveu avait été fait volontairement et en connaissance de cause, et était sans équivoque, conformément aux dispositions de l'article 62 (B) du Règlement, elle a prononcé une déclaration de culpabilité pour chacun des chefs dont Serugendo avait plaidé coupable[17].

12. Les 3 et 18 mai 2006, la Chambre a été saisie des mémoires préalables à la détermination de la peine produits respectivement par le Procureur et la Défense.

13. L'audience de détermination de la peine a été tenue le 1er juin 2006. Au cours de cette audience, la Défense a appelé à la barre deux témoins qui ont parlé de la bonne moralité de l'accusé avant la crise du Rwanda et de l'aide qu'il avait apportée à un Tutsi pendant le génocide[18]. De plus, la Chambre a admis en preuve les déclarations écrites de quatre témoins à décharge. Toutes ces déclarations portaient sur la bonne moralité antérieure de l'accusé et sa compétence professionnelle[19].

14. Enfin, Serugendo a fait une brève déclaration orale et versé au dossier deux déclarations écrites qu'il avait établies pour exprimer son remords sincère et présenter des excuses au peuple rwandais[20]. Le lendemain, vendredi 2 juin 2006, la Chambre a rendu son jugement oralement en donnant lecture d'un résumé dudit jugement.

[17] Compte rendu de l'audience de prise de position sur les accusations tenue le 15 mars 2006, p. 8 et 9. L'article 62 (B) du Règlement est ainsi libellé : « Si un accusé plaide coupable conformément au paragraphe (A) (v) ou demande à revenir sur son plaidoyer de non culpabilité, la Chambre doit s'assurer que l'aveu de culpabilité : (i) est fait librement et volontairement, (ii) est fait en connaissance de cause, (iii) est sans équivoque, et (iv) repose sur des faits suffisants pour établir le crime et la participation de l'accusé à sa commission, compte tenu soit d'indices objectifs, soit de l'absence de tout sérieux désaccord entre le Procureur et l'accusé sur les faits de la cause, la Chambre peut déclarer l'accusé coupable et donner instruction au Greffier de fixer la date de l'audience pour le prononcé de la peine ».

[19] Ces déclarations ont été versées au dossier à la suite de la décision de la Chambre intitulée Decision on Defence Motion for the Admission of Written Witness Statements under Rule 92 bis, datée du 1er juin 2006.

[20] Pièces à conviction n°11 et 12 de la Défense.

15. Joseph Serugendo est né le 24 août 1953 à Kipushi (République démocratique du Congo)[21].

16. À l'époque de tous les faits visés dans l'acte d'accusation modifié, Serugendo était membre du Comité d'initiative (conseil d'administration) et conseiller technique de la Radio télévision libre des mille collines (la « RTLM »), Chef de la section Maintenance de Radio Rwanda à l'Office rwandais d'information (« ORINFOR ») et membre du Comité national élargi de la milice Interahamwe za MRND qui avait autorité sur les Interahamwe de Kigali[22].

18. Le Procureur allègue dans l'acte d'accusation modifié qu'en 1994, particulièrement entre le 6 avril et le 17 juillet, des militaires, des miliciens Interahamwe et des civils armés ont attaqué les membres de la minorité ethnique ou raciale rwandaise connue sous la dénomination de « groupe tutsi » parce qu'ils étaient tutsis, dans l'intention de détruire en tout ou en partie la population tutsie du Rwanda[23]. Ces attaques se sont soldées par la mort de centaines de milliers de civils[24].

19. L'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité reconnaît que le Rwanda a été le théâtre d'attaques généralisées et systématiques dirigées contre une population civile – notamment les Tutsis et les Hutus modérés – en raison de l'appartenance politique et ethnique de celle-ci en 1994 et que ces attaques se sont soldées par la mort de centaines de personnes, la plupart étant des civils, dans tout le pays. La preuve en est que ce massacre a été commis sans distinction, les victimes étant des personnes sans armes de toutes catégories – femmes, enfants, jeunes et vieillards – qui ont été massacrées à des barrages routiers ou dans des lieux où elles avaient trouvé refuge[25].

20. Les accusations retenues contre Serugendo portent sur les Interahamwe et la campagne de massacres, les émissions de la RTLM ainsi que la remise en service et l'exploitation de la RTLM en juillet 1994. En ce qui concerne la première de ces questions, en sa qualité de membre de la milice Interahamwe, Serugendo aurait organisé avec d'autres responsables du MRND entre 1992 et le 17 juillet 1994 des réunions et meetings politiques en vue d'endoctriner les Interahamwe, de les sensibiliser et de les inciter à tuer les membres de la population tutsie ou à porter gravement atteinte à leur intégrité physique ou mentale dans le but de détruire le groupe ethnique tutsi[26].

21. Serugendo reconnaît que du début de l'année 1992 jusqu'en 1994, en sa qualité de membre de la milice Interahamwe, il a organisé avec d'autres dirigeants du MRND et de la milice Interahamwe des réunions et meetings politiques pour inciter les Interahamwe à tuer les membres de la population tutsie ou à porter gravement atteinte à leur intégrité physique ou mentale dans le but de détruire le groupe ethnique tutsi[27].

22. En outre, du 8 avril 1993 à juillet 1994, Serugendo, de concert avec d'autres personnes, aurait pris les dispositions nécessaires pour créer, financer et exploiter le volet radio de la RTLM afin de propager un message antitutsi et de favoriser la haine ethnique entre les Hutus et les Tutsis. Il voulait par ce moyen faire tuer les membres de la population tutsie ou porter gravement atteinte à leur intégrité physique ou mentale dans le but de détruire le groupe ethnique tutsi[28]. Serugendo reconnaît avoir pris durant cette période, avec d'autres personnes, les dispositions nécessaires pour créer, financer et exploiter le volet radio de la RTLM qui a propagé un message antitutsi dans l'intention de favoriser la haine raciale et, en fin de compte, de détruire le groupe ethnique tutsi[29].

23. Il ressort de l'acte d'accusation que du 8 [juillet] 1993 au 4 juillet 1994, la RTLM a émis de Kigali et propagé un message antitutsi[30]. Entre avril et juillet 1994, la RTLM qui était l'une des principales sources d'information des Rwandais a diffusé des informations tendant à indiquer les endroits où se trouvaient les Tutsis et à inciter les membres de la population rwandaise à traquer tous les Tutsis pour les tuer[31]. Au cours de cette période, elle a diffusé des messages qui ont provoqué le massacre de centaines de milliers de civils tutsis sur toute l'étendue du territoire rwandais[32]. Serugendo reconnaît qu'en 1993 et 1994, la RTLM a diffusé des émissions visant à propager un message antitutsi et que ces émissions ont effectivement provoqué le massacre de centaines de milliers de civils tutsis sur toute l'étendue du territoire rwandais[33].

25. Le 4 juillet 1994 ou vers cette date, les forces du FPR ont détruit l'émetteur de la RTLM qui se trouvait à Kigali, mettant celle-ci dans l'impossibilité de diffuser ses programmes. Après cela, Serugendo se serait entretenu avec des employés importants de la RTLM à l'hôtel Méridien de Gisenyi pour élaborer le projet de mise en place d'un nouveau studio et d'un nouveau dispositif de transmission à Gisenyi[37]. Il reconnaît avoir participé à cette réunion pour permettre à la RTLM de poursuivre ses émissions[38].

26. Entre le 5 et le 14 juillet 1994, des techniciens de la RTLM placés sous l'autorité de Serugendo auraient apporté le matériel de la RTLM sauvé à Kigali au sommet du mont Muhe sis près de Gisenyi et mis à profit le dispositif de transmission qui y avait été installé pour créer un studio de fortune et permettre ainsi à la RTLM de reprendre ses émissions. Ces émissions ont continué à propager l'appel à l'extermination du groupe ethnique tutsi et incité à tuer des civils tutsis et à en blesser d'autres sur toute l'étendue du territoire rwandais. Pendant la même période, l'accusé aurait fourni une assistance technique qui a permis à des journalistes de la RTLM d'enregistrer sur cassette des émissions préconisant l'extermination des Tutsis qui ont été par la suite diffusées sur les antennes de la RTLM à partir du mont Muhe[39].

[39] Acte d'accusation modifié, par. 17 et 18.

27. Serugendo reconnaît avoir fourni cette assistance technique. Il reconnaît que pour avoir réussi à installer un émetteur de fortune sur le mont Muhe et à redonner à la RTLM les moyens d'émettre, il a aidé et encouragé autrui à massacrer des membres du groupe ethnique tutsi[40].

28. Selon le Procureur, Serugendo est pénalement responsable des actes susvisés en raison du pouvoir que lui conférait sa qualité de membre du Comité d'initiative et des fonctions de supervision et de gestion qu'il exerçait à ce titre. En vertu de ses attributions, il aurait eu autorité sur ses subordonnés, notamment sur les techniciens et les autres membres du personnel d'appui de la RTLM[41]. En sa qualité de membre du Comité national de la milice Interahamwe, Serugendo aurait également eu autorité sur les miliciens Interahamwe[42]. En particulier, il aurait donné aux personnes placées sous son autorité en raison de ses fonctions, l'ordre de commettre les actes susvisés et incité, aidé et encouragé les gens qui n'étaient pas sous son contrôle à agir de la sorte[43].

29. Serugendo reconnaît qu'en sa qualité de membre du Comité d'initiative (conseil d'administration) et de conseiller technique de la RTLM, il avait autorité sur les techniciens et les autres membres du personnel d'appui de la RTLM comme il a été dit plus haut[44]. Il reconnaît en outre qu'à l'époque de tous les faits considérés, il savait que certaines personnes étaient persécutées en raison de leur appartenance politique et que les Tutsis étaient victimes de discrimination sur une grande échelle[45]. Il reconnaît avoir continué de travailler à la RTLM malgré le fait qu'il était au courant de cette situation[46].

30. En conséquence, la Chambre conclut que l'élément matériel et l'élément moral des crimes dont l'accusé a plaidé coupable ont été établis.

III. Droit applicable en matière de détermination de la peine

A. Généralités

31. Le Tribunal a été créé dans le but de poursuivre et de châtier les auteurs d'atrocités commises au Rwanda pour mettre un terme à l'impunité et favoriser ainsi la reconstruction et la réconciliation nationales[47]. En tant qu'institution créée en vertu du chapitre VII de la Charte des Nations Unies, il a également pour mission de contribuer au rétablissement et au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales[48].

32. L'existence d'une reconnaissance de culpabilité signifie que l'accusé reconnaît l'exactitude des faits qui lui sont reprochés dans l'acte d'accusation et qu'il assume la responsabilité de ses actes, ce qui tend à accélérer le processus de réconciliation[49]. Elle permet aux victimes de ne pas se remémorer les événements qu'elles ont vécus pour rouvrir leurs plaies. Comme conséquence indirecte, elle permet au Tribunal d'économiser ses ressources, même si ce fait ne constitue pas à proprement parler une circonstance atténuante importante[50].

33. Dans la jurisprudence du TPIR et celle du TPIY, les principes fondamentaux retenus pour infliger une peine sont la prévention[51] et la rétribution[52]. L'amendement est également reconnu comme l'un des buts de la peine dans la jurisprudence du Tribunal[53].

34. La Chambre estime que lorsqu'un accusé plaide coupable, il fait un pas important vers ces processus[54]. En l'espèce, il y a lieu de considérer que par sa reconnaissance de culpabilité, l'accusé donne un exemple susceptible d'encourager d'autres individus à reconnaître leur participation personnelle aux massacres commis au Rwanda en 1994[55].

B. Article 23 du Statut et article 101 du Règlement

35. L'article 23 du Statut fournit une liste non exhaustive d'éléments que la Chambre de première instance doit prendre en considération lors de la détermination de la peine. Ses dispositions pertinentes se lisent comme suit :

> 1. La Chambre de première instance n'impose que des peines d'emprisonnement. Pour fixer les conditions de l'emprisonnement, la Chambre de première instance a recours à la grille générale des peines d'emprisonnement appliquée par les tribunaux du Rwanda.
> 2. En imposant toute peine, la Chambre de première instance tient compte de facteurs tels que la gravité de l'infraction et la situation personnelle du condamné. […]

36. Dans ses dispositions pertinentes, l'article 101 du Règlement ajoute ce qui suit :

> (A) Toute personne reconnue coupable par le Tribunal est passible d'une peine d'emprisonnement d'une durée déterminée pouvant aller jusqu'à l'emprisonnement à vie.
> (B) Lorsqu'elle prononce une peine, la Chambre de première instance tient compte des facteurs visés au paragraphe (2) de l'Article 23 du Statut, ainsi que d'autres facteurs comme :
> (i) L'existence de circonstances aggravantes ;
> (ii) L'existence de circonstances atténuantes, y compris l'importance de la coopération que l'accusé a fournie au Procureur avant ou après la déclaration de culpabilité ;
> (iii) La grille générale des peines d'emprisonnement appliquée par les tribunaux du Rwanda ; [...]

37. Ni le Statut ni le Règlement ne précisent concrètement la grille des peines applicables aux infractions relevant de la compétence du Tribunal. La détermination de la peine appropriée est laissée à l'appréciation souveraine de chaque Chambre de première instance. Toutefois le Statut et le Règlement indiquent les éléments à prendre en compte[56].

IV. Eléments à prendre en compte lors de la détermination de la peine

38. Le Procureur fait valoir que pour déterminer la peine de tout accusé, la Chambre devrait s'inspirer « des buts du droit pénal dont l'un réside dans la consolidation de l'État de droit – condition de l'existence d'une société paisible – par des peines justes, cadrant avec le principe qui veut que soient proportionnés la gravité de l'infraction, le degré de responsabilité du délinquant, l'intimidation des personnes poursuivies et de délinquants éventuels, la rétribution et la nécessité d'encourager d'autres personnes à accepter les divers rôles qu'elles ont joués dans le génocide de 1994 et à assumer la responsabilité de leurs actes »[57] [traduction]. La Défense invite la Chambre à tenir pleinement compte de l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, dans lequel l'accusé reconnaît sa culpabilité et accepte d'assumer l'entière responsabilité de ses actes, pour déterminer sa peine[58].

39. La gravité de l'infraction est un élément qui joue un rôle primordial dans la détermination de la peine appropriée[59]. Pour déterminer la gravité d'une infraction, il est nécessaire de tenir compte de sa nature et « des circonstances particulières de l'espèce, ainsi que de la forme et du degré de participation des accusés à ladite infraction »[60]. La peine doit refléter « le principe bien connu de proportionnalité entre la gravité de l'infraction et le degré de responsabilité de son auteur »[61]. Au demeurant, la Chambre est consciente qu'elle est tenue de veiller à ce que la peine soit proportionnée à la situation personnelle du délinquant[62].

40. Pour déterminer la peine, la Chambre doit prendre en considération toutes les circonstances aggravantes et atténuantes de l'espèce, mais le poids à accorder à chacune d'elles est laissé à son appréciation souveraine[63]. L'existence des circonstances aggravantes doit être établie au-delà de tout doute raisonnable[64], tandis que les circonstances atténuantes peuvent être retenues dès lors qu'elles semblent plus réelles que fausses[65].

41. La seule circonstance atténuante prévue dans le Règlement est l'existence d'une coopération substantielle apportée au Procureur. Toutefois le Tribunal considère comme circonstances atténuantes la reconnaissance de culpabilité[66], la coopération avec le Procureur[67], l'expression de remords sincères[68], l'assistance apportée par l'accusé à des victimes[69], l'absence de passé criminel[70], le mauvais état de santé[71] ainsi que la situation sociale et familiale de l'accusé[72], pour ne citer que celles-là. Certaines circonstances atténuantes peuvent ne pas être directement liées à l'infraction considérée[73].

A. Circonstances aggravantes

(i) Arguments des parties

42. Le Procureur fait valoir que l'incitation directe et publique à commettre le génocide et la persécution étant des actes par essence graves et formellement condamnés, leur perpétration constitue une circonstance fondamentalement aggravante[74].

43. Il fait valoir en outre qu'en vertu de sa qualité de membre du Comité d'initiative et de conseiller technique de la RTLM ainsi que du pouvoir que lui conférait cette qualité, Serugendo avait une autorité sur ses subordonnés, notamment les techniciens et les autres membres du personnel d'appui de la RTLM[75].

44. Par ses actes, Joseph Serugendo a permis à la RTLM d'émettre sans interruption durant la période considérée. Commis lorsqu'il s'est personnellement rendu dans les studios de la RTLM entre le 6 et le 12 avril 1994, ces actes consistaient à contrôler le matériel de la station de radio, prêter l'assistance technique nécessaire et encourager moralement le personnel[76]. Ses actes ont par conséquent aidé la RTLM, l'une des principales sources d'information de la population rwandaise, à diffuser des informations indiquant les lieux où se trouvaient les Tutsis et incitant la population rwandaise à rechercher tous les Tutsis pour les tuer, ce qui a abouti au massacre de centaines de milliers de civils tutsis[77].

45. La Défense reconnaît que les infractions dont l'accusé s'est déclaré coupable sont par essence graves, mais souligne que cette circonstance a été prise en considération pour arrêter la fourchette de peines prévue dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité[78].

(ii) Conclusions

Gravité des crimes et autorité exercée par l'accusé

46. La Chambre relève que la gravité des crimes retenus et l'ampleur de la participation de Serugendo à leur commission constituent des éléments à prendre en considération dans l'analyse des circonstances aggravantes. Le génocide et les crimes contre l'humanité sont par leur nature même des infractions graves, puisqu'ils sont foncièrement odieux et choquent la conscience de l'humanité[79].

47. Les circonstances particulières de l'espèce, notamment la forme et le degré de la participation de l'accusé à la commission des crimes retenus, doivent être prises en considération[80]. La Chambre estime que la qualité de membre du personnel d'encadrement de la RTLM que Serugendo avait, l'autorité qu'il exerçait de ce fait sur les agents de la station de radio et le rôle actif qu'il a joué pour assurer le bon fonctionnement de celle-ci constituent en fait des circonstances aggravantes.

48. Ainsi, compte tenu des conséquences extrêmement graves de son abus d'autorité et de pouvoir, la position d'autorité qu'occupait Serugendo remplit les conditions prévues par la jurisprudence du Tribunal, pour être considérée comme une circonstance aggravante[81].

[82] D'après son conseil, le poste qu'occupait l'accusé à la RTLM à l'époque était un poste de cadre moyen, moins important que celui d'un directeur (Mémoire de la Défense relatif à la détermination de la peine, par. 26).

(i) Arguments des parties

50. Le Procureur et la Défense relèvent l'existence d'importantes circonstances atténuantes en l'espèce[83]. Ils invoquent principalement le fait que Serugendo a plaidé coupable en temps utile, qu'il est malade et qu'il a beaucoup coopéré avec le Procureur[84].

51. Les deux parties reconnaissant également qu'avant les faits survenus en 1994, Serugendo était une personne de bonne moralité, sans passé d'extrémiste ni antécédents judiciaires[85]. Enfin, elles soulignent que l'accusé a exprimé des remords pour les crimes dont il a plaidé coupable[86].

(ii) Conclusions

(a) Reconnaissance de culpabilité

52. La Chambre souscrit à l'opinion des parties selon laquelle la reconnaissance de culpabilité de Serugendo contribuera à la bonne administration de la justice, favorisera le processus de réconciliation nationale au Rwanda et épargnera aux victimes la peine de venir témoigner devant le Tribunal[87].

53. De plus, on peut considérer que par sa reconnaissance de culpabilité, Serugendo donne un exemple susceptible d'encourager d'autres individus à reconnaître leur participation personnelle aux massacres perpétrés au Rwanda en 1994[88].

54. Selon le Procureur, il faut mettre au crédit de Serugendo le fait qu'il n'a pas attendu la dernière minute pour reconnaître sa culpabilité afin de se procurer un avantage tactique. En plaidant coupable en temps utile, il a permis au Tribunal d'économiser beaucoup d'argent et de temps. Il a aidé le Tribunal et la communauté internationale à réaliser de substantielles économies sur le plan du temps et des ressources humaines et financières[89]. La Défense ajoute que l'accusé a décidé de plaider coupable d'emblée parce qu'il éprouvait des remords sincères et que ses aveux font peser une lourde menace sur sa vie et celle des membres de sa famille[90].

55. La jurisprudence du Tribunal reconnaît que le fait de plaider coupable peut être pris en considération pour réduire la peine d'un accusé car il peut selon les circonstances, être la preuve de son repentir, de son honnêteté et de sa volonté d'assumer ses responsabilités[91], favoriser la manifestation de la vérité[92], contribuer au maintien de la paix et à la réconciliation[93], servir d'exemple à d'autres auteurs de crimes[94], épargner aux témoins la peine de venir déposer à l'audience et aider le Tribunal à économiser du temps et des ressources[95]. Le moment choisi pour plaider coupable entre aussi en ligne de compte[96].

56. La Chambre relève que Serugendo déclare dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité que par ses aveux, il exprime son désir de dire la vérité pour contribuer effectivement à la recherche de la vérité en révélant ce qu'il sait et ce qu'il a appris[97].

57. La Chambre fait siennes les décisions antérieures du Tribunal jugeant qu'une certaine contrepartie doit être accordée aux personnes qui ont avoué leurs crimes pour encourager d'autres à se manifester[98]. De plus, elle pense que la reconnaissance de culpabilité de l'accusé peut contribuer à la réconciliation nationale au Rwanda[99]. Au demeurant, en plaidant coupable avant le début du procès, l'accusé a épargné aux victimes la peine de rouvrir leurs plaies.

58. Selon la Chambre, le fait que Serugendo est revenu sur ses dénégations pour plaider coupable constitue une circonstance atténuante[100]. En plus de ses aveux, l'accusé a publiquement reconnu sa responsabilité[101]. En outre, le fait qu'il a plaidé coupable en temps opportun facilite l'administration de la justice et permet au Tribunal d'économiser ses ressources[102].

59. Cela étant, la Chambre convient que la reconnaissance de culpabilité de Serugendo est importante en ce qu'elle constitue l'expression de sa volonté d'assumer la responsabilité de ses actes et contribuera à la réconciliation au Rwanda.

60. La Chambre conclut que la reconnaissance de culpabilité de Joseph Serugendo est un élément important de nature à faire réduire sa peine.

(b) Coopération avec le Procureur

61. Le Procureur et la Défense s'accordent à reconnaître que Serugendo a sensiblement coopéré avec le Procureur[103]. Ils précisent que le champ de cette coopération était très large, que celle-ci a permis d'éclaircir de nombreuses zones d'ombre dans les enquêtes du Procureur, et qu'elle a porté aussi sur des crimes que le Procureur ne connaît pas encore[104]. On peut donc considérer que Serugendo donne un exemple susceptible d'encourager d'autres individus à reconnaître leur participation personnelle aux massacres perpétrés au Rwanda en 1994.

62. Il ressort clairement des arguments des parties que la coopération fournie par Serugendo au Procureur a été substantielle. La Chambre estime que ce fait constitue une circonstance atténuante importante.

(c) Remords

63. Les remords d'un accusé peuvent être considérés comme une circonstance atténuante s'ils sont sincères[105]. Dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité et lors de l'audience de détermination de la peine, Serugendo a publiquement exprimé des regrets et des remords pour les crimes qu'il avait commis[106]. La Chambre convient que ces remords sont sincères.

64. La Chambre conclut par conséquent que l'expression des remords de Serugendo est une circonstance atténuante.

(d) Bonne moralité

65. Les deux parties relèvent qu'à leur connaissance, Serugendo était une personne de bonne moralité et n'avait pas de passé d'extrémiste avant 1994[107]. Le casier judiciaire de l'accusé est vierge, ce qui est un élément à prendre en considération pour réduire sa peine.

(e) Situation personnelle et familiale

66. La jurisprudence du Tribunal considère diverses circonstances personnelles, dont l'âge avancé[108] et la situation familiale[109] de l'accusé, comme des circonstances atténuantes, mais le Tribunal ne leur accorde généralement que peu de valeur[110].

67. La Chambre relève que Serugendo est marié et qu'il est âgé de 53 ans. Elle considère que pris ensemble, ces faits constituent des circonstances personnelles dont on pourrait tenir compte, bien que dans une très faible mesure, pour réduire la peine de l'accusé.

(f) Assistance apportée à certaines victimes

68. Lors de l'audience de détermination de la peine, la Défense a appelé le témoin AX – un Tutsi – qui a déclaré que le 10 ou le 11 avril 1994, alors qu'il était pourchassé par des assaillants, Serugendo l'a sauvé en le transportant dans son véhicule et en refusant de le livrer à la foule en colère[111]. Cette déposition n'a pas été contestée par le Procureur.

69. La Chambre tient pour constant que Serugendo a sauvé la vie au témoin AX lors du génocide et considère ce fait comme une circonstance atténuante.

(g) Mauvais état de santé

70. Selon un diagnostic établi récemment, Serugendo souffre d'une maladie incurable[112]. Les deux parties s'accordent à reconnaître que la fragilité de sa santé et le pronostic pessimiste de son médecin doivent être pris en compte lors de la détermination d'une peine juste[113].

71. La Chambre a pris acte du contenu du rapport médical confidentiel versé au dossier par l'accusé le 1er juin 2006 au cours de l'audience consacrée à la détermination de la peine. D'après ce rapport, l'accusé souffre d'une maladie incurable et ne peut être opéré ; son espérance de vie est donc réduite. En outre, il aura probablement besoin de soins médicaux et palliatifs intensifs de manière suivie[114].

72. Le TPIR[115] et le TPIY[116] considèrent le mauvais état de santé comme une circonstance atténuante au moment de la détermination de la peine mais le poids qui lui est accordé varie. La jurisprudence n'a pas encore traité la question de l'importance des maladies mortelles[117]. La Chambre épouse le point de vue du TPIY qui estime que lorsque l'état de santé d'un accusé devient incompatible avec la poursuite de sa détention, il est du devoir du Tribunal d'adopter les solutions nécessaires[118].

73. Les deux parties considèrent l'état de santé de Serugendo comme une circonstance atténuante majeure, mais elles ne demandent pas que des soins médicaux soient prescrits en lieu et place de son maintien en détention[119]. Elles disent toutefois que quelle que soit la peine qui lui sera infligée, il faudra continuer de lui prodiguer des soins médicaux, voire le transférer dans un établissement approprié si nécessaire[120].

74. La Chambre estime que l'état de santé actuel de l'accusé, tel qu'il est décrit dans le rapport médical, constitue une circonstance atténuante majeure. Par ailleurs, les soins palliatifs et le traitement permanent dont il a besoin commandent la modification de son régime de détention.

C. Usages suivis par les juridictions rwandaises en matière de détermination des peines

76. En droit rwandais, le génocide et les crimes contre l'humanité peuvent être punis de la peine de mort ou de l'emprisonnement à perpétuité selon la nature de la participation de l'accusé[122].

Étant donné la maladie incurable dont souffrait Talić, le fait qu'il n'était pas en mesure de passer en jugement et l'incompatibilité de son traitement médical avec tout régime de détention, le Tribunal lui a accordé la liberté provisoire et l'a placé sous un régime de résidence et d'hospitalisation surveillées. Par la suite, Talić est décédé le 28 mai 2003 (Order Terminating Proceedings Against Momir Talić, 12 juin 2003).

[118] Le TPIY a jugé qu'il porterait gravement atteinte à son autorité institutionnelle s'il faisait abstraction de la dure réalité de l'état de santé de Talić et méconnaissait le fait qu'il a été créé pour proclamer, défendre et appliquer le droit humanitaire (Décision relative à la requête aux fins de mise en liberté provisoire de l'accusé Momir Talić, 20 septembre 2002, p. 11).

[119] Compte rendu de l'audience de détermination de la peine tenue le 1er juin 2006, p. 31 et 32 (le Procureur reconnaît que le mauvais état de santé de l'accusé peut autoriser une plus forte réduction de sa peine, mais précise que vu la gravité des crimes retenus, la durée de la peine ne doit pas être trop courte. À la page 26, le conseil de la Défense dit ce qui suit : « […] ce dont l'Accusé a essentiellement besoin maintenant, ce n'est pas une peine d'emprisonnement ; il a besoin de soins de santé, de soins médicaux […] Et une peine d'emprisonnement n'aurait aucune signification réelle. » Cela étant, ses arguments tendent à faire réduire la peine de son client en raison de l'état de santé de celui-ci (voir par exemple à la même page les propos suivants : « Et c'est la raison pour laquelle j'implore la Chambre de première instance d'envisager ou de tenir compte de l'état de santé de l'Accusé, qui est extrêmement grave, et de considérer qu'il s'agit là d'une circonstance atténuante majeure. Et j'aimerais demander à la Chambre de première instance d'envisager une sentence beaucoup plus faible, ou plus légère, que celle qui avait été proposée. »)

[122] Loi organique rwandaise no 8/96 sur l'Organisation des poursuites des infractions constitutives du crime de génocide ou de crimes contre l'humanité, commises à partir du 1er octobre 1990, publiée au Journal Officiel de la République rwandaise, 35e année. n°17, 1er septembre 1996.

77. La jurisprudence relève que la loi organique rwandaise portant création des juridictions Gacaca[123] et celle qui la modifie et la complète[124] peuvent présenter un intérêt en cas de reconnaissance de culpabilité devant le Tribunal, car elles régissent la procédure applicable aux personnes ayant plaidé coupable de crimes contre l'humanité. Toute personne qui, agissant en position d'autorité au niveau municipal[125], a encouragé d'autres à commettre un crime contre l'humanité peut, à certaines conditions[126], être condamnée à une peine d'emprisonnement d'une durée supérieure ou égale à 25 ans pouvant aller jusqu'à l'emprisonnement à perpétuité si elle plaide coupable[127].

78. La Chambre ne perd pas aussi de vue l'article 83 du Code pénal rwandais qui dispose que lorsqu'il existe des circonstances atténuantes, les peines doivent être modifiées ou réduites comme suit : la peine de mort est remplacée par une peine d'emprisonnement d'au moins cinq ans, la peine d'emprisonnement à perpétuité est remplacée par une peine d'emprisonnement d'au moins deux ans et la peine d'emprisonnement d'une durée comprise entre cinq et vingt ans ou même supérieure à vingt ans peut être remplacée par une peine d'emprisonnement d'un an[128].

D. Peine recommandée par les parties

79. Dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, le Procureur s'était engagé à recommander une peine se situant dans une fourchette de 6 à 14 ans d'emprisonnement[129]. Lors de l'audience consacrée à la détermination de la peine, il a modifié cette fourchette et proposé que la peine de Joseph Serugendo soit plutôt comprise entre 6 et 10 ans, compte tenu de la coopération substantielle que celui-ci lui avait apportée jusque-là[130].

80. Les deux parties reconnaissent qu'aux termes de l'article 62 bis (B) du Règlement, la Chambre de première instance n'est pas liée par les recommandations des parties, mais la Chambre d'appel a déjà souligné que les Chambres de première instance doivent dûment tenir compte de la recommandation des parties et motiver leur décision si la peine infligée diffère sensiblement de celle qui a été recommandée[131].

V. Détermination de la peine

A. Gravité des infractions

81. Tous les crimes prévus par le Statut du Tribunal constituent de graves violations du droit international humanitaire[132]. La Chambre de première instance jouit d'une grande liberté d'appréciation lors de la détermination de la peine, quoique cette liberté ne soit pas non illimitée, [123] Loi organique n°40/2000 du 26 janvier 2001 portant création des « Juridictions Gacaca » et organisation de poursuites des infractions constitutives du crime de génocide ou de crimes contre l'humanité, commises entre le 1er octobre 1990 et le 31 décembre 1994, Journal Officiel de la République rwandaise, 40e année, n°6, 15 mars 2001 (« ci-après dénommée la Loi organique du 26 janvier 2001 »).

[129] Accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, par. 59. Le Procureur s'était aussi engagé à recommander expressément une peine comprise dans cette fourchette si l'accusé coopère de façon substantielle avec lui (ibid., par. 60).

[130] Voir le mémoire du Procureur intitulé The Prosecutor's Final Pre-Sentencing Brief, par. 5.

puisqu'elle est tenue d'individualiser les peines pour qu'elles correspondent à la situation personnelle de chaque accusé et reflète la gravité des crimes dont l'accusé a été reconnu coupable[133].

82. Statuant sur la question de la peine appropriée, la Chambre d'appel a déclaré que lorsque des personnes semblables se trouvent dans des situations semblables, il faut leur infliger des peines comparables. Elle a cependant aussi relevé que ce principe comportait par essence des limites, car « [i]l existe dans chaque affaire un grand nombre de variables allant du nombre et de la gravité des crimes à la situation de l'accusé »[134].

83. En vertu de l'article 6 (1) du Statut, la Chambre a déclaré Serugendo coupable de génocide et de persécution constitutive de crime contre l'humanité à raison du rôle d'encadreur qu'il avait joué au sein de la RTLM. Dans la jurisprudence du Tribunal, l'auteur principal d'un crime encourt généralement une peine plus sévère que celle du complice[135]. Toutefois cela ne revient pas à dire que l'emprisonnement à vie est la seule peine qu'il y a lieu d'infliger aux auteurs principaux du crime de génocide et de crimes contre l'humanité[136]. Le Tribunal réserve généralement, la peine d'emprisonnement à vie aux personnes qui ont planifié ou ordonné des atrocités et à celles qui ont participé à la perpétration des crimes considérés avec un zèle ou un sadisme particuliers[137]. Au demeurant, les délinquants condamnés aux peines les plus sévères sont presque toujours de hauts responsables[138].

84. À l'époque de tous les faits considérés, Serugendo n'exerçait aucune fonction officielle au sein de l'Administration publique, de l'armée ou des formations politiques rwandaises. En outre, il n'a personnellement diffusé aucun message antitutsi au cours de la période visée. Cependant, ses fonctions techniques et son rôle d'encadreur étaient des éléments nécessaires pour que la RTLM puisse continuer à diffuser des messages de cette nature.

85. Malgré la gravité des crimes de Serugendo, la Chambre n'est pas convaincue qu'il mérite la peine la plus sévère prévue par le Statut. La Chambre s'inspire à cet égard de certaines affaires dans lesquelles des accusés reconnus coupables de participation directe au génocide et à des crimes contre l'humanité n'ont pas été condamnés à des peines d'emprisonnement à vie.

86. Dans l'affaire Semanza, la Chambre d'appel a jugé que l'accusé méritait une peine d'emprisonnement de 25 ans pour avoir directement perpétré le génocide et l'extermination dans un lieu de massacre[139]. Ancien bourgmestre, Semanza était un député nouvellement désigné qui avait de l'influence dans la localité où ses crimes ont été commis[140]. Dans l'affaire Gacumbtsi, la Chambre de première instance a estimé que si elle condamnait l'accusé à une peine unique de 30 ans d'emprisonnement, celle-ci mettrait suffisamment en évidence les buts que le Tribunal assigne à la [136] Voir, par exemple, le jugement Ntakirutimana, par. 791 à 793, 832 à 834, 908 et 909 ainsi que 924 (où l'accusé est condamné à une peine d'emprisonnement de 25 ans pour avoir personnellement participé à la perpétration de ces crimes).

[137] Jugement Muhimana, par. 604 à 616 (l'accusé n'était que conseiller, mais la Chambre y relate la manière particulièrement atroce dont il a personnellement violé, tué, mutilé et humilié ses victimes) ; jugement Niyitegeka, par. 486 ; arrêt Musema, par. 383 (qui relève que les meneurs et les organisateurs d'un conflit donné doivent encourir une plus grande responsabilité, sous réserve du fait que la gravité de l'infraction est le principal élément à prendre en considération à l'occasion du choix d'une peine).
[138] Des peines d'emprisonnement à vie ont été infligées à de hauts responsables de l'Administration publique dans le jugement : Ndindabahazi, par. 505, 508 et 511 (Ministre des finances) ; le jugement Niyitegeka, par. 499 et 502 (Ministre de l'information) ; le jugement Kamuhanda, par. 6, 764 et 770 (Ministre de l'enseignement supérieur et de la recherche scientifique) et le jugement Kambanda, par. 44, 61 et 62 (Premier Ministre). Des peines d'emprisonnement à vie ont aussi été infligées à des responsables de rang inférieur ainsi qu'à des personnes qui n'occupaient pas de poste dans l'appareil de l'État. Voir, par exemple, le jugement Musema, par. 999 à 1008 (influent directeur d'une usine de thé qui exerçait un contrôle sur des tueurs) ; et le jugement Rutaganda, par. 466 à 473 (deuxième vice-président national des Interahamwe).

[140] Jugement Semanza, par. 303, 304 et 573.

peine en matière de génocide et d'extermination constitutive de crime contre l'humanité[141]. Pour tirer cette conclusion, la Chambre de première instance a relevé que l'accusé, bourgmestre à l'époque des faits qui lui étaient imputés, n'avait pas participé pendant longtemps à l'organisation des faits survenus dans sa commune. Dans l'affaire Ruzindana, la Chambre d'appel a confirmé la peine de 25 ans d'emprisonnement infligée à l'accusé pour génocide, au motif qu'il avait contribué à la réalisation d'un but ou dessein commun, notamment en mutilant et en humiliant sa victime[142].

87. Ayant examiné les usages suivis par le Tribunal et le TPIY en matière de détermination de la peine, la Chambre constate que les auteurs matériels ou les coauteurs reconnus coupables de persécution constitutive de crime contre l'humanité ont jusqu'à présent été condamnés à des peines allant de cinq ans d'emprisonnement à l'emprisonnement à vie[143]. Les personnes reconnues coupables de formes secondaires de participation sont généralement condamnées à des peines moins sévères[144].

B. Situation personnelle et circonstances aggravantes et atténuantes

88. La Chambre tiendra compte de la situation personnelle de Serugendo ainsi que des circonstances aggravantes et atténuantes.

89. Dans l'ensemble, la Chambre convient avec le Procureur que la peine maximale doit être réservée aux cas les plus graves dans chaque espèce de crime et qu'elle doit prendre en considération la gamme de cas effectivement rencontrée dans la pratique[145]. En outre, il convient en général de ne pas retenir la peine maximale lorsqu'un accusé a plaidé coupable. La Chambre souligne à nouveau qu'une contrepartie doit être accordée aux personnes qui ont avoué leurs crimes pour encourager d'autres individus à se manifester. Par ailleurs, la reconnaissance de culpabilité de Serugendo peut contribuer à la réconciliation nationale au Rwanda[146].

90. Parmi les circonstances aggravantes, la Chambre relève la fonction d'encadreur que Serugendo exerçait au sein de la RTLM. En raison de l'influence que lui procurait cette fonction, les autres employés suivaient probablement son exemple[147]. Il va de soi que le nombre des victimes de la campagne d'incitation au génocide et de persécution menée à l'époque constitue une autre circonstance aggravante. Serugendo a joué un rôle actif en ce qu'il veillait au bon fonctionnement de la station de radio.

91. Malgré la gravité des crimes commis par l'accusé et sa fonction officielle, la Chambre estime qu'il convient de réduire sensiblement sa peine, compte tenu de sa reconnaissance de culpabilité assortie de remords publiquement exprimés et de la coopération substantielle qu'il a fournie au Procureur. Sa situation familiale, la bonne moralité qu'il avait avant les faits incriminés, le fait que son casier judiciaire est vierge et son âge sont aussi des circonstances atténuantes, mais revêtent une importance beaucoup plus faible.

[141] Jugement Gacumbitsi, par. 334, 345, 352, 353 et 356. L'accusé Gacumbitsi a été aussi reconnu coupable de viol et la Chambre de première instance a déclaré que la manière « particulièrement atroce » dont certains des viols considérés avaient été commis constituait une circonstance aggravante (ibid., par. 345).

[143] Jugement Nahimana et consorts, par. 1106 et 1108 ; jugement Ruggiu ; arrêt Kvočka, par. 757.

[144] Vincent Rutaganira a été condamné à six ans de prison pour avoir été par omission complice d'extermination constitutive de crime contre l'humanité (jugement Rutaganira, par. 40) ; Élizaphan Ntakirutimana a été condamné à une peine d'emprisonnement de dix ans pour avoir aidé et encouragé à commettre le génocide [jugement Ntakirutimana, par. 790 et 921 ; cette peine a été confirmée par la Chambre d'appel (arrêt Ntakirutimana, par. 570)] et Laurent Semanza a été condamné à huit ans d'emprisonnement pour incitation à l'assassinat de six personnes, constitutif de crime contre l'humanité *(*jugement Semanza, par. 588).

[145] Mémoire du Procureur relatif à la détermination de la peine, par. 19.

[146] Jugement Rutaganira, par. 146 ; jugement Kambanda, par. 50.

[147] Arrêt Semanza, par. 336.

92. En revanche, la Chambre juge que le mauvais état de santé de Serugendo, ainsi que la diminution de son espérance de vie et la détérioration de la qualité de vie qui en résultent constituent des circonstances atténuantes importantes.

93. Elle relève que l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité assorti de la recommandation formulée au sujet de la peine a été déposé par les deux parties et que le Procureur a recommandé par la suite une fourchette de peines plus faible, compte tenu de la coopération substantielle fournie par Serugendo[148]. La Chambre n'est pas tenue de se conformer à cette recommandation, mais celle-ci l'aide à décider du quantum de la peine à retenir[149]. Elle conclut que l'accusé doit être condamné à la peine la plus douce prévue dans la fourchette recommandée.

94. Cela dit, il est évident que Serugendo n'est pas en mesure de purger sa peine dans les conditions normales de détention. Selon un diagnostic établi récemment, il souffre d'une maladie incurable ; sa santé est très fragile et le pronostic de son médecin est pessimiste. Le Tribunal doit continuer de veiller à ce qu'il reçoive des soins médicaux appropriés, notamment le faire hospitaliser aussi longtemps que nécessaire. Cette obligation doit être consignée dans le dispositif du présent jugement.

C. Déduction du temps passé en détention

95*. Arrêté le 16 septembre 2005, Serugendo est détenu par le Tribunal depuis cette date. En application de l'article 101 (D) du Règlement, il a droit à ce que soit déduit de la durée de sa peine, le temps qu'il a déjà passé en détention qui est de 270 jours au total à la date de publication du présent jugement écrit[150].

VI. Dispositif

96. Par ces motifs, après avoir examiné les éléments de preuve et les arguments présentés par les parties, la CHAMBRE CONDAMNE Joseph Serugendo à une peine unique de

SIX ANS D'EMPRISONNEMENT ;

ORDONNE au Greffe de veiller à ce que Joseph Serugendo continue de recevoir des soins médicaux appropriés, notamment de le faire hospitaliser aussi longtemps que nécessaire.

En application de l'article 101 (D) du Règlement, le temps que Serugendo a déjà passé en détention sera déduit de la durée de sa peine. D'après les calculs de la Chambre, ce temps est de 270 jours.

Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States, between 1 January 1994 and 31 December 1994 ("Tribunal") and Pre-Appeal Judge in this case,[1]

BEING SEIZED OF "Requête en extrême urgence de la défense en vue d'obtenir un report de délai pour répondre au mémoire en appel du procureur" filed on 12 June 2006, in which Aloys Simba ("Respondent") requests that the time-limit to respond to the Prosecutor's Appellant's Brief filed on 27 March 2006 ("Prosecution Appeal Brief"), be extended until 40 days after the Respondent files his Appeal Brief;

NOTING that the Prosecution has no objection to the Request;[2]

NOTING that so far the Respondent has been granted several extensions of time to file his submissions on appeal on the ground that he is entitled to receive French translations of various documents;[3]

NOTING that according to these previous decisions,[4] the Respondent is allowed to file:

(i) his Notice of Appeal no later than 30 days after the filing of the French translation of the Trial Judgement;[5]

(ii) his response to the Prosecution Appeal Brief within 40 days of the date of receipt of the French translation of the Prosecution Appeal Brief and its Corrigendum;[6]

NOTING that the French translation of the Motion for Variation was filed on the 19 April 2006, but was only served to the Respondent on the 11 June 2006,[8] and that the Respondent filed his Response to this Motion for Variation on 14 June 2006;[9]

NOTING that the late service of the French translation of the Motion for Variation has delayed the decision relating to the Motion for Variation;

RECALLING that pursuant to Rule 111 of the Rules an appellant shall file his Appeal Brief within 75 days of the filing of his Notice of Appeal;

RECALLING that pursuant to Rule 112 of the Rules the Respondent has 40 days to respond to the Prosecution Appeal Brief;

CONSIDERING that the Respondent submits that strict compliance with these time limits would cause overlaps which would make it impossible for the defence to avail itself of the respective time limits of 75 days and 40 days within which to accomplish each of the two tasks referred to above and that this overlap will undermine the rights of the Respondent as guaranteed by Article 20 of the Statute of the Tribunal;

CONSIDERING that the said deadlines were extended pursuant to the Respondent's request;[10]

CONSIDERING FURTHER that arguments regarding workload do not by themselves constitute good cause,[11] since this workload is common to any counsel's office;

CONSIDERING however that the outcome of the pending Motion for Variation may have a bearing on the substance of the response to the Prosecution Appeal Brief;

FINDING therefore that good cause exists justifying a further extension of time limit;

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS,

GRANT the Request in part, and allow the Respondent to file the Response to the Prosecution Appeal Brief no later than 40 days from the date of service to the Respondent of the French translation of the decision on the Motion for Variation;

AND REMIND the Respondent of the time-limits for the filing of the Respondent's submissions:

82. The Appeals Chamber of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States, between 1 January and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively) is seized of the Prosecutor's Motion for Variation of Notice of Appeal Pursuant to Rule 108 ("Motion for Variation"), filed on 27 March 2006.[1] The Prosecutor seeks leave to amend its Notice of Appeal in accordance with Rule 108 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunal ("the Rules").

83. The Trial Chamber judgement in the case against Aloys Simba was issued on 13 December 2005.[2] The Prosecutor filed its original Notice of Appeal ("Notice of Appeal") on 12 January 2006, which contained two grounds of appeal.[3] Under Ground 1, the Prosecutor argues that the Trial Chamber erred in fact and in law by failing to find the Appellant criminally responsible for his participation in the Cyanika Parish Massacre.[4] According to the Prosecutor, the Trial Chamber erred in holding that it was necessary to prove the Appellant was physically present at Cyanika Parish in order to hold him responsible for this massacre "by virtue of his participation in a Joint Criminal Enterprise with a common purpose to kill Tutsi at [three] massacres sites, namely, Murambi Technical School, Kaduha Parish, and Cyanika Parish".[5] Ground 2 states that the Trial Chamber erred in law by imposing a sentence of 25 years, which the Prosecutor argues is "manifestly unfit" and should be increased to life imprisonment given various factors such as the gravity of the crimes and the individual circumstances.[6]

Arguments of the Parties

84. The Motion for Variation seeks to amend both Grounds 1 and 2.[7] In relation to Ground 1, the Prosecutor seeks to provide "clarification and better notice by identifying as a distinct error of law" the Trial Chamber's alleged misapplication of the mens rea standard for the first category of joint criminal enterprise.[8] The Prosecutor states that the Trial Chamber required proof that Aloys Simba "shared the common purpose" whereas the requisite standard according to the Prosecutor is "the intent to further the common purpose, this being the shared intent on the part of all co-perpetrators, which is different from sharing the common purpose."[9] The Prosecutor submits that this additional error of law was identified only upon the preparation of its Appellant's brief and "is influenced by and derives from the original errors of facts and law listed" in the Notice of Appeal.[10] In relation to Ground 2, the Prosecutor asserts, again, that the proposed variation provides clarification and better notice, this time in relation to the alleged errors of the Trial Chamber in determining the sentence, by specifying that the Trial Chamber "erred by not considering Rwanda's sentencing practice".[11] The Prosecutor argues that the Notice of Appeal, by using the term "inter alia" listed "without exhaustion the errors committed by the Trial Chamber" in this respect.[12] The Prosecutor points out that it anticipated the need to make amendments to the Notice of Appeal by referring to "[s]uch other grounds of appeal as this Chamber may authorize […]".[13]

85. On 12 June 2006, Aloys Simba filed his Response.[14] He opposes the Motion for Variation, arguing that, pursuant to Rule 108 of the Rules, it should have filed within thirty days from the issuing of the Judgement. In its Reply,[15] the Prosecutor argues that the Respondent misread Rule 108 and that the Motion for Variation was timely as it was filed on the same day as the Appellant's Brief.

Discussion

86. Rule 108 of the Rules reads as follows:

> A party seeking to appeal a judgement or sentence shall, not more than thirty days from the date on which the judgement or the sentence was pronounced, file a notice of appeal, setting forth the grounds. The Appellant should also identify the order, decision or ruling challenged with specific reference to the date of its filling, and/or the transcript page, and indicate the substance of the alleged errors and the relief sought. The Appeals Chamber may, on good cause being shown by motion, authorise a variation of the grounds of appeal.

87. As a preliminary matter, the Appeals Chamber notes that contrary to the Defence assertion,[16] a proposed variation to the Notice of Appeal is not bound by the thirty day time-limit which applies to the filing of the Notice of Appeal,[17] although the lateness of a motion for variation of Notice of Appeal can weigh against the appellant, particularly considering the need to avoid delays in the proceedings and prejudice to the other party in the case.[18]

88. The Appeals Chamber may grant a motion to vary the Notice of Appeal upon the showing of "good cause". The concept of "good cause" applies to both good reason for including new or amended grounds in the Notice of Appeal and good reason for failing to include grounds or correctly phrase them in the initial filing of the Notice of Appeal.[19] The assessment of "good cause" is made on a case by case basis[20] and various factors can be taken into account.[21] Most recently, the Appeals Chamber has summarized some of these factors as follows:

> "These have included the fact that the variation is so minor that it does not affect the content of the notice of appeal; the fact that the opposing party would not be prejudiced by the variation or has not objected to it; and the fact that the variation would bring the notice of appeal into conformity with the appeal brief. Where the appellant seeks a substantive amendment broadening the scope of the appeal, "good cause" might also, under some circumstances, be established. The Appeals Chamber notes that it has never established a cumulative list of requirements that must be met each time a substantive amendment is to be granted".[22]

8. In the Motion for Variation, the Prosecutor submits that good cause exists for the Appeals Chamber to accept the two proposed amendments. The Prosecutor makes three arguments common to both proposed amendments, namely that the omissions to the Notice were only discovered during the preparation of the Appellant's Brief; that the proposed amendments are mere clarifications; and that there is no material prejudice as the amendment puts the Notice in conformity with the Appellant's Brief.

9. First, the Prosecutor argues that the omissions in its Notice of Appeal only became apparent during the drafting of its Appellant's Brief.[23] The Appeals Chamber notes that this, in and of itself, cannot constitute good cause. As previously stated by the Appeals Chamber:

> "Obviously, any amendment sought to any notice of appeal is the result of further analysis having been undertaken over the course of time; this fact cannot constitute good case for an amendment taken alone".[24]

Under Rule 108 of the Rules, the parties have the obligation to file a Notice of Appeal setting forth their grounds of appeal not more than thirty days from the date of the Trial Judgement.[25] They are therefore expected to have conducted a comprehensive review of the Judgement within this timeframe. Allowing the Prosecutor to amend its Notice of Appeal simply because it has gained more familiarity with the case in drafting its Appellant's Brief essentially would allow the parties to "restart the appeal process at will."[26]

10. Secondly, the Prosecutor contends that good cause exists to introduce the two new proposed amendments to the Notice of Appeal because they do not seek to provide entirely new grounds of appeal. Rather, according to the Prosecutor, they simply provide clarification to the two grounds in the Notice of Appeal and are necessary "in order to furnish better notice to both the Respondent and the Appeals Chamber of the issues involved."[27] The Appeals Chamber does not agree. Such a justification can only apply to a narrow set of circumstances, such as minor formal modifications.[28] Both amendments go beyond being minor variations that provide mere clarification and are substantive amendments affecting the content of the Notice of Appeal, broadening its scope and, in fact, alleging additional grounds of appeal. The first proposed amendment adds an entire paragraph to the first ground of appeal alleging an additional error of the Trial Chamber, i.e. a legal error in the assessment of mens rea for the first form of joint criminal enterprise. The second proposed amendment invites the Appeals Chamber to consider the sentencing practice of Rwanda, an exercise which could involve a substantial review of the procedures in Rwanda and thus, cannot be considered mere clarification of the initial arguments on sentencing.

Nikolić, Case N°IT-02-60/1-A, Decision on Appellant's Motion to Amend Notice of Appeal, 21 October 2004, p. 3. This may also arise when the opposing party concedes that the proposed amendment was already included in the Original Notice, see The Prosecutor v. Rutaganda, Case N°ICTR-96-3-A, Decision (on Motion to Amend the Appellant's Notice of Appeal), 5 April 2001, p. 6. Cf. The Prosecutor v. Niyitegeka, Case N°ICTR-96-14-A, Decision on Defence Motion for Variation of the Notice of Appeal, 29 January 2004, p. 3.

11. Thirdly, the Prosecutor suggests that the Defence has suffered no material prejudice because the Motion for Variation and the Amended Notice of Appeal were filed on the same day as the Appellant's Brief.[29] While the absence of prejudice for the opposing party is an important factor to be taken into account by the Appeals Chamber when assessing a request to vary grounds of appeal, the Appeals Chamber does not consider that it constitutes good cause in and of itself. The mere fact that an appellant files proposed amendments before or the same day that the appellant's brief is filed is not sufficient to justify a variation of the notice of appeal, in particular when the variation sought consists of the addition of an entirely new error, as in the present case. In this respect, the Appeals Chamber notes that it has previously accepted amendments, which put the notice of appeal in conformity with the appellant's brief only because other factors or specific circumstances existed.[30] In this case, the Prosecutor has identified no such special circumstances. Granting leave to amend a notice of appeal just because the amendment would cause no prejudice would circumvent Rule 108 of the Rules, the time-limits it imposes, and the "good cause" requirement.

12. In the Motion for Variation, the Prosecutor also provides a specific argument for each proposed amendment. Under Ground 1, the Prosecutor argues that the question of the correct mens rea under the first category of joint criminal enterprise falls within the ambit of the original Notice of Appeal which referred to the acquittal of the Accused for the events at Cyanika Parish as he was found not to have been present during the massacres.[31] The original Notice of Appeal referred to paragraph 402 of the Trial Judgement which indeed mentioned the mens rea formula which the Prosecutor disputes,[32] but the Trial Judgement itself does not state that it is citing a mens rea standard.[33] This vague reference in the original Notice of Appeal to a paragraph of the Trial Judgement does not suffice in itself to show that the legal error alleged in the Amended Notice falls within the ambit of the original Ground 1. The Prosecutor has therefore not demonstrated how the paragraph in the Amended Notice is articulating a point allegedly implicit in the original Notice of Appeal.[34]

13. Under the second ground in the Amended Notice concerning the appeal on the sentence, the Prosecutor seeks to include an appeal on the Trial Chamber's alleged failure to consider the sentencing practices in Rwanda.[35] The Prosecutor states that the original Notice of Appeal was not exhaustive of its discussion of the alleged errors of the Trial Chamber, as reflected by the use of the terms "inter alia".[36] The Prosecutor argues that therefore it is permitted to include a reference to sentencing practices in Rwanda in the Amended Notice. However, simply inserting catch-all phrases such as "inter alia" or "[s]uch other grounds of appeal as this Chamber may authorize […]"[37] to provide for any amendments to the Notice of Appeal that an appellant may later seek, does not establish good cause for the Appeals Chamber to authorize those amendments under Rule 108 of the Rules.

Disposition

14. For the foregoing reasons, the Appeals Chamber DISMISSES the Prosecutor's Motion for Variation in its entirety; INFORMS the parties that paragraphs 65 to 74 of the Prosecutor's Appellant's Brief – relating to the intent to further the common purpose – and paragraphs 108 to 114 of that brief – relating to the Rwandan sentencing practice – will be disregarded; FINDS that there is

I.C.T.R.: Appeals Chamber, The Prosecutor v. Simba, Order concerning Aloys Simba's Appellant's Brief, 29 September 2006 (ICTR-2001-76)

1. The Pre-Appeal Judge is, in the present case, being seized of a motion by Aloys Simba (hereinafter the "Appellant") entitled "Requête en extrême urgence de la défense en vue de solliciter exceptionnellement l'interprétation du paragraphe C (1) (a) de la Directive relative à la longueur des mémoires et des requêtes en appel et l'autorisation de dépasser le nombre de mots limité et de transmettre le mémoire d'appel uniquement par courrier express (article 73 du RPP)", filed on 3 October 2006 (hereinafter "3 October 2006 Motion" and "Practice Direction", respectively). On the same day, the Prosecutor filed a Response to this Motion.[1]

[1] Prosecutor's Response to the "Requête en extrême urgence de la défense en vue de solliciter exceptionnellement l'interprétation du paragraphe C (1) (a) de la Directive relative à la longueur des mémoires et des requêtes en appel et

2. On 29 September 2006, the Pre-Appeal Judge issued an order[2] mainly (i) rejecting both the electronic versions and hard copies of the Appellant's Brief filed respectively on 6 and 21 September 2006; (ii) instructing the Appellant to re-file his Appellant's Brief with the Registry of the Tribunal no later than 6 October 2006, in strict compliance with the page and word limits set out in the Practice Direction; (iii) requesting the Registrar to withhold the payment of fees, if claimed, associated with the rejected filings.

3. On 2 October 2006, the Appellant filed his "Extremely Urgent Defence Motion Seeking Review of the Order Concerning Aloys Simba's Appellant's Brief (Rule 73 of the Rules)" ("2 October 2006 Motion"), pending before the Pre-Appeal Judge.

4. In the operative paragraph of the 3 October 2006 Motion, the Appellant requests (i) interpretation of the provisions of Article C (1) (a) of the Practice Direction, in order to specify if the length limitations of an appellant's brief, that is, 100 pages or 30,000 words, must be interpreted as "optional and not cumulative"[3] (hereinafter "First Request"); (ii) exceptional leave to exceed, if necessary, the limit of 300 words per page (hereinafter "Second Request"); (iii) leave to send the Appellant's Brief and its annexes by express mail exclusively, with the dispatch note to the mail agent being proof of the date of dispatch (hereinafter "Third Request"); and (iv) lifting of the sanction imposed by the Order of 29 September 2006 (hereinafter "Fourth Request").

5. There will be no ruling on the Fourth Request, since an identical measure had earlier been requested in the 2 October 2006 Motion pending before the Pre-Appeal Judge. The Appellant's practice of repeating in a second Request a request already made in a previous one that is still pending, is likely to complicate the work of the Appeals Chamber unnecessarily and could, if it were repeated, be considered as an abuse of process necessitating appropriate sanctions.

6. Regarding the First Request, the 29 September 2006 Order has already reiterated the relevant provisions of the Practice Direction on the page and word limits imposed on an appellant's brief.[4] Article C (1) (a) of the Practice Direction which states that "[t]he brief of an appellant on appeal from a final judgement of a Trial Chamber will not exceed 100 pages or 30,000 words" must be read jointly with Articles (A) and (B). Article (A) determines the format for submitting the appellant's brief and Article (B) specifies that "[a]n average page should contain fewer than 300 words".[5] Hence, a reading of the relevant provisions shows that an appellant's brief which contains more than 30,000 words exceeds the authorized limit.[6] Furthermore, the Appellant, enlightened upon reading the Order of 29 September 2006, seems to have quite grasped its exact scope.[7]

7. Regarding the Second Request seeking exceptional leave to exceed "the limit of 300 words per page",[8] the Pre-Appeal Judge reiterates that this is an average number, the relevant limit being 30,000 words. Hence, the Appellant's request must be interpreted as a request to exceed the limit of 30,000 words. The Appellant substantiates this request by raising: his inability to verify the number of words in his fi1ings;[9] the importance of footnotes, a drastic reduction of which could reduce the effectiveness of the Appellant's Brief;[10] the need to comply with Article 4 of the Practice Direction on formal requirements for appeals from judgement (hereinafter "Practice Direction on formal requirements");[11] and his numerous grounds of appeal.[12]

8. The Pre-Appeal Judge reiterates that under paragraph 5 of the Practice Direction, "[a] party must seek authorization in advance from the Appeals Chamber [...] or the Pre-Appeal Judge to exceed the page limits in this Practice Direction and must provide an explanation of the exceptional circumstances that necessitate the oversized filing". The request to exceed page limits filed by the Appellant must, accordingly, be dismissed without any further consideration because of its vagueness, the Appellant having failed to explain how the materials mentioned would constitute exceptional circumstances necessitating an unfettered leave to exceed the word limit authorized by the Practice Direction. Simply asserting that the Appellant must comply with paragraph 4 of the Practice Direction on Formal Requirements and that the Notice of Appeal contains more than 100 grounds is not sufficient to explain such exceptional circumstances.

9. The Third Request is vague. However, the Pre-Appeal Judge understands that the Appellant is seeking leave to prove that he has met his obligation to re-file his Appellant's Brief no later than 6 October 2006, pursuant to the Order of 29 September 2006, by producing a dispatch note showing that these documents were handed on 6 October 2006 to an express mail agent to send to the Registry of the Tribunal in Arusha, Tanzania. The Pre-Appeal Judge is of the opinion that, given the circumstances described in the Motion,[13] this request is reasonable. However, the Appellant must send to the Registry of the Tribunal an electronic copy of the Appellant's Brief, which is useful in the word count and in facilitating the work of the translation service. The Appellant is requested to send this electronic copy to the Registry of the Tribunal through the usual channel.

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS,

THE APPEALS CHAMBER:

REITERATES the relevant provisions of the Order of 29 September 2006;

ORDERS the Appellant to file, pursuant to the modalities defined above, an Appellant's Brief not exceeding 30,000 words;

GRANTS LEAVE to the Appellant to establish that he has complied with the Order of 29 September 2006 by producing the dispatch note showing that he had handed, no later than October 2006, the signed version of the Appellant's Brief and its annexes to the express mail agent to send to the Registry of the Tribunal in Arusha, Tanzania. The Appellant must lake the necessary measures to ensure that the above-mentioned documents reach the Registry of the Tribunal in Arusha, no later than 13 October 2006.

DIRECTS the Prosecutor to file his Respondent's Brief, if necessary, within 40 days from the date on which the Registry of the Tribunal recorded the filing of the signed version of the Appellant's Brief.

NOTING the "Memoire d'Appel d'Aloys Simba" which was re-filed on 16 October 2006 in accordance with the requirements of the Order that the Appellant's Brief be re-filed in compliance with the Practice Direction;

CONSIDERING that the Appeals Chamber has an inherent discretionary power to reconsider its own previous decisions other than a final judgement if the existence of a clear error of reasoning has been demonstrated or if it is necessary in order to prevent an injustice and that, as a Judge of the Appeals Chamber, I may exercise that power to reconsider decisions issued in my capacity as Pre-Appeal Judge;[4]

CONSIDERING that the explanation proffered in the Motion, that the Appellant's Brief took two months to prepare and that any violation was based upon a misunderstanding of the relevant sections of the Practice Direction,[5] does not meet the standard for reconsideration;

CONSIDERING that the Order only denied the payment of fees associated with the preparation of the rejected filing and does not prevent the Defence from submitting claims for remuneration for work done in the preparation of the validly-filed Appellant's Brief;

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS,

REJECTS the Motion.

NOUS, LIU DAQUN, juge de la Chambre d'appel du Tribunal pénal international chargé de juger les personnes présumées responsables d'actes de génocide ou d'autres violations graves du droit international humanitaire commis sur le territoire du Rwanda et les citoyens rwandais présumés responsables de tels actes ou violations commis sur le territoire d'États voisins entre le 1er janvier et le 31 décembre 1994 (respectivement la « Chambre d'appel » et le « Tribunal »), et juge de la mise en état en appel en l'espèce[1],

VU la Requête en extrême urgence de la Défense en vue d'obtenir un report de délai pour répondre au mémoire en appel du Procureur, déposée le 12 juin 2006, dans laquelle Aloys Simba (« l'intimé ») demande que le délai imparti pour répondre au mémoire en appel que le Procureur a déposé le 27 mars 2006 (« Mémoire en appel du Procureur ») soit étendu jusqu'à 40 jours après le dépôt de son Mémoire d'appel,

[1] Voir le document intitulé Order Appointing a Pre-Appeal Judge, 24 janvier 2006.

ATTENDU que le Procureur ne s'oppose pas à la Requête[2],

ATTENDU qu'à ce jour l'intimé s'est vu accorder plusieurs reports de délais pour déposer ses écritures en appel au motif qu'il a le droit de recevoir les versions françaises des différents documents[3],

ATTENDU que, conformément à ces décisions antérieures[4], l'intimé est autorisé à déposer :

(i) son acte d'appel au plus tard 30 jours après le dépôt de la version française du jugement[5];

(ii) sa réponse au Mémoire d'appel du Procureur dans les 40 jours suivant la date de réception de la version française du dit Mémoire et de son rectificatif[6];

ATTENDU qu'un délai supplémentaire avait été également accordé à l'intimé pour déposer sa réponse à la Requête du Procureur en modification de l'acte d'appel conformément à l'article 108 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve, déposée par le Procureur, en version anglaise, le 27 mars 2006 (« Requête en modification »)[7];

ATTENDU que la version française de la Requête en modification a été déposée le 19 avril 2006, mais n'a été communiquée à l'intimé que le 11 juin 2006[8], et que celui-ci a déposé sa réponse à ladite requête le 14 juin 2006[9],

ATTENDU que la notification tardive de la version française de la Requête en modification a retardé la décision y relative,

RAPPELANT qu'aux termes de l'article 111 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve, le mémoire de l'appelant est déposé dans un délai de 75 jours à compter du dépôt de l'acte d'appel,

RAPPELANT qu'aux termes de l'article 112 du Règlement, le mémoire de l'intimé est déposé dans un délai de 40 jours à compter du dépôt du mémoire de l'appelant,

ATTENDU qu'aux termes de l'article 116 du Règlement, la Chambre d'appel peut faire droit à une demande de report de délais si elle considère que des motifs valables le justifient,

ATTENDU que l'intimé soutient que le respect scrupuleux de ces délais risquerait de causer des chevauchements qui ne permettraient pas à la Défense de tirer parti des délais de 75 et 40 jours, respectivement, dans lesquels elle doit s'acquitter de chacune des deux tâches visées ci-dessus et que ces chevauchements nuiraient aux droits de l'intimé tels que garantis par l'article 20 du Statut du Tribunal;

[9] Réponse de la Défense à la Requête du Procureur en modification de l'acte d'appel conformément à l'article 108 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve,

ATTENDU que lesdits délais ont été repoussés conformément à la demande de l'intimé[10],

ATTENDU EN OUTRE que les arguments avancés concernant la charge de travail ne constituent pas en eux-mêmes un motif valable[11], puisqu'il est fréquent pour un conseil d'avoir un tel volume de travail, ATTENDU toutefois que l'issue de la Requête en modification, toujours pendante, pourrait avoir une incidence sur le fond de la réponse au mémoire d'appel du Procureur.

CONSTATANT que dans ces conditions il existe un motif valable justifiant un nouveau report de délai,

PAR CES MOTIFS.

FAISONS DROIT en partie à la demande, et autorisons l'intimé à déposer la réponse au Mémoire d'appel du Procureur au plus tard dans les 40 jours à compter de la date de notification à l'intimé de la version française de la décision relative à la Requête en modification ;

Vidoje Blagojević et Dragan Jokić, Decision on Motions Related to the Pleadings in Dragan Jokić's Appeal, 24 novembre 2005 (IT-02-60) ; Chambre d'appel, Le Procureur c. Vidoje Blagojević et Dragan Jokić, Decision on Motion of Dragan Jokić for Leave to File Third Amended Notice of Appeal Amended Appellate Brief, 26 juin 2006 (IT-02-60)

1. La Chambre d'appel du Tribunal pénal international chargé de juger les personnes présumées responsables d'actes de génocide ou d'autres violations graves du droit international humanitaire commis sur le territoire du Rwanda et les citoyens rwandais présumés responsables de tels actes ou violations commis sur le territoire d'États voisins entre le 1er janvier et le 31 décembre 1994 (la « Chambre d'appel » et le « Tribunal » respectivement) est saisie d'une « Requête du Procureur en modification de l'acte d'appel conformément à l'article 108 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve » (la « Requête en modification »), déposée le 27 mars 2006[1]. Le Procureur y demande l'autorisation de modifier son acte d'appel en vertu de l'article 108 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve du Tribunal (le « Règlement »).

2. La Chambre de première instance a rendu son jugement en l'affaire Simba le 13 décembre 2005[2]. Le 12 janvier 2006, le Procureur a déposé un acte d'appel initial (l'« Acte d'appel ») contenant deux moyens d'appel[3]. Comme premier moyen, il fait valoir que la Chambre de première instance a commis une erreur de fait et de droit en ce qu'elle n'a pas déclaré l'accusé pénalement responsable à raison de sa participation au massacre perpétré à la paroisse de Cyanika[4]. Selon lui, la Chambre de première instance a eu tort de juger que la preuve de la présence physique de l'accusé à la paroisse de Cyanika était une condition nécessaire pour le déclarer responsable de ce massacre à raison de « sa participation à une entreprise criminelle commune ayant pour but commun de tuer les Tutsis aux trois lieux de massacre, à savoir, l'école technique de Murambi, la paroisse de Kaduha et la paroisse de Cyanika »[5]. Selon le deuxième moyen, la Chambre de première instance a commis une erreur de droit en ce qu'elle a prononcé une peine d'emprisonnement de 25 ans qui, estime le Procureur, est « manifestement inappropriée » et devrait être portée à l'emprisonnement à vie compte tenu de diverses circonstances de la cause telles que la gravité des crimes retenus et la situation personnelle de l'accusé[6].

1. Arguments des parties

3. Dans sa requête, le Procureur sollicite l'autorisation de modifier les deux moyens d'appel[7]. S'agissant du premier moyen, il entend donner des précisions sur ses griefs et mieux les cerner en retenant comme erreur de droit distincte le fait que la Chambre de première instance aurait mal appliqué la règle définissant l'élément moral de la première forme d'entreprise criminelle commune[8]. Il reproche à la Chambre de première instance d'avoir exigé la preuve qu'Aloys Simba avait « partagé […] le dessein commun » alors que l'élément moral requis selon lui est « l'intention de favoriser le projet commun, cette intention étant partagée par l'ensemble des coauteurs, et non celle de partager le dessein commun »[9]. Pour le Procureur, cette erreur de droit supplémentaire qui n'a été découverte que lors de l'élaboration de son mémoire d'appel « découle des erreurs de fait et de droit initiales énumérées » dans l'acte d'appel[10]. S'agissant du deuxième moyen, le Procureur dit encore que la modification envisagée fournit des précisions sur ses griefs et les cerne mieux en ce qui concerne les erreurs qu'aurait commises la Chambre de première instance lors de la détermination de la peine. À ce propos, il précise que la Chambre de première instance « a commis une erreur en ne tenant pas compte de la grille des peines en vigueur au Rwanda »[11]. Le Procureur fait valoir que l'emploi de l'expression « entre autres » dans l'acte d'appel indique qu'il n'y a pas cité toutes les erreurs commises par la Chambre de première instance dans ce domaine[12]. Il souligne qu'il a envisagé la nécessité de modifier l'acte d'appel en y précisant qu'il invoquerait « [t]out autre moyen d'appel que la Chambre pourrait autoriser […][13] ».

4. Le 12 juin 2006, Aloys Simba a déposé sa réponse[14]. Il s'oppose à la Requête en modification au motif que l'article 108 du Règlement faisait obligation au Procureur de la déposer dans les 30 jours suivant le prononcé du Jugement. Dans sa réplique[15], le Procureur fait valoir que l'intimé a mal interprété l'article 108 et que la Requête en modification n'est pas tardive, ayant été déposée le même jour que son mémoire d'appel.

2. Discussion

5. L'article 108 du Règlement est ainsi libellé :

> Une partie qui entend interjeter appel d'un jugement ou d'une sentence doit, dans les trente jours de son prononcé, déposer un acte d'appel exposant ses moyens d'appel. L'appelant précise également l'ordonnance ou la décision attaquée, la date de son dépôt et/ou la page du compte rendu d'audience, la nature des erreurs relevées et la mesure sollicitée. La Chambre d'appel peut, s'il est fait état dans la requête de motifs valables, autoriser une modification des moyens d'appel.

6. Avant d'entrer dans le vif du sujet, la Chambre d'appel fait observer que contrairement aux affirmations de la Défense[16], une partie qui envisage de modifier son acte d'appel n'est pas tenue de le faire dans le délai de 30 jours prescrit pour le dépôt de l'acte d'appel[17], bien que tout retard dans le dépôt de sa requête en modification puisse jouer contre l'appelant, vu en particulier la nécessité de veiller à ce qu'il n'y ait pas de retards dans la procédure et que la partie adverse ne subisse aucun préjudice[18].

7. La Chambre d'appel peut faire droit à une requête en modification de l'acte d'appel si l'appelant invoque des « motifs valables ». L'expression « motifs valables » s'applique non seulement aux raisons qui autorisent l'appelant à inclure de nouveaux moyens dans l'acte d'appel ou à modifier ceux qu'il y a énoncés, mais aussi aux raisons valables qui l'ont empêché au départ d'y inclure certains moyens ou de bien libeller les moyens retenus[19]. C'est au cas par cas que la Chambre détermine si elle est en présence de « motifs valables »[20] et divers éléments d'appréciation peuvent entrer en ligne de compte[21]. La Chambre d'appel a récemment résumé certains de ces éléments comme suit :

[17] La Chambre a admis des modifications apportées à l'acte d'appel à un stade assez avancé de la procédure, notamment lors de l'audience contradictoire (voir Le Procureur c. Jelisić, affaire N°IT-95-14/2-A, Arrêt, 5 juillet 2001, par. 18), et plus d'un an après le dépôt de la version initiale du mémoire de l'appelant (voir Le Procureur c. Nikolić, affaire N°IT-02-60/1-A, Decision on Appellant's Requests to Withdraw Previous Motions, to Revise Appellant's Brief and to Amend Notice of Appeal, 19 juillet 2005, p. 3 et 4).

> « Parmi ces éléments figurent le fait que la modification envisagée est si minime qu'elle n'altère pas le contenu de l'acte d'appel, le fait que la partie adverse n'en pâtirait pas ou ne s'y est pas opposée et le fait que la modification permettrait d'aligner l'acte d'appel sur le mémoire d'appel. Lorsque l'appelant veut apporter une modification de fond tendant à élargir le champ de son recours, on peut aussi considérer dans certaines circonstances que l'existence de « motifs valables » a été établie. La Chambre d'appel relève qu'elle n'a jamais dressé une liste récapitulative des conditions qui doivent être remplies dans chaque cas pour qu'elle accueille une modification de fond[22] [traduction] ».

8. Dans la Requête en modification, le Procureur fait valoir qu'il existe des motifs valables autorisant la Chambre d'appel à accepter les deux modifications envisagées. Il présente trois arguments communs à celles-ci, à savoir que les éléments omis dans l'Acte d'appel n'ont été découverts que lors de l'élaboration de son mémoire d'appel, que les modifications envisagées sont de simples éclaircissements et qu'elles ne causent aucun préjudice important à l'intimé, puisqu'elles permettent d'aligner l'Acte d'appel sur le mémoire d'appel.

9. Premièrement, le Procureur fait valoir que les éléments omis dans son Acte d'appel n'ont été découverts que lors de la rédaction de son mémoire d'appel[23]. La Chambre d'appel relève que ce fait ne saurait constituer en soi un motif valable. À ce propos, elle a déjà déclaré ce qui suit :

> « À n'en pas douter, toute modification qu'une partie souhaite apporter à son acte d'appel est le fruit d'une analyse plus approfondie menée au fil du temps ; pris isolément, ce fait ne saurait constituer un motif valable de nature à légitimer une modification[24] [traduction]. »

L'article 108 du Règlement fait l'obligation aux parties de déposer un acte d'appel exposant leurs moyens d'appel dans les trente jours suivant le prononcé du jugement[25]. Elles sont par conséquent censées avoir étudié tout le jugement pendant cette période. Autoriser le Procureur à modifier son acte d'appel tout simplement parce que sa maîtrise du dossier s'est améliorée lors de la rédaction de son mémoire d'appel reviendrait essentiellement à autoriser les parties à « recommencer la procédure d'appel à volontéhttp://www.ictr.org/FRENCH/cases/Simba/decisions/170806.htm - _ftn26#_ftn26 »[26] [traduction].

10. Deuxièmement, le Procureur fait valoir qu'il existe des motifs valables permettent d'inclure dans l'acte d'appel les deux modifications nouvelles envisagées puisque loin de vouloir donner lieu à des moyens d'appel entièrement nouveaux, elles se bornent, selon le Procureur, à apporter des éclaircissements sur les deux moyens exposés dans de l'acte d'appel et sont nécessaires pour « mieux renseigner l'intimé et la Chambre d'appel sur les questions concernées »[27]. La Chambre d'appel ne partage pas cet avis. L'explication fournie par le Procureur n'est valable que dans quelques cas, par exemple lorsqu'il est question d'apporter des modifications mineures à la forme de l'Acte d'appel[28]. Les deux modifications envisagées sont plus que des retouches mineures tendant à apporter de simples éclaircissements. En réalité, il s'agit de modifications de fond qui altèrent le contenu de l'Acte d'appel, en élargissent le champ et, en fait, contiennent des moyens d'appel supplémentaires. La première ajoute au premier moyen d'appel un paragraphe entier qui reproche une erreur supplémentaire à la Chambre de première instance, à savoir une erreur de droit commise lors de la détermination de l'élément moral de la première forme d'entreprise criminelle commune. La seconde invite la Chambre d'appel à tenir compte de la grille des peines en vigueur au Rwanda, ce qui pourrait entraîner un examen approfondi des règles en vigueur dans ce pays et ne saurait donc être considéré comme de simples éclaircissements sur les arguments initialement avancés au sujet de la détermination de la peine.

11. Troisièmement, le Procureur déclare que la Défense n'a subi aucun préjudice important, la Requête en modification et l'Acte d'appel modifié ayant été déposés le même jour que son mémoire d'appel[29]. Certes, l'absence de préjudice pour la partie adverse est un des éléments importants dont la Chambre d'appel doit tenir compte lors de l'examen d'une demande en modification de moyens d'appel, mais la Chambre n'estime pas que cette absence constitue en soi un motif valable. Le simple fait qu'un appelant ait produit un projet de modification avant le jour où il a déposé son mémoire d'appel ou le même jour ne suffit pas à justifier une modification de l'acte d'appel, surtout lorsque la modification voulue consiste, comme en l'espèce, à ajouter à l'acte d'appel une erreur entièrement nouvelle. La Chambre d'appel relève à cet égard que si elle a déjà accepté des modifications tendant à aligner l'Acte d'appel sur le mémoire d'appel, ce n'était qu'en raison de l'existence d'autres éléments d'appréciation ou de certaines circonstances particulières[30]. En l'espèce, le Procureur n'a invoqué aucune circonstance particulière de cette nature. Autoriser la modification d'un acte d'appel tout simplement parce que celle-ci ne causerait aucun préjudice reviendrait à contourner l'article 108 du Règlement, le délai qu'il prescrit et l'obligation de présenter des « motifs valables ».

12. Dans la Requête en modification, le Procureur présente également un argument spécifique à l'appui de chaque modification envisagée. S'agissant du premier moyen, il soutient que la question de l'élément moral de la première forme d'entreprise criminelle commune s'inscrit dans le champ de l'acte d'appel initial qui a invoqué le fait que l'accusé avait été acquitté des crimes commis à la paroisse de Cyanika, la Chambre de première instance ayant conclu que celui-ci ne s'y trouvait pas pendant les massacres[31]. L'acte d'appel initial fait état du paragraphe 402 du Jugement qui mentionne effectivement l'élément moral mis en question par le Procureur[32], mais le Jugement ne dit pas qu'il s'appuie sur telle ou telle règle définissant l'élément moral de l'infraction[33]. Cette vague allusion à un paragraphe du Jugement dans l'acte d'appel initial ne suffit pas en soi pour établir que l'erreur de droit alléguée dans l'Acte d'appel modifié rentre dans le champ du premier moyen d'appel initial. Il s'ensuit Nikolić*, affaire N°IT-02-60/1-A, Décision relative à la requête de l'appelant aux fins de modification de l'acte d'appel, 21 octobre 2004, p. 3. La Chambre peut également faire droit à la demande de l'appelant si la partie adverse concède que l'acte d'appel initial contenait déjà l'allégation dont la modification est envisagée. que le Procureur n'a pas démontré en quoi le paragraphe de l'Acte d'appel modifié susvisé expose un point qu'il aurait présenté de manière implicite dans l'acte d'appel initial[34].

13. Dans le cadre du deuxième moyen exposé dans l'Acte d'appel modifié qui porte sur la peine, le Procureur entend attaquer le fait que la Chambre de première instance n'aurait pas tenu compte de la grille des peines en vigueur au Rwanda[35]. Il déclare n'avoir pas examiné exhaustivement dans l'acte d'appel initial les erreurs qu'aurait commises la Chambre de première instance, comme le prouve l'emploi de l'expression « entre autres »[36]. Cela étant, il estime avoir le droit d'invoquer dans l'Acte d'appel modifié la grille des peines en vigueur au Rwanda. Quoi qu'il en soit, le simple fait d'avoir employé des expressions fourre-tout telles que « entre autres » ou « [t]out autre moyen d'appel que la Chambre pourrait autoriser »[37] pour ménager la possibilité de solliciter plus tard l'autorisation d'apporter des modifications à l'acte d'appel ne constitue pas un motif valable permettant à la Chambre d'appel d'autoriser ces modifications sur le fondement de l'article 108 du Règlement.

3. Dispositifs

14. Par ces motifs, la Chambre d'appel REJETTE la Requête en modification dans sa totalité, INFORME les parties qu'elle ne tiendra pas compte des paragraphes 65 à 74 du mémoire d'appel du Procureur (relatifs à l'intention de favoriser la réalisation du dessein commun) ni des paragraphes 108 à 114 dudit mémoire (relatifs à la grille des peines en vigueur au Rwanda), DIT qu'il n'est pas nécessaire que le Procureur dépose un nouveau mémoire d'appel et CONFIRME les délais de dépôt des écritures fixés par le juge de la mise en état en appel[38].

VU la requête du Procureur intitulée « Prosecutor's Urgent Motion Objecting to 'Mémoire d'appel de la Défense' and Annexes, as filed on 21 September 2006 and 18 September 2006, Respectively », déposée le 27 septembre 2006 (la « seconde requête du Procureur »);

RAPPELANT qu'aux termes de l'article 108 bis (B) du Règlement de procédure et de preuve du Tribunal (le « Règlement »), le juge de la mise en état en appel « s'assure que la procédure ne prend aucun retard injustifié et prend toutes les mesures relatives aux questions de procédure, y compris des décisions, ordonnances et directives, afin que l'affaire soit en état pour une procédure équitable et rapide »;

RAPPELANT qu'aux termes de la Directive pratique relative à la longueur des mémoires et des requêtes en appel (la « Directive pratique »), « [l]e mémoire d'un appelant, dans le cadre de l'appel

contre le jugement final d'une Chambre de première instance, n'excède pas 100 pages ou 30 000 mots » et « une page moyenne ne doit pas dépasser 300 mots » [1] ;

RAPPELANT EGALEMENT qu'aux termes du paragraphe 5 de la Directive pratique, « Une partie doit demander l'autorisation de la Chambre d'appel […] ou du Juge de la mise en état en appel d'outrepasser les limites fixées dans la présente Directive pratique et expliquer les circonstances exceptionnelles qui justifient le dépôt d'une écriture plus longue »;

ATTENDU que la version électronique du Mémoire d'appel comporte 125 pages, à l'exclusion de la table des matières, de la liste des sources, du glossaire et des annexes, tandis que la version papier du Mémoire d'appel est de 100 pages;

ATTENDU que chacune des écritures excède au total 40 000 mots, et que chacune des pages de la version papier du Mémoire d'appel dépasse en moyenne 400 mots;

ATTENDU que la Défense n'a pas déposé de requête tendant à obtenir l'autorisation de la Chambre d'appel ou du juge de la mise en état en appel d'outrepasser le nombre de pages limite pour son Mémoire d'appel et n'a invoqué aucun motif valable justifiant le dépôt d'une écriture aussi longue;

ATTENDU de surcroît que la Défense n'a donné aucune explication justifiant le dépôt sous le sceau de la confidentialité des versions électronique et papier du Mémoire d'appel et de leurs annexes respectives;

CONSTATANT que les versions électronique et papier du Mémoire d'appel n'ont pas été déposées en conformité avec la Directive pratique et qu'elles sont donc invalides;

CONSIDÉRANT que la présente ordonnance ne portera nullement préjudice à la Défense;

CONSTATANT que le dépôt par la Défense de deux versions différentes du Mémoire d'appel, qui dépassent la longueur prescrite, constitue un abus de procédure devant être sanctionné, en application de l'article 73 (F) du Règlement, par le non paiement des honoraires relatifs aux écritures déposées abusivement;

PAR CES MOTIFS,

REJETTONS la version électronique du Mémoire d'appel et la version papier du Mémoire d'appel;

ORDONNONS à la Défense de déposer de nouveau son Mémoire d'appel auprès du Greffe le 6 octobre 2006 au plus tard;

ORDONNONS à la Défense de se conformer rigoureusement aux nombres de pages et de mots limites que prescrit la Directive pratique;

AUTORISONS la Défense, si elle établit que l'intérêt de la justice le commande, à déposer simultanément une version confidentielle et une version publique caviardée de son Mémoire d'appel;

ENJOIGNONS au Procureur de déposer son Mémoire de l'intimé, le cas échéant, dans les 40 jours suivant le nouveau dépôt par la Défense de son Mémoire d'appel;

DÉCLARONS sans objet les première et seconde requêtes du Procureur; et

T.P.I.R. : Chambre d'appel, Le Procureur c. Aloys Simba, Ordonnance relative au Mémoire d'appel de Simba, 29 Septembre 2006 (ICTR-01-76)

89. Le Juge de la mise en état en appel dans la présente affaire est saisi d'une requête d'Aloys Simba (« l'Appelant ») intitulée « Requête en extrême urgence de la défense en vue de solliciter exceptionnellement l'interprétation du paragraphe C (1) (a) de la Directive relative à la longueur des mémoires et des requêtes en appel et l'autorisation de dépasser le nombre de mots limite et de transmettre le mémoire d'appel uniquement par courrier express (article 73 du RPP) », déposée le 3 octobre 2006 (« Requête du 3 octobre 2006» et « Directive pratique », respectivement). Le même jour, le Procureur a déposé une réponse à cette requête. [1]

[1] Prosecutor's Response to « Requête en extrême urgence de la défense en vue de solliciter exceptionnellement l'interprétation du paragraphe (C) (1) (a) de la Directive relative à la longueur des mémoires et des requêtes en appel et

90. Le 29 Septembre 2006, le Juge de la mise en état en appel délivrait une ordonnance[2] par laquelle, principalement, il (i) rejetait les versions électronique et papier du Mémoire d'appel de l'Appelant déposées respectivement les 6 et 21 septembre 2006 ; (ii) ordonnait à l'Appelant de déposer, à nouveau, son Mémoire d'appel auprès du Greffe du Tribunal le 6 octobre 2006, au plus tard, tout en se conformant strictement aux limites de pages et de mots fixées dans la Directive pratique ; (iii) enjoignait au Greffier de refuser le paiement des honoraires qui seraient réclamés au titre des écritures rejetées.

91. Le 2 octobre 2006, l'Appelant déposait une « Requête en extrême urgence de la défense en vue de solliciter le réexamen de l'Ordonnance relative au Mémoire d'appel de Simba (Article 73 du RPP) » (« Requête du 2 octobre 2006 »), actuellement pendante devant le Juge de la mise en état en appel.

92. Aux termes du dispositif de la Requête du 3 octobre 2006, l'Appelant sollicite (i) l'interprétation des termes de l'article C (1) (a) de la Directive pratique, afin de préciser si les limites fixées pour la longueur d'un mémoire de l'appelant, soit 100 pages ou 30.000 mots, doivent se lire « cumulativement ou alternativement »[3] (« Première demande »); (ii) l'autorisation exceptionnelle de dépasser, au besoin, la limite de 300 mots par page (« Deuxième demande ») ; (iii) l'autorisation de transmettre le mémoire d'appel et ses annexes par courrier express uniquement, le bordereau de remise du courrier à l'opérateur chargé de l'expédition devant faire foi de la date d'envoi (« Troisième demande »); et (iv) la levée de la sanction imposée par l'Ordonnance du 29 septembre 2006 (« Quatrième demande »).

93. Il ne sera pas statué sur la Quatrième demande, une mesure identique ayant été auparavant sollicitée dans la Requête du 2 octobre 2006 qui est actuellement pendante devant le Juge de la mise en état en appel. La pratique consistant, pour l'Appelant, à réitérer dans une seconde requête une demande déjà formulée dans une requête précédente et qui est toujours pendante, est de nature à compliquer inutilement le travail de la Chambre d'appel et pourrait, si elle devait se renouveler, être considérée comme un abus de procédure appelant des sanctions appropriées.

94. S'agissant de la Première demande, l'Ordonnance du 29 septembre 2006 a déjà rappelé les dispositions pertinentes de la Directive pratique concernant les limites de pages et de mots imposées pour le mémoire d'un appelant[4]. L'article C (1) (a) de la Directive pratique, qui fixe que « [l]e mémoire d'un appelant, dans le cadre de l'appel contre le jugement final d'une Chambre de première instance, n'excède pas 100 pages ou 30.000 mots » doit se lire conjointement avec les articles A et B. L'article A détermine le format de présentation du mémoire de l'appelant et l'article B précise qu'« une page moyenne ne doit pas dépasser 300 mots »[5]. Dès lors, la simple lecture des dispositions pertinentes suffit à indiquer qu'un mémoire de l'appelant comportant plus de 30.000 mots excède la limite autorisée[6]. D'ailleurs, l'Appelant, éclairé selon ses propres dires par la lecture de l'Ordonnance du 29 septembre 2006, semble bien en avoir saisi la portée exacte[7].

95. S'agissant de la Deuxième demande visant à obtenir l'autorisation exceptionnelle de dépasser « la limite de 300 mots par page »[8], le Juge de la mise en état en appel rappelle que ce nombre se réfère l'autorisation de dépasser le nombre de mots limite et de transmettre le mémoire d'appel uniquement par courrier express (article 73 du RPP) », deposée le 3 octobre 2006 (« Réponse »).

[5] Directive pratique relative à la longueur des mémoires et des requêtes en appel, 16 septembre 2002. Le paragraphe 4 de cette directive indique les éléments qui entrent ou non dans le calcul du nombre de pages et mots.

[6] Par contre, un mémoire comportant plus de 100 pages mais dont il serait établi par la partie concernée qu'il contient moins de 30.000 mots pourrait être jugé valide.

[7] Requête, par. 6 et 13.

[8] Requête, par. 13.

à une moyenne, la limite pertinente étant celle de 30.000 mots. La demande de l'Appelant doit dés lors s'interpréter comme une demande de dépassement du nombre limite de 30.000 mots. L'Appelant justifie cette demande en évoquant : l'impossibilité dans laquelle il se trouverait de vérifier le nombre de mots de ses écritures[9] ; l'importance des notes de bas pages dont la « réduction drastique » pourrait réduire « l'efficacité » du Mémoire d'appel[10] ; la nécessité de se conformer à l'article 4 de la Directive pratique relative aux conditions formelles applicables au recours en appel contre un jugement (« Directive pratique relative aux conditions formelles »)[11] ; et le nombre élevé de ses moyens d'appel[12].

96. Le Juge de la mise en état en appel rappelle qu'aux termes du paragraphe 5 de la Directive pratique, « [u]ne partie doit demander l'autorisation de la Chambre d'appel […] ou du Juge de la mise en état en appel d'outrepasser les limites fixées dans la présente Directive pratique et expliquer les circonstances exceptionnelles qui justifient le dépôt d'une écriture plus longue ». La demande de dépassement formulée par l'Appelant doit dés lors être rejetée sans examen approfondi en raison de son caractère vague, l'Appelant restant en défaut d'expliquer en quoi les éléments invoqués constitueraient des circonstances exceptionnelles justifiant une autorisation de dépassement illimitée du nombre de mots autorisés par la Directive pratique. La simple affirmation qu'il est nécessaire pour l'Appelant de se conformer au paragraphe 4 de la Directive pratique relative aux conditions formelles et que l'Acte d'appel contient plus de 100 moyens ne pouvant suffire à justifier de telles circonstances exceptionnelles.

97. La Troisième demande manque de clarté. Toutefois, le Juge de la mise en état en appel comprend que l'Appelant souhaite être autorisé à prouver qu'il s'est conformé à son obligation de déposer à nouveau son Mémoire d'appel pour le 6 octobre 2006 au plus tard, comme le prévoit l'Ordonnance du 29 septembre 2006, en produisant un bordereau établissant la remise de ces documents, à la date du 6 octobre 2006, à un opérateur de courrier express chargé de le faire parvenir au Greffe du Tribunal à Arusha (Tanzanie). Le Juge de la mise en état en appel estime, au vu des circonstances décrites dans la Requête[13], que cette demande est raisonnable. Toutefois, il ne convient pas de dispenser l'Appelant d'envoyer au Greffe du Tribunal, le fichier électronique de logiciel de traitement de texte du Mémoire d'appel, ce fichier étant utile tant pour le comptage des mots que pour faciliter le travail du service de traduction. L'Appelant est prié de faire parvenir ce fichier électronique au Greffe du Tribunal selon la procédure habituelle.

PAR CES MOTIFS,

REITERE les dispositions pertinentes de l'Ordonnance du 29 septembre 2006 ;

ORDONNE à l'Appelant de déposer, selon les modalités définies ci-dessous, un Mémoire d'appel n'excédant pas 30.000 mots ;

AUTORISE l'Appelant à établir qu'il s'est conformé à l'Ordonnance du 29 septembre 2006 en produisant le bordereau établissant la remise le 6 octobre 2006, au plus tard, de la version signée du Mémoire d'appel et de ses annexes à l'opérateur de courrier express chargé de les acheminer au Greffe du Tribunal à Arusha (Tanzanie). L'Appelant doit prendre les dispositions qui s'imposent afin que les documents précités parviennent au Greffe du Tribunal à Arusha au plus tard le 13 octobre 2006.

ENJOINT au Procureur de déposer son Mémoire de l'intimé, le cas échéant, dans les 40 jours suivant la date d'enregistrement par le Greffe du Tribunal du dépôt de la version signée du Mémoire d'appel de l'Appelant.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA ("Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber III, composed of Judges Inés Mónica Weinberg de Roca, Presiding, Khalida Rachid Khan, and Lee Gacuiga Muthoga ("Chamber");

BEING SEIZED of the Defence "Requête pour la communication des éléments exculpatoires Re Dossier Prosecutor v. Ephrem Setako et le Procureur v. Théoneste Bagosora et al." filed on 7 December 2005 ("Motion");

CONSIDERING the Prosecutor's Response filed on 12 December 2005; and the Defence Reply filed on 13 December 2005;

CONSIDERING the Statute of the Tribunal ("Statute") and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules") particularly Rule 68 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence;

NOW DECIDES the matters based solely on the written briefs of the Parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of Rules.

1. The Defence requests the disclosure of statements, including either those statements disclosed as supporting material in an unredacted form, or the testimony proving that Ephrem Setako and Théoneste Bagosora were not at Nyundo in Gisenyi préfecture on 7 and 8 April 1994. The Defence further requests that such disclosure is made before 20 December 2005, and that it receive authorization to meet with al1 witnesses in the Ephrem Setako case before the hearing of Witness ATN.

2. The Defence argues that in accordance with Rule 68 of the Rules, it must provide prima facie evidence that the information requested is potentially exculpatory and that it is in the possession of the Prosecutor. The Defence asserts that it has met these two criteria.

3. The Defence submits that such statements or testimony are exculpatory because they contradict Prosecution Witness ATN's statement that Ephrem Setako and Théoneste Bagosora were at Nyundo on 7 and 8 April 1994 attending a meeting at a football field in the presence of the Accused. According to the Defence, the Prosecutor alleged in the Indictment against Ephrem Setako that the Accused was at Ruhengeri on the same dates, while it is common knowledge that Théoneste Bagosora was in Kigali on 7 and 8 April 1994 because of the ongoing war. With regard to the Ephrem Setako case, the Defence adds that Defence counsel for Ephrem Setako has informed it that evidence supporting the allegation of Setako being at Ruhengeri on 7 and 8 April 1994 has been disclosed. Despite having since requested such evidence, the Defence has not yet heard from the Prosecutor.

4. The Prosecutor responds that Witness ATN does not remember the exact date in April 1994, and therefore that any evidence intended to prove that Ephrem Setako and Théoneste Bagosora were not or could not be at Nyundo on 7 and 8 April 1994 cannot be considered exculpatory. The Prosecutor submits that determining what was said can best be explored through cross-examination.

5. The Defence replies reiterating its original arguments.

6. The Chamber notes that Witness ATN expressly said that he could not remember the exact date of the meeting at the football field at Nyundo, Gisenyi préfecture. Since the fact that the meeting took place on 7 or 8 April 1994 is not accurately portrayed in the witness statement, the information requested is not therefore exculpatory. Consequently, the Defence Motion shall be dismissed, and the Chamber need not to consider whether the criteria provided for in Rule 68 are met.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the Motion for disclosure.

RECALLING the Oral Decisions made by the Chamber during the hearings on 5 and 18 October 2005;[1]

[1] T. 5 October 2005, pp. 42-58. T. 18 October 2005, p. 40.

NOW DECIDES the matters solely based on the written briefs of the Parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules").

Introduction and Parties' Arguments

1. On 5 October 2005, Witness APJ testified about two meetings which took place in Giciye in 1992. The Accused was allegedly invited to the first one and took the floor to say that the population had to fight the enemy ("First Meeting"). The second meeting was between the bourgmestre and the conseillers as a follow-up to the First Meeting ("Second Meeting"). The Defence objected to the meetings being admitted into evidence. In the Oral Decision of 5 October 2005, the Chamber allowed evidence only on the First Meeting, where the Accused is alleged to have made a speech, because there is a general allegation in the Amended Indictment, the pre-trial brief, and the witness statement, of meetings that took place in 1994.[2] The Chamber chose to allow evidence from the First Meeting as it is alleged that the Accused was present.

2. On 18 October 2005, Witness SGP testified about a well-known meeting convened by Léon Mugesera which took place on 22 November 1992. The Defence raised an objection which was granted ("Oral Decision of 18 October 2005") ("Impugned Decision") because this meeting was well-known and material to the case and should have been pleaded in the Indictment which the Prosecutor had adequate opportunity to amend at different occasions. The Chamber agreed with the Defence, as the Prosecutor was aware of the existence of this meeting since at least 2001.[3]

3. The Prosecutor now seeks reconsideration of the Chamber's Oral Decision of 18 October 2005 on the ground that this later decision is not consistent with the one of 5 October 2005 and with the jurisprudence of the Tribunal, based on Rule 89 (C) of the Rules. In the alternative, the Prosecutor seeks certification to appeal the Oral Decision of 18 October 2005.

4. The Defence objects to the Motion in its two alternatives.

Deliberations

5. According to the jurisprudence of the Tribunal, a Chamber can reconsider its own Decision (i) when a new fact has been discovered that was not previously known to the Chamber;[4] (ii) where new circumstances have arisen since the filing of the impugned decision that affect the premise of the impugned decision;[5] or (iii) where a party has successfully shown an error of law or that the Chamber has abused its discretion,[6] and an injustice has been occasioned.[7] In the present case, none of those requirements have been met by the Prosecutor in his arguments. As such, the Chamber will not reconsider the Oral Decision of 18 October 2005.

6. Rule 73 (B) of the Rules provides for certification to appeal when (i) the impugned decision involves an issue that would significantly affect (a) the fair and expeditious conduct of the proceedings or (b) the outcome of the trial and (ii) for which, in the opinion of the Trial Chamber, an immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber may materially advance the proceedings.

7. The Chamber, having considered the arguments of the Prosecutor, found that none of those requirements in Rule 73 (B) have been met, and consequently the Motion shall be dismissed.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the Prosecutor's Motion in all respects.

CONSIDERING the Statute of the Tribunal ("Statute") and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules") particularly Rules 46, 66, 68 (D), 73 (F), 75 (A) and 75 (B);

NOW DECIDES the motions based solely on the written briefs of the Parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules.

A. Joinder of the Motions

1. The Chamber is of the view that these motions are interrelated and should be decided together. The Chamber will rule on the motions in the following order: Motion for Withdrawal of Protection, Motion for Sanctions, Defence Motion for Disclosure and Rule 66 (C) Motion, Video-Link Motion, and Motion for Adjudication.

B. Motion for Withdrawal of Protection

2. The Defence requests the Chamber to declare that its Protective Order is no longer applicable to Witness ADE. The Defence argues that although the Tribunal previously prohibited the disclosure of Witness ADE's identity to the public, his name has since been made public due to the negligence of either the Prosecutor, Witness ADE himself or his family, or other sources.

3. The Protective Order shall remain in force. The Chamber is not satisfied that the Defence has shown a change in circumstances which would justify lifting the Protective Order.

C. Motion for Sanctions

4. The Prosecutor submits that the redacted statement taken from Witness ADE was disseminated to parties and posted on the Internet, in violation of the Protective Order. Further, the Defence Motion for Disclosure was filed by the Defence on 6 December 2005 as a public document when it should have been filed as confidential or strictly confidential, since the annexes contained information which identified Witness ADE.

5. The Prosecutor argues that these actions were unnecessary, and served only to identify Witness ADE to the public. The Prosecutor warns that these actions are likely to both compromise their efforts to obtain Witness ADE's testimony and to discourage the cooperation of future witnesses, thus creating the impression that the Tribunal is incapable of protecting witnesses and victims.

6. The Prosecutor requests that the Chamber directs the Defence to change the Defence Motion for Disclosure classification level from "public" to "confidential", to find the unnecessary appendage of the photographs to the Defence Motion for Disclosure an abuse of process, to order the non-payment of fees in relation to the thirty-one (31) pages of appendices, and to warn Defence Counsel that further such acts could result in sanctions as provided for under Rule 46.

7. The Defence replies that the Prosecutor's request for sanctions against it should be dismissed. The Defence argues that the Prosecutor has not identified Defence counsel as being responsible for disclosure of the information on Witness ADE, nor has counsel committed an error that warrants sanctions. The Defence did not ask for sanctions against the Prosecutor for his failure to properly redact some of the statements disclosed.

8. The Chamber deplores the dissemination of Witness ADE's redacted statement to parties in violation of the Protective Order, and the filing of the Defence Motion for Disclosure as a public document when it should have been filed as confidential or strictly confidential. In order to limit disclosure of the sensitive information, the Chamber will order the Registrar to reclassify the filing as confidential. The Chamber will not impose sanctions on Defence counsel, but wishes to remind both parties to exercise due care when filing documents that contain confidential information.

D. Defence Motion for Disclosure and Rule 66 (C) Motion

9. The Defence requests the Chamber to order the disclosure of all benefits obtained by Witness ADE since 1995, and all new information from Witness ADE that was obtained in November 2005.

10. The Defence submits Witness ADE has received various benefits from the Prosecutor. Two requests from the Defence to transmit information concerning these benefits remain unanswered. Given the latter could affect the credibility of Prosecution evidence as envisaged in Rule 68 (A), the Defence requests the disclosure of all benefits and payments rendered to Witness ADE.[10]

11. The Prosecutor responds by referring to its arguments in the Rule 66 (C) Motion filed after the Defence Motion for Disclosure, which requests the Chamber denies such motion. In his motion, the Prosecutor requests that the Chamber grants permission under Rules 66 (C) and 68 (D) not to disclose to the Defence certain information regarding the provision of payments and benefits that he acknowledges having provided for Witness ADE and his family. He is of the view that the aforementioned information does not fall under Rule 68 as being potentially exculpatory. While the Prosecutor agrees that information or material concerning benefits or promises made to witnesses and victims beyond that which is reasonably required should be disclosed as evidence possibly affecting the credibility of the witnesses, the Prosecutor cites case law to support his contention that certain expenditures, such as transportation connected to investigations and hearings, do not fall within Rule

[10] The Prosecutor v. Edouard Karemera et al., Case N°ICTR-98-44-I, Decision on the Defence Motion for Disclosure of Exculpatory Evidence, 7 October 2003, para. 16.

68.[11] The Prosecutor submits that all such payments and benefits were reasonably required: (1) to make it possible to interview Witness ADE on a full-time basis for an extended period and to compensate him for foregoing income to support his family; (2) to provide the family with resources to permit their relocation, security, and societal re-insertion in a new country; and (3) to provide Witness ADE with credit to make telephone calls to assist in further investigations. In other words, all such benefits and payments were provided to Witness ADE and his family to put him in the position he would have been in had he not assisted the Office of the Prosecutor.

12. The Prosecutor further submits that ADE is an insider witness who assumes greater risks by cooperation as he can be viewed as a traitor and can be subject to retribution. This could lead to the witness refusing to testify or withdrawing his cooperation with the Prosecutor.

13. The Prosecutor asserts that, because of the improper filing referred to in the Motion for Sanctions, he is making disclosure to the Accused in a manner that complies with the standards as set forth in the Karemera Decision on Paid Witnesses: the Prosecutor has provided a sworn declaration of an investigator setting forth the subsistence payments, the telephone credits, and notes that funds were expended for one-way travel for members of his family, without including specific amounts or dates, made to Witness ADE. The Prosecutor puts forth that he has also provided the approved budget for the costs of relocation of Witness ADE's family, in conformity with another decision in the Karemera case, which held that the money value of the expenditures for the relocation of a witness and his family were not necessary for determining his credibility.[12] The Prosecutor is also concerned that the disclosure of the amounts could reveal the place of relocation as well. The Prosecutor states that he is ready to hand-deliver to the Judges the unredacted budget when so requested. The Prosecutor further undertakes to submit to the Judges in camera all the details not included in the disclosure to the Defence according to Rules 66 (C) and 68 (D) if the Chamber so directs.

14. In response, the Defence refers to the conditions set out in Rule 68 (D), which, have not been fulfilled in the present case. Specifically, the Prosecutor has not provided the Chamber, sitting in camera, with all the relevant information, as should have been done. Therefore, the Defence submits that the Motion is without legal foundation and should be dismissed.

15. The Prosecutor replies that he has undertaken a thorough search of his records and has provided the Defence with all documents in his possession regarding payments to Witness ADE. The Prosecutor insists that there are no new statements or additional information, nor does it have in its possession any records of phone calls made by Witness ADE. The only exception to this is a record regarding the purchase of phone cards, which should be available to the Judges only.

16. The Prosecutor warns that the recent death of Juvénal Uwilingiyimana, a former senior public official in Rwanda, who was being interviewed by the Prosecutor, underlines the risks faced by cooperating insiders. The Prosecutor alleges that members of Witness ADE's family have been contacted in a manner designed to discourage Witness ADE's testimony.

17. In its reply, the Defence alleges that the information given in the "Prosecutor's Supplemental Information"[13] filed as confidential and inter partes on 15 December 2005 is incomplete. The Defence provides some examples as to what other information it seeks from the Prosecutor.[14] The Defence is of the view that the enormous benefits received by Witness ADE constitute, in and of themselves, a reason to lie and that it is therefore important to determine the payments and benefits in their entirety.

18. The Chamber recalls that, pursuant to Rules 66 (C) and 68 (D), the Prosecutor can be relieved from disclosing such information and materials if its disclosure "may prejudice further or ongoing investigations, or for any other reason may be contrary to the public interest or affect the security interests of any State."

19. The Defence requests the disclosure of two main categories of information. First, the Defence asks that the Prosecutor divulges all information on payments and benefits that Witness ADE has received since 1995. Second, the Defence asks for more detail including all documents, all information on the transfer of the witness's family, all records of telephone calls made by the witness, and other information.

20. The Chamber is of the view that the disclosure of the payments and benefits should be made in the interests of justice. However, the Chamber is also aware that Witness ADE is an insider witness, and thus assumes greater risks by cooperation.

21. The Prosecutor claims that the redacted budget was submitted in conformity with a decision in the aforementioned Karemera case.[15] The Prosecution has provided the Chamber, in camera and ex parte, with an unredacted and comprehensive budget pertaining to Witness ADE.

22. The Chamber wishes to distinguish the circumstances at issue surrounding the payment of benefits from the above Karemera decision. In Karemera, the witness was not receiving payments directly from the Tribunal, but through a witness protection program of a specific State. In other words, the benefits were funded by the Tribunal but paid out and monitored by national authorities.

23. Taking into account all of the information available to it, the Chamber is of the view that the total cost of payments and benefits ought to be disclosed to the Defence in the interests of transparency and justice, because of its quantum, even though "the money value, in any given currency, of the expenditures of the respective government depends on the cost of living in the respective country, on exchange rates and various other external economic factors".[16] Without revealing the location of Witness ADE's family, and without stating the individual costs of services and goods provided and further details, which might undermine the protective measures currently in effect, the Chamber has been made aware that the total cost of all payments and benefits over a two-year period is budgeted at approximately Two Hundred Thousand Dollars ($ 200,000). Consequently, the Prosecutor has to certify this figure considering the amount which has been spent and is expected to be spent. The Chamber highlights, however, that it is the sum total of monies expended and to be expended which needs to be verified and confirmed by the Prosecutor. This verification should not comprise a list of inventory of expenses pertaining to the witness.

24. The Chamber now turns to the remaining issues, such as disclosure of all documents, all information on the transfer of the witness's family, and all records of telephone calls made by the witness. The Chamber recalls that the Defence bears the onus of proof as the party alleging that a violation of Rule 68 has occurred.[17] As stipulated in paragraph 23 above, the Chamber does not consider it necessary for any further documents pertaining to benefits and payments to be disclosed to the Defence.

E. Video-Link Motion

25. The Prosecutor requests that the testimony of Witness ADE be given via video-link. The second Trial session started on 23 January 2006, and Witness ADE is expected to give evidence from 27 February 2006 to 3 March 2006. Relying on Rules 75 (A) and 75 (B), the Prosecutor asserts that hearing the testimony via video-link is necessary to guarantee the safety of Witness ADE.

26. Relying on the jurisprudence of the Tribunal,[18] the Prosecutor submits that Witness ADE's circumstances satisfy the criteria established to allow testimony via video-link. First, the expected testimony is sufficiently important in that Witness ADE will be adducing evidence on all five counts of the Indictment. Second, taking the testimony via video-link is in the interests of justice, as Witness ADE is the only witness able to provide evidence on both the alleged Akazu conspiracy, and on the Accused's actions before and after 6 April 1994. Third, the Prosecutor states that Witness ADE is unwilling to travel to Arusha due to fears for his safety stemming from his position as an Akazu insider witness. Recent events, including the publishing of one of his statements on the Internet, the probable murder of Juvénal Uwilingiyimana, and threats received by his family, have all contributed to his sense of vulnerability. To this end, Witness ADE has signed an agreement with the Prosecutor that he will only testify in ICTR trials on the condition that he will not be required to appear in Arusha. Lastly, the Prosecutor submits that the Accused's right to a fair trial will not be compromised should the request be granted, in that the Prosecutor will undertake to fulfil the criteria established for testimony via video-link.[19]

27. The Defence responds with a different interpretation of the law regarding granting video-link testimony. The Defence sets forth three primary considerations for determining whether a request for testimony to be given via video-link should be granted: the importance of the testimony, the inability or unwillingness of the witness to attend, and whether good reason has been adduced for that inability or unwillingness. Moreover, whether granting the video-link would be in the interests of justice is to be evaluated in the context of the above criteria.

28. The Defence nonetheless provides arguments on each of the Prosecutor's four listed criteria. First, the Defence submits that Witness ADE's testimony will not prove to be important as it is mostly hearsay evidence and that much of his evidence will be inadmissible. Second, regarding the unwillingness of Witness ADE to travel to Arusha, the Defence submits that the agreement made between Witness ADE and the Prosecutor is irregular in that it usurps the role of the Chamber when it purports to assure Witness ADE that his testimony will be taken via video-link. The Defence states that this has the potential to bring the administration of justice into disrepute. The Defence denies that Witness ADE's statement was posted on the Internet, and notes that in any event, Prosecution witnesses who have travelled to Arusha have never been harmed. Third, Defence submits that the right to confront an accuser is a fundamental principle of law, and that the Accused will suffer considerable prejudice if he is unable to confront the witness in open court. Lastly, the Defence characterises the interests of justice as relating to Rwandans' need to heal, a process which requires open debate through testimony in person.

29. The Defence strongly contests the Prosecutor's interpretation of the circumstances surrounding the death of Juvénal Uwilingiyimana, suggesting that the death of this potential witness was not a murder to prevent testimony, but may have been a suicide. The Defence submits that Juvénal Uwilingiyimana was pressured by the Prosecutor to lie and further accuses the Prosecutor of fabricating evidence.

[18] See the "Prosecutor's Confidential Request to Allow Witness ADE to Give Testimony Via Video-Link", filed on 21 December 2005, footnote 2.

[19] The Prosecutor refers to the criteria established in Prosecutor v. Duško Tadić (IT-94-1-T), Decision on the Defence Motion to Summon and Protect Defence Witnesses, and on the Giving of Evidence by Video-Link ("Tadić Decision re Video-Link"), 25 June 1996, para. 22, which has been approved in subsequent cases including Prosecutor v. Delalić et al., Decision to allow Witnesses K, L and M to give their testimony by means of video-link conference, 28 May 1997.

30. In reply, the Prosecutor maintains that the death of Juvénal Uwilingiyimana supports the Prosecutor's request by highlighting the risk faced by insiders who agree to testify. The Prosecutor adds that testimony via video-link would not prevent the Accused from confronting the accuser, but would merely change the medium of communication.

31. The standard for authorizing testimony by video-link was extensively discussed in the Decision on Prosecution Request for Testimony of Witness BT Via Video-Link.[20] Video-link testimony should be ordered when it is in the interests of justice, as elaborated in the jurisprudence of this Tribunal. In particular, the Chamber will consider the importance of the testimony; the inability or unwillingness of the witness to attend; and whether a good reason has been adduced for the inability or unwillingness to attend.[21]

32. The Chamber appreciates the potential importance of Witness ADE's testimony to the Prosecution's case. The Chamber is also satisfied with the Prosecution's arguments that there may be an increased risk to this witness should he travel to Arusha to give his testimony. However, the Chamber also bears in mind that the Defence wishes to confront this witness in person and indeed has the right to confront his accuser. For its part, the Chamber is also concerned as to whether or not it is possible to effectively and accurately assess the testimony and demeanour of a witness who is testifying via video-link. In light of the stated importance of this witness to the Prosecution's case, the Chamber wishes to hear this witness uninterrupted and in person.

33. The Chamber emphasizes that it is a general principle, articulated in Rule 90 (A), that "witnesses shall, in principle, be heard directly by the Chambers". As stated in the Tadić Decision re Video-Link, "the evidentiary value of testimony provided by video-link … is not as weighty as testimony given in the courtroom. Hearing of witnesses by video-link should therefore be avoided as far as possible."[22] The Chamber also notes that, as articulated in the Bagosora Decision re Video-Link, "the testimony of witnesses heard through electronic media runs the risk of being less weighty than that of in-court testimony if the quality of the transmission impairs the Chamber's assessment of the witness."[23] Given the Chamber's desire to prevent poor transmission impairing the testimony of such an important witness, the Chamber is of the opinion that it will benefit from the physical presence of the witness at trial.

34. Consequently, the Chamber finds that it is in the interests of justice to order that all the necessary arrangements to be made for the testimony of Witness ADE to be heard in The Hague, with all parties present, at a date to be determined by the Tribunal, pursuant to Rule 4.

F. Motion for Adjudication

35. The Defence, in its Motion for Adjudication, asks the Chamber to rule on all pending motions before it. As the Chamber has addressed all outstanding motions regarding Witness ADE, there is no need to address this motion.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA ("Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber III, composed of Judges Inés Mónica Weinberg de Roca, presiding, Khalida Rachid Khan, and Lee Gacuiga Muthoga (the "Chamber");

BEING SEIZED of the "Prosecutor's Reply to Defence Letter/Motion/Application on Dr. Alison Des Forges' Report and Qualifications (Under Rule 73 bis (E) of the Rules of Evidence and Procedure)" filed on 27 January 2006 (the "Motion");

CONSIDERING the "Avis Re Rapport d'Expert: Alison Des Forges" filed on 26 January 2006 (the "Defence Notice"), and the Defence Response to the Motion filed on 31 January 2006;

NOW DECIDES the matters solely based on the written briefs of the parties, pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence.

Submissions

1. On 26 January 2006, the Defence filed a Notice before the Trial Chamber, pursuant to Rule 94 bis (B) of the Rules, stating that on 19 January 2006 it had received from the ICTR Court Management Section the French version of the report of Expert Witness Dr. Alison Des Forges and that:

(i) The Defence does not accept the qualification of the witness as an expert;
(ii) The Defence does not accept the contents of the report of the expert witness;
(iii) The Defence wishes to cross-examine the expert witness.

2. The Prosecution submits that the Defence Notice has been filed outside of the 14-day time limit prescribed by Rule 94 bis (B) of the Rules and, therefore, should be dismissed by the Chamber. According to the Prosecution, the French version of the Expert Report was disclosed on 11 October 2005, and not on 19 January 2006, as claimed by the Defence. Thus, the Defence Notice, filed on 26 January 2006, falls outside of the time limit. Furthermore, the Prosecution contends that disclosure in either of the two working languages of the Tribunal provides sufficient notification for the purposes of Rule 94 bis (A) of the Rules, and since the English version of the Expert Report was disclosed on 15 August 2005, the Defence Notice is out of time.

3. The Defence responds that the 14-day disclosure period runs from the date of filing of the Expert Report in the language of the Accused. The Defence further affirms that the report was filed in French on 19 January 2006 and that its Notice, dated 26 January 2006, was filed within the prescribed time limits. The Defence asserts that the Prosecution Motion is therefore ill-founded. Additionally, the Defence argues, should the Chamber find that the Defence did not meet the prescribed deadline, the Prosecution has not proved any prejudice for the late notice and such lateness cannot preclude the Accused from cross-examining the expert witness. The Defence also maintains that denial of cross-examination of the witness, challenging her expertise, will prejudice the rights of the Accused.

Deliberations

4. After verifying the official record, the Chamber observes that the Expert Report was disclosed to the Defence on 15 August 2005 in English and on 11 October 2005 in French. Considering either date of disclosure, the Chamber notes that the Defence Notice, filed on 26 January 2006, did not meet the time deadline under Rule 94 bis (B) of the Rules. As such, the basis of the Defence claim that disclosure was made in French on 19 January 2006 is not clear.

5. Nonetheless, in light of the vital importance of cross-examination to the fairness of the proceedings, the Chamber is not prepared to consider the Defence failure to file a timely Notice as a waiver of the Accused's rights to cross-examine the expert witness on her qualifications and report. Both parties have had sufficient time to prepare for the examination-in-chief and the cross-examination, respectively, of the expert witness, Dr. Des Forges, and no prejudice has been caused to either party by the late filing.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the Prosecution Motion in all respects.

RECALLING the Decision of the Chamber allowing the Prosecution to withdraw witnesses and to add Witness BPP to its witness list;[1]

NOW DECIDES the Motion on the basis of the written briefs of the parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A).

Introduction

1. The trial of Protais Zigiranyirazo began on 3 October 2005. In the two sessions of the Prosecution case,[2] the Chamber heard 19 Prosecution witnesses, including one expert witness. The next and final session for the Prosecution case is scheduled for 5 June 2006.[3] On 19 January 2006, the Chamber granted leave for the Prosecution to amend its witness list to add Witness BPP and to remove other witnesses. The Prosecution now requests the Chamber to authorize that the testimony of Witness BPP be taken via video-link from some locations in Belgium and to seek the cooperation of the Belgian authorities to compel Witness BPP to provide such testimony. Alternatively, the Prosecution requests the Chamber to admit into evidence the written statement of Witness BPP in lieu of her oral testimony pursuant to Rule 92 bis.

2. In response, the Defence requests a stay of proceedings with regard to the Motion maintaining that the Prosecution failed to disclose confidential annexes which are required in order to be fully respond to the arguments. The Prosecution replies that the annexes were sent to the Defence by fax and attaches the proof of service. The Defence subsequently acknowledges receipt of the annexes but maintains that the Prosecution has not substantiated its assertion that the witness is not willing to testify in Arusha. The Defence therefore reiterates its counter-motion for a stay of proceedings until such time as the Prosecution provides further evidence.

3. Accordingly, the Chamber will first consider the Defence Counter-Motion and will then address the Prosecution Motion.

A. Counter-Motion for a Stay of Proceedings

4. The Defence requests that the Prosecution provide proof of Witness BPP's refusal to testify in Arusha. The Defence also requests disclosure of the procès verbal to which the Prosecution referred during the closed session on 7 March 2006. In its reply, the Prosecution states that the procès verbal is the pro justitia statement, dated 17 February 2006, which has been already disclosed to the Defence.

5. The Chamber recalls that counsels appearing in court are under ethical duties, giving rise to a presumption that counsel to perform and to represent matters truthfully. The Chamber also recalls that Witness BPP, in the Statement, dated 25 November 2005, indicated unwillingness to testify in Arusha. The Prosecution asserts that it has unsuccessfully attempted to secure Witness BPP's testimony in Arusha because of the witness' security concerns over the recent death of a Prosecution witness in Belgium. Under these circumstances, the Chamber will rely on the Prosecution's representation, unless evidence to the contrary is provided. The Counter-Motion therefore falls to be denied, and the Chamber will consider the two alternative forms of relief requested by the Prosecution.

B. Testimony by Video-link

6. The Prosecution submits that the testimony of the witness be heard via video-link, as an exceptional measure under Rule 75 (A). According to the Prosecution, the expected evidence of Witness BPP is that, on 7 April 1994, early in the morning, she was in the Presidential residence in Kanombe, known as Kanombe State House, at the same time that the Accused was also present.

7. The Prosecution also asserts that the witness will testify by video-link from Belgium if she is ordered to do so by the Belgian authorities. The Prosecution accordingly submits that, pursuant to Article 28 (2) of the Statute and Rule 58, read in conjunction with United Nations Security Council Resolution 955 (1994), and Belgian law, the Tribunal has the authority to request the Belgian government to assist the Tribunal in the taking of testimony and the production of evidence, by summoning the witness to appear for the video-link testimony.

8. The Defence has not responded to this argument because it claims not to have information regarding the witness' refusal to testify in Arusha.

9. According to established jurisprudence of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and of this Tribunal, protective measures for video-link testimony must be based on the importance of the witness's expected testimony, the inability or the unwillingness of the witness to testify at the courtroom site, and the equitable balance between the interests of justice and the lack of prejudice to the Accused. In Tadic Decision of 25 June 1996, the Trial Chamber recalled the general rule providing for a witness to appear in person, and stated that video-link testimony will be granted only under exceptional circumstances when certain criteria are met.[4] In Delalic et al. Decision of 28 May 1997, another Trial Chamber has adopted the same reason adding the interest of justice and the absence of prejudice to the Accused.[5] This jurisprudence has been followed in Decisions of the Tribunal in several cases.[6]

It cannot be stressed too strongly that the general rule is that a witness must physically be present at the seat of the International Tribunal. The Trial Chamber will, therefore, only allow video-link testimony if certain criteria are met, namely that the testimony of a witness is shown to be sufficiently important to make it unfair to proceed without it and that the witness is unable or unwilling to come to the International Tribunal. […]".

10. In the present case, testimony about the alleged presence of the Accused at Kanombe State House represents important evidence in the case, which is directly related to allegations pleaded in the Indictment. The unwillingness of the witness to testify in Arusha has also been reported by the Prosecution.

11. Considering the allegation that the Accused was present at the Kanombe State House and the Accused's possible alibi defence, it is in the interests of justice that the witness be heard in relation to these events. It is the Chamber's view that this testimony will not prejudice the rights of the Accused because he will have the opportunity to cross-examine the witness and to challenge the evidence.

12. Consequently, the Chamber finds that the Motion for a video-link testimony should be granted. And, accordingly, the Chamber will request the cooperation of the Belgian authorities in securing the appearance of the witness and in providing any technical assistance for a video-link testimony from their country.

C. Admission of Statement of Witness BPP, Pursuant to Rule 92 bis

13. The Prosecution, relying on the Appeals Chamber decision in the Galić case, submits that Witness BPP's written statement: (i) does not go to proving the acts and conduct of the Accused, as charged in the Indictment; (ii) is relevant under Rule 89 (C), as it relates to crimes charged in the Indictment; and (iii) provides critical evidence in relation to the acts and conduct of others at a particular period which is relevant to establishing the state of mind of the Accused. The Prosecution states that the written statement also provides evidence against the anticipated alibi of the Accused in relation to the events at Kanombe State House. The Prosecution further submits that not only does a written statement save judicial time and resources, notably when the witness is not required to appear for cross-examination, but that it causes less disruption to the witness' life than oral testimony.

witness. This is intended to ensure confrontation between the witness and the accused and to enable the Judges to observe the demeanour of the witness when giving evidence. It is, however, well known that video-conferences not only allow the Chambers to hear the testimony of a witness who is unable or unwilling to present their evidence before the Trial Chamber at The Hague, but also allows the Judges to observe the demeanour of the witness whilst giving evidence. Furthermore, and importantly, counsel for the accused can cross-examine the witness and the Judges can put questions to clarify evidence given during testimony. Video-conferencing is, in actual fact, merely an extension of the Trial Chamber to the location of the witness. The accused is therefore neither denied his right to confront the witness, nor does he lose materially from the fact of the physical absence of the witness. It cannot, therefore, be said with any justification that testimony given by video-link conferencing is a violation of the right of the accused to confront the witness. Article 21 (4) (e) is in no sense violated." "17. Testimony by video-link conference is an exception to the general rule. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber will protect against abuse of the grant of the expedient. The Trial Chamber (composed of Judge McDonald, Presiding, with Judges Stephen and Vohrah) has, in the Tadic Decision, stated that testimony by video-link will be allowed only if (a) the testimony of the witness is shown to be sufficiently important to make it unfair to proceed without it, and (b) the witness is unable or unwilling for good reasons to come to the International Tribunal at The Hague (at para. 19). The present Trial Chamber agrees with the findings of that decision and reiterates the position that, because of the particular circumstances of the International Tribunal, 'it is in the interest of justice for the Trial Chamber to be flexible and endeavour to provide the Parties with the opportunity to give evidence by video-link.' (Tadic Decision, at para. 18) The Trial Chamber considers it appropriate to add the additional condition, (c) that the accused will not thereby be prejudiced in the exercise of his right to confront the witness."

Ferdinand Nahimana et al.*, Decision on the Prosecutor's Application to Add Witness X to Its List of Witnesses and for Protective Measures (TC), 14 September 2001 (Para. 35. "It follows from case law, with which the Chamber agrees, that certain conditions must be fulfilled for the video solution to be utilized in the present case. The Chamber is of the opinion that the testimony is sufficiently important, that it will be in the interests of justice to brant the application for a video link solution, and that the Accused will not be prejudiced in the exercise of his right to confront the witness. The crucial question is whether the Witness is unable or unwilling to come to the Tribunal." See also: *The Prosecutor v. 14. The Defence objects to the admission of the written statement of Witness BPP and claims that the testimony relates directly to the acts of the Accused.

15. Having found that the video-link request should be granted, the Chamber is of the view that there is no need to deliberate on the admission of the written statement.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

I. DENIES the Counter-Motion for stay of proceedings;

II. GRANTS the Motion for Witness BPP to testify by video-link from Belgium;

III. REQUESTS the cooperation of the Belgian authorities in the appearance of Witness BPP by video-link from Belgium;

IV. REQUESTS the Registrar (i) to serve this Decision on the Belgian authorities, (ii) to cooperate with the Belgium authorities in its implementation of this Decision, taking into account the overall scheduling for the next and final session of the Prosecution case, and (iii) make the appropriate arrangements for the video-link testimony to be taken at a convenient time during the next trial session.

BEING SEIZED of the Prosecution Urgent and Confidential Application Pursuant to Rules 39, 68 and 75 for an Order for Conditional Disclosure of Witness Statements, filed on 23 March 2006;

CONSIDERING the Defence Response, filed on 28 March 2006;

CONSIDERING the Statute of the Tribunal and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence particularly Rules 39, 68 and 75;

NOW DECIDES the Motion on the basis of the written briefs of the parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules.

Submissions

1. By way of the present application, the Prosecution is requesting protective measures for witnesses whose statements allege the criminal involvement of Witness ADE in the events of 1994. The Prosecutor intends to disclose these statements, unredacted, to the Defence, pursuant to Rule 68 (A). The Prosecution argues that some of these witnesses are protected in other cases before the Tribunal while some others are protected by the Prosecution pursuant to Rule 39.

2. The Prosecution requests two specific protective orders: that the Defence shall (i) notify the Prosecutor of its intent to contact such witnesses or make a written request to the Trial Chamber to contact such witnesses; and (ii) to keep the statements confidential to itself and not to reveal the identities of the witnesses to any person outside of the Defence team, except for the Accused himself who should be directed not to reveal the identities to any other person. The Prosecution also requests to be granted any other or further relief that meets the ends of justice. The Prosecution attaches an affidavit of its Commander of Investigations to support the allegation of risks faced by the witnesses.

3. The Defence, in its response, argues that late disclosure is of little use given the time it actually takes to conduct serious investigations, particularly given that statements with regard to the witness in question were completed in January 2005. The Defence requests the Chamber to reserve the Defence recourse to apply for a remedy due to late disclosure.

4. In order to be able to make proper use of this disclosure, the Defence requests the Chamber to order the Prosecutor to make disclosure to all members of the Defence in their various locations.

5. The Defence further requests that the following be made possible:

(a) that the Defence investigator in Kigali be authorised to meet with the witnesses in question immediately upon recommendation of lead counsel, and before the latter comes to Arusha on 5 May 2006.

(b) that DCDMS be apprised so that sufficient notice is this work programme is provided to the Section and for it to be included in it's consideration of the Defence team's work programme.

(c) that the Chamber's Decision of 25 February 2003 on Protective Measures be extended to apply to the witnesses who are the subject of the instant Motion.

Deliberations

5.* Rule 75 (F) reads as follows:

> (F) Once protective measures have been ordered in respect of a victim or witness in any proceedings before the Tribunal (the "first proceedings"), such protective measures:
> (i) shall continue to have effect mutatis mutandis in any other proceedings before the Tribunal (the "second proceedings") unless and until they are rescinded, varied or augmented in accordance with the procedure set out in this Rule; but
> (ii) shall not prevent the Prosecutor from discharging any disclosure obligation under the Rules in the second proceedings, provided that the Prosecutor notifies the Defence to whom the disclosure is being made of the nature of the protective measures ordered in the first proceedings.

5.* Given the terms set out in Rule 75 (F) (ii), particularly the reference to "any disclosure obligation under the Rules," it is incumbent upon the Prosecutor to fulfil his disclosure obligations under the Rules notwithstanding applicable protective orders, and that upon such disclosure, the party receiving the materials is then bound mutatis mutandis by the terms of the applicable protective measures in accordance with the provisions of Rule 75 (F). The Chamber recalls that according to the jurisprudence of the Tribunal,[1] Rule 75 (F) is intended to create a mechanism for the routine disclosure of closed session testimony.

6. With regard to Rule 39, which deals specifically with protection afforded by the Prosecutor during the conduct of investigations, the Chamber wishes to point out that the measures stipulated in that Rule cannot be equated with the protective measures that are afforded to witnesses by a Chamber. The Prosecutor cannot therefore redact statements to be disclosed to the Defence on the basis of Rule 39 protection.[2]

7. The Chamber is concerned that an application for the protection of these witnesses has been left to this late stage of the proceedings, particularly given how long these statements have actually been in the possession of the Prosecutor. The Prosecutor should have been diligent in its effort to satisfy both its duty to disclose, and to seek protection of its witnesses, earlier.

8. Be that as it may, in the interests of protecting the witnesses in question, and in the interests of justice as a whole, the Chamber deems it appropriate to extend the Protective Measures ordered on 25 February 2003 in this case to these additional witnesses.

9. Considering the imminent testimony of Witness ADE, the documents which are the subject of the present application must be disclosed to the Defence, in keeping with the established practice on the service of confidential documents, and the Accused forthwith.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

EXTENDS the Protection Order of 25 February 2003 to all witnesses whose statements will be disclosed in accordance with this Decision, and who are not subject to any protective order before the Tribunal.

ORDERS the immediate disclosure of all the unredacted witness statements relating to Witness ADE.

NOW DECIDES the Motion on the basis of the written briefs of the parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules.

Submissions

Defence Motion

1. Relying on Rule 89 (C), the Defence requests the Chamber to disallow the testimony of Witness SGM on the basis of irrelevance and incomplete and imprecise disclosure.

2. The Defence alleges that the evidence which Witness SGM is expected to present is irrelevant because it relates to events that occurred outside the Tribunal's temporal jurisdiction and does not directly relate the Accused to any facts alleged in the Indictment.

3. The Defence also argues that disclosure provided by the Prosecution is incomplete and vague, making it impossible for the Defence to adequately prepare its case. While acknowledging that postponement of the hearing is a preferred remedy, the Defence asserts that this is unrealistic, in light of the scheduling for the final phase of the Prosecution case, which begins on 5 June 2006.

Consequently, according to the Defence, the only available remedy at this stage of the proceedings is for the Chamber to disallow the testimony of Witness SGM.

Response

4. In its Response, the Prosecution asserts that the expected testimony of Witness SGM will provide evidence in support of several paragraphs of the Indictment, as indicated in the annex to its pre-trial brief. The Prosecution submits that it has made full and complete disclosure to the Defence.

5. The Prosecution also argues that the Defence has filed unnecessary annexes to its Motion. Invoking Rule 73 (F), the Prosecution requests that the Chamber sanction the Defence for wasting the Tribunal's resources.

Reply

6. The Defence reiterates the arguments in its Motion. In regard to the issue of sanctions, the Defence argues that a Motion should be complete. Therefore, it has filed inter partes correspondence to demonstrate due diligence in its efforts to obtain disclosure, before seizing the Chamber of the issue.

Rejoinder

7. The Prosecution reiterates its call for sanctions under Rule 73 (F) and maintains that the testimony of Witness SGM is relevant to the factual allegations in the Indictment. The Prosecution asserts that the limited temporal jurisdiction of the Tribunal does not bar evidence of entering into a conspiracy before 1994.

Second Reply

8. The Defence replies that material facts relating to events before 1994, which have not been alleged in the Indictment and are unknown to the Defence, should not be admitted into evidence. The Defence reiterates that the disclosed statements of Witness SGM do not relate to allegations in the Indictment concerning events that occurred prior to 1994.

Deliberations

9. The Chamber recalls that in the Prosecution's pre-trial brief, the anticipated evidence of Witness SGM was summarized by the Prosecution as follows: "[SGM] [w]ill testify as the Accused's participation in Rouseau [sic!] Zero ('Zero Network') and as a member of the Akazu." Because this issue is clearly raised in the Indictment, the Chamber finds that the anticipated evidence to be presented by Witness SGM is relevant to the case. In regard to the presentation of evidence, the Chamber reminds the Parties that it is the Prosecution's responsibility to determine how it will prove the counts charged against the Accused in the Indictment.

10. With regard to the issue of disclosure, the Chamber is of the view that the Defence has not specifically indicated in what respects the disclosure is imprecise or incomplete. Consequently, the Chamber does not find that the Prosecution has failed to make full disclosure, pursuant to Rule 66 (A) (ii).

11. The Chamber agrees with the Prosecution that it is unnecessary and is a waste of time and resources to file documents that are already part of the case file. The Chamber disapproves of this practice.

12. Rule 46 (A) provides for a Chamber "after a warning, [to] impose sanctions against a counsel if, in its opinion, his conduct remains offensive or abusive, obstructs the proceedings, or is otherwise contrary to the interests of justice". The Chamber finds that, in addition to including unnecessary documents in the filing, the Defence Motion itself is frivolous and constitutes an abuse of process under Rule 73 (F). However, since this is the first occasion for the Chamber to reprimand the Defence on this matter, the Chamber will not impose sanctions.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER DENIES THE MOTION IN ITS ENTIRETY.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA,

SITTING as Trial Chamber III, composed of Judges Inés Mónica Weinberg de Roca, presiding, Khalida Rachid Khan, and Lee Gacuiga Muthoga;

BEING SEIZED of the "Defence Motion for Disclosure of Voir Dire Evidence", filed on 23 March 2006;

CONSIDERING the "Prosecutor's Response to Defence Motion for Disclosure of Voir Dire Evidence", filed on 28 March 2006, and the Defence "Reply to Prosecutor's Response to Defence Motion for Disclosure of Voir Dire Evidence", filed on 30 March 2006;

NOW DECIDES the Motion on the basis of the written briefs of the parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A).

Introduction: Procedural History of the Accused's Curriculum Vitae

1. The present Motion relates to a voir dire hearing to be held on the admissibility of a hand-written document prepared by the Accused, which is entitled Curriculum Vitae ("CV"). This document was included in a number of records which, on 3 October 2005, the Prosecution tendered as Exhibit P2.[1] On 2 March 2006, the Defence formally raised an objection to the admissibility of the CV. According to the Defence, the CV, being a statement by the Accused, is not admissible in evidence unless certain procedural safeguards have been satisfied – which, the Defence alleges, have not been met.[2] The Prosecution contends that this document, having already been entered into evidence as Exhibit P2, may be referred to by Prosecution witnesses and does not need to be further admitted. Following these exchanges by the parties, the Chamber decided to provisionally admit the document as part of Exhibit P42 and allow reference to it pending a determination of its final status. The Chamber held that a determination on the admissibility of this document will be made following a voir dire hearing.[3]

Submissions of the Parties

Defence Motion

2. The Defence for Protais Zigiranyirazo, in preparation for the voir dire proceedings on the non-admissibility of the entitled Curriculum Vitae, requests the Chamber to order the Prosecution to disclose of the following information:

a. A detailed statement of the evidence to be provided by all voir dire witnesses, in either a written or a signed declaration or a detailed will-say;

b. The dates of all meetings between the Accused and members of the Office of the Prosecutor (OTP) or between the Accused and any intermediary acting between the accused and the OTP;

c. The names of all members of the OTP who met Mr. Zigiranyirazo and all intermediaries acting between the Accused and the OTP;

d. Copies of all notes taken with all times of questioning;

e. Copies of all questions put to the Accused and answers by the Accused;

f. Copies of all documents signed by the Accused.

3. The Defence argues that the information sought is central to the voir dire proceedings and should be provided, under Rule 66 (A) (ii), no later than 60 days prior to trial. However, insofar as the trial has already commenced, the Defence requests the Prosecution to furnish the materials immediately in order to conduct investigations prior to the hearing.

Prosecution Response

4. The Prosecution argues that a voir dire examination is an interlocutory proceeding, to which disclosure obligations, under Rule 66 (A), do not apply. Nevertheless, the Prosecution affirms that it will disclose a summary of the anticipated testimony of the witnesses to be called, as requested by the Defence in paragraph 2 (a) of its Motion cited above.

[1] T. 3 October 2005 p. 26.
[2] T. 2 March 2006 pp. 37-38.
[3] T. 2 March 2006 p. 45.

5. The Prosecution asserts that the other information requested by the Defence, in paragraph 2 (b) through (f) above, is extraneous to the voir dire proceedings on the admissibility of the Accused's CV. The Prosecution also argues that the Defence "chose not to" raise issues, in relation to the other requested information, during cross-examination of the witness, Mr. Zuhdi Janbek, who tendered the Accused's CV as part of the Prosecution Exhibit P2.[4] The Prosecution maintains that no evidence will be led during the voir dire hearing regarding matters raised in paragraphs 2 (b) through (f) above of the Defence Motion and that this hearing is not an appropriate forum for their re-litigation.

6. According to the Prosecution, the provisions of Rule 42 do not apply because the Accused was not a suspect when he "voluntarily prepared and offered his CV to the Prosecutor".[5] The Prosecution also argues that copies of any notes taken by representatives of the OTP, during discussions with the Accused when he was not a suspect, are internal documents which, under Rule 70, are not subject to disclosure.

Defence Reply

7. In its Reply, the Defence argues that, under Rule 66 (A) (ii), disclosure applies to all witnesses that the Prosecution intends to call, whether on direct or voir dire examination.

8. The Defence also argues that the Prosecution has erred in suggesting that the Defence chose not to cross-examine the investigator, Mr. Janbek, about the circumstances under which the OTP received the Accused's hand-written CV. The transcript reveals that, on 4 October 2005, the Defence raised an objection about the introduction of the statement during the testimony of Mr. Janbek, who was not employed by the OTP when the CV was written or received by the Evidence Unit and has no direct knowledge of the document.

Deliberations

Specific Identification of Requested Materials

9. According to established case law, a request for production of documents must be sufficiently specific concerning the nature of the evidence sought and its being in the possession of the addressee of the request.[6] The Chamber considers that identification of the material requested in paragraph 2 (a) of the Defence Motion, in relation to the witnesses to be called, meets these requirements. Although of a general nature, the information sought has been precisely defined, and the Prosecution has affirmed that it will disclose summaries of anticipated witness testimonies.[7] The Chamber therefore considers it unnecessary to order disclosure of item (a): "a detailed statement of the evidence to be provided by all voir dire witnesses".

10. However, the Chamber observes that the Defence has knowledge of the information sought in paragraphs 2 (b) through (f) of its Motion and that this material therefore cannot be subject to disclosure.

[7] Prosecution Response, para. 5.

11. The Chamber observes that disclosure is a tool for ensuring fair trial proceedings and that both parties in the present case have disclosure obligations to assist the Chamber in assessing the admissibility of the CV. Accordingly, the Chamber expects that the Defence will demonstrate any circumstances for the non-admissibility of the document and that the Prosecution will show the chain of custody leading to its receipt of the document.

Rights of Suspects During Investigation

12. In order for the procedural safeguards guaranteed under Rule 42 to be applicable in the present case, the Applicant must show that he was a suspect and that, while such a suspect, he was questioned by the Prosecutor, following which the statement entitled CV was written, and which the Applicant was induced to offer, contrary to his wishes.[8]

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the Defence Motion in its entirety;

NOTIFIES the parties that the voir dire hearing on the admissibility of the Accused's CV will be scheduled directly following the hearing of Prosecution Witnesses ADE, SGM, and BPP.

I.C.T.Y.: Trial Chamber, The Prosecutor v. Duško Tadić, Decision on the Defence Motions to Summon and Protect Defence Witnesses, and on the Giving of Evidence by Video-Link, 25 June 1996 (IT-94-1)

THE PRESIDENT OF THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA,

BEING SEIZED OF a request by Trial Chamber III, in its "Decision on Defence and Prosecution Motions Related to Witness ADE" of 31 January 2006, to authorize the Chamber to sit in The Hague in order to hear the testimony of this witness;

CONSIDERING the Registrar's submissions pursuant Rule 33 (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("the Rules"), filed on 17 February 2006, as well as the Trial Chamber's memorandum of 21 February 2006;

NOTING the Registrar's further submissions pursuant to Rule 33 (B), filed on 24 April 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES THE REQUEST.

Introduction

1. On 31 January 2006, the Trial Chamber denied the Prosecution request that the testimony of Witness ADE be given via video-link, finding it to be in the interests of justice to instead order that all necessary arrangements be made for the testimony of this witness to be heard in The Hague, with all parties present. The Chamber consequently requested the President, pursuant to Rule 4 of the Rules, to authorize the Chamber to sit in The Hague, at a date to be determined in consultation with the Parties and the Registry, in order to hear the testimony of the witness.[1]

2. In submissions of 17 February 2006 to the President, the ICTR Registrar indicated that the Registrar of the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia ("ICTY") had advised that that Tribunal would be unable to accommodate this request due to a lack of courtroom capacity there. The ICTR Registrar also submitted that initial estimates of costs associated with a hearing in The Hague would be prohibitive and involve budgetary problems for the ICTR.

3. Thereafter, the Registry seized the Registrar of the International Criminal Court ("ICC") with a request for the use of a courtroom and related facilities there. The ICC Registrar subsequently agreed to place a courtroom and detention facilities at the disposal of the Tribunal for a period of five days between 5 June and 9 June 2006 for the purposes of hearing the testimony of Witness ADE, on a cost-reimbursement basis. In his submissions of 24 April 2006, the ICTR Registrar estimated the total cost of the ICTR in connection with the hearing in The Hague to be between USD 80,000 and USD 120,000. He also stated that he had made arrangements to identify the necessary budgetary resources to support this operation.

Deliberations

4. Rule 4 states that a Chamber or a Judge may exercise their functions away from the seat of the Tribunal if so authorized by the President in the interests of justice.

5. The Chamber's request under Rule 4 was based on doubts as to the adequacy and quality of video-link testimony as well as concerns that such testimony is incompatible with the right of an accused to confront his accuser.[2]http://www.ictr.org/ENGLISH/cases/Zigiranyirazo/decisions/120506.htm - _ftn2#_ftn2 It is correct that video-link previously risked being less weighty than that of in-court testimony. [3] http://www.ictr.org/ENGLISH/cases/Zigiranyirazo/decisions/120506.htm - _ftn3#_ftn3 However, more recently, many decisions have allowed testimony by video-link, including several important and sensitive witnesses.[4] Experience has shown that electronic transmission can provide a Tadić*, Decision on the Defence Motion to Summon and Protect Witnesses, and on the Giving of Evidence by Video-Link, 25 June 1996, para. 21 ("the evidentiary value of testimony provided by video-link … is not as weighty as testimony given in the courtroom.") See, subsequently, Bagosora, Decision on Prosecution Request for Testimony of Witness BT Via Video-Link (TC), 8 October 2004, para. 15: "the testimony of witnesses heard through electronic media runs the risk of being less weighty than that of in-court testimony if the quality of the transmission impairs the Chamber's assessment of the witness" (emphasis added).

very clear audio and visual image of the witness to the judges and parties in the courtroom and that the ability of the Chamber to assess credibility was not impaired.[5] Video-link therefore remains an important, necessary and reliable resource for the Tribunal.

6. In the present case, the Trial Chamber stressed the increased security risks to Witness ADE in testifying in Arusha and the crucial significance of this witness to the Prosecution case as underlying its wish to hear this witness uninterrupted and in person.[6] In view of this assessment by the Trial Chamber, and the Registrar's conclusion that sufficient funds are currently available, the request for authorization under Rule 4 is granted on an exceptional basis. However, the Registrar also observed that these estimated additional costs are unanticipated and that later in the year there may have to be some restrictions on the budgeted activities of the Tribunal, concluding that it would be difficult to envisage another such operation within present budgetary constraints.[7] http://www.ictr.org/ENGLISH/cases/Zigiranyirazo/decisions/120506.htm - _ftn7#_ftn7 The Chamber is consequently invited to undertake further consultations with the Registry with a view to reducing the fiscal burdens of this authorization to the extent possible.[8]

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE PRESIDENT

GRANTS the request.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA,

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, Presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED of the "Motion Requesting Closed Session Transcripts and Exhibits under Seal with Respect to Protected Witness DM-190", filed by the Zigiranyirazo Defence on 11 April 2006;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 19 April 2006; and the Defence Reply, filed on 21 April 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion

Introduction

1. The Defence of Protais Zigiranyirazo, currently being tried before Trial Chamber III, requests disclosure of the closed session transcripts of, and the sealed exhibits associated with, the testimony of Witness DM-190, who appeared as a Defence witness in the Bagosora et al. trial on 3 and 4 May 2005. The Defence avers that it has met with Witness DM-190 on numerous occasions, that he is willing to testify, and that he is likely to be called.[1] The closed session transcripts, it is said, will assist the Defence in deciding whether to call the witness.

2. The Prosecution opposes the motion, arguing that the Defence has not shown the relevance of the material to the trial of the Accused Zigiranyirazo.

Deliberations

3. The Zigiranyirazo Defence has correctly applied to this Trial Chamber seeking variation of the witness protection orders applicable to the closed session testimony of Witness DM-190 in the trial of Bagosora et al. Rule 75 (G) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("the Rules") provides that a party to other proceedings before this Tribunal must apply for variation of witness protection measures to "any Chamber, however constituted, remaining seised of the first proceedings". Accordingly, whether the closed session transcripts and related exhibits of this trial may be released to the Zigiranyirazo Defence is properly a matter for this Trial Chamber.[2]

4. Article 19 of the Statute prescribes that hearings of the Tribunal shall be public unless otherwise ordered in accordance with the Rules. Acting under Article 21 of the Statute and Rule 75 of the Rules, this Chamber issued a witness protection order for the benefit of Ntabakuze witnesses which, among other things, authorizes non-disclosure to the public of any information which could be used to identify them.[3] The purpose of placing exhibits under seal and hearing testimony in closed session is to conceal the identity of the protected witness from the public at large.

5. The Zigiranyirazo Defence submits that the witness has disclosed that he testified on behalf of the Accused Ntabakuze. Accordingly, no witness protection purpose would be served by denying the Zigiranyirazo Defence access to the Tribunal's records of the witness's testimony. Such disclosure also enhances trial fairness. The Appeals Chamber has held that any person within the Office of the Prosecutor may be designated to have access to protected information in any case before this Tribunal[4]

[1] Motion, para. 4; Reply, paras. 4-5.

[2] The Chamber has an inherent power to reconsider and modify its own decisions. Bagosora et al., Decision on Prosecutor's Motion for Reconsideration of the Trial Chamber's "Decision on Prosecutor's Motion for Leave to Vary the Witness List Pursuant to Rule 73 bis (E)" (TC), 15 June 2004, para. 7 ("[A]lthough the Rules do not explicitly provide for it, the Chamber has an inherent power to reconsider its own decisions"). This inherent power has been codified in respect of witness protection orders, in particular, by virtue of Rules 75 (G), (H) and (I).

[3] Bagosora et al., Decision on Ntabakuze Motion for Protective Measures of Witnesses (TC), 21 September 2005 ("Defence Witness Protection Order"), para. 2. Denying the same access to the Defence in respect a witness who has revealed his status would be unfair.[5]

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the motion;

ORDERS the Registry to disclose the closed session transcripts and sealed exhibits of Witness DM-190 to the Zigiranyirazo Defence;

DECLARES that the Zigiranyirazo Defence, including the Accused, are bound by the terms of the Ntabakuze Defence Witness Protection Order in respect of Witness DM-190.

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the Zigiranyirazo "Motion Requesting Closed Session Exhibits under Seal with Respect to Protected Witness DM-12", etc., filed on 20 April 2006;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 25 April 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Defence of Protais Zigiranyirazo, currently being tried before Trial Chamber III, requests disclosure of the sealed exhibits associated with the testimony of Witness DM-12, who appeared as a Prosecution witness in the Nahimana et al. trial. The Defence avers that it has met with Witness DM-

12 on numerous occasions, that he is willing to testify, and that he is likely to be called.[1] The sealed exhibits, it is said, are material to the Defence case. Both the Accused and his Defence team agree to be bound by the witness protection orders applicable to witness DM-12.[2]

2. The Prosecution opposes the motion, arguing that the Chamber has no jurisdiction over the request, as it is now the Appeals Chamber which is seized of the case.

Deliberations

(i) Jurisdiction

3. Rule 75 (G) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence provides that:

> (G) A party to the second proceedings seeking to rescind, vary or augment protective measures ordered in the first proceedings must apply:
> (i) to any Chamber, however constituted, remaining seised of the first proceedings; or
> (ii) if no Chamber remains seised of the first proceedings, to the Chamber seised of the second proceedings.

4. Notwithstanding the pending appeal from the Judgement, this Chamber does, in the present context, "remain seised" of the Nahimana et al. case. The word "remaining" suggests a continuation of proceedings that could refer only to the Trial Chamber. An appeal from a Judgement is based on enumerated grounds; matters not related to these grounds, or the hearing of evidence related thereto, are not within the jurisdiction of the Appeals Chamber. Issues of disclosure of testimony and exhibits before the original Trial Chamber have no link with the appeals proceedings; they are simply a continuation of the proceedings at the trial level.

6.* For the above reasons, the Chamber finds that it "remains seised" of the Nahimana et al. case and that, accordingly, it is the proper forum for the present request.

(ii) Merits

8.* Article 19 of the Statute prescribes that hearings of the Tribunal shall be public unless otherwise ordered in accordance with the Rules. Acting under Article 21 of the Statute and Rule 75 (A) of the Rules, this Chamber issued a witness protection order for the benefit of Nahimana et al. witnesses which, among other things, authorizes non-disclosure to the public of any information which could be used to identify them.[3]

9. The purpose of placing exhibits under seal and hearing testimony in closed session is to conceal the identity of the protected witness from the public at large. Former Prosecution witness DM-12 has already disclosed to the Defence that he testified as a protected witness in Nahimana et al. Little if any witness protection purpose would therefore be served by denying the Zigiranyirazo Defence access to the sealed exhibits. Such disclosure also enhances trial fairness, in light of the Prosecution's access to the same material.[4]

10. In the absence of submissions from the Prosecution concerning the content of the exhibits, the present order will be subject to a seven-day delay to give the Prosecution an opportunity to comment on whether any of the documents are susceptible of identifying any other protected witness, and to request a stay of the present order should that be the case.

1. The Appeals Chamber of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States, between 1 January and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively) is seized with an interlocutory appeal filed by Protais Zigiranyirazo[1] against a decision of Trial Chamber III.[2]

2. In connection with this interlocutory appeal, the Appeals Chamber is seized with a request by Counsel for Mr. Zigiranyirazo for a brief extension of time to file Mr. Zigiranyirazo's reply brief.[3] The Prosecution filed its Response to Mr. Zigiranyirazo's appeal on 29 June 2006 at 5.25 p.m. In his submissions, Counsel for Mr. Zigiranyirazo explains that he received the Prosecution's response brief on 30 June 2006. He adds that on 1 July 2006, he departs Arusha, Tanzania, in order to return to Canada and will not have access to his office until 4 July 2006. Counsel seeks an extension of time until 6 July 2006 to file the reply. He notes that the Prosecution indicated to him orally that it did not oppose this request.[4] The Prosecution has confirmed the same with the Appeals Chamber and that it does not intend to file a response to the Request for Extension of Time.

3. The Appeals Chamber observes that its Practice Direction generally provides for the filing of a reply brief within four days from the filing of the response brief for interlocutory appeals.[5] In other words, Mr. Zigiranyirazo's reply brief should normally be filed no later than 3 July 2006. Rule 116 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunal, however, allows for extensions of time upon a showing of good cause. In the circumstances of this case, as described by Counsel, and given the nature of the interlocutory appeal, the Appeals Chamber finds good cause and will grant the limited extension of time.

4. For the foregoing reasons, the Request for Extension of Time is GRANTED. Counsel for Mr. Zigiranyirazo will be permitted until 6 July 2006 to file Mr. Zigiranyirazo's reply brief.

Submissions

The Defence Motion

1. Pursuant to Rule 68 (A) of the Rules, the Defence requests the Chamber to order the Prosecution to provide names and addresses of members of its staff who may be interviewed and called as defence witnesses. The Defence asserts that the requested Order is necessary to inquire into witness-taking procedures and to challenge the credibility of several Prosecution witnesses whose testimonies are markedly different from their written statements given to Prosecution investigators. In the alternative, the Defence requests the Prosecution to make a "from-the-Bar" declaration, affirming the integrity of the statement-recording process and reaffirming that the contents of each witness statement accords with the information given to Prosecution investigators. According to the Defence, the suggested declaration by the Prosecution should be followed by another declaration issued by the Chamber that it is satisfied with the Prosecution's affirmations concerning the integrity of the statement-taking process. The application is premised on the disclosure obligations of the Prosecution, pursuant to Rules 66, 67 and 68.

2. The Defence asserts that the integrity of the statement-taking process is in question insofar as Prosecution witnesses have frequently explained discrepancies between their oral testimonies and their written statements as the result of inaccurate recording of information. The Defence contends that, by interviewing the Prosecution interviewers, it will be able to test the credibility of the witnesses in question and to ascertain the propriety of the statement-taking process.

The Prosecution's Response

3. The Prosecution requests the Chamber to dismiss the Defence Motion in its entirety. The Prosecution avers that the disclosure sought is not properly pegged by the Defence upon Rule 68, and contends that the assessment of witness credibility is a process that is properly conducted by the Chamber in its final deliberations.

4. The Prosecution argues that the Defence has exhausted its opportunity to challenge the credibility of the witnesses because: (1) the Defence has already been afforded the opportunity to challenge the credibility of the witnesses during extended cross examinations; (2) the Chamber had an opportunity to observe the witnesses in court; (3) both parties could have referred to the testimonies of the witnesses in their closing briefs; and (4) over the course of the present trial, the Prosecutor has disclosed its "Mission Reports" to the Defence containing the names and addresses of the personnel who have dealt with the witnesses referred to in the Defence motion. The Prosecution therefore submits that it has already disclosed to the Defence all relevant material pertaining to each witness, pursuant to Rule 66 and Rule 68.

5. The Prosecution further argues that the Rules do not impose a duty upon the Prosecution to conduct joint investigations with the Defence on all allegations of an exculpatory nature.

The Defence Reply

6. The Defence reiterates that, by its request to interview Prosecution staff members, it is seeking a convenient way to resolve the problem of contradictory or inconsistent witness statements, short of calling a large number of witnesses. Because the issue at bar is the integrity of the Prosecution's statement-taking process, the Defence argues that the Prosecution should formally affirm the integrity of this process. Alternatively, the Defence avers that the Chamber should indicate whether further evidence is necessary to establish the integrity of the statement-taking process.

The Prosecution Rejoinder

7. Noting two letters received from the Defence, both dated 26 April 2006, the Prosecution expresses its disapproval of requested interviews of more than forty Prosecution staff members. The Prosecution avers that its staff is a party to the proceedings and therefore that the Defence must meet a high threshold to justify calling them as witnesses, pursuant to Rule 54 of the Rules. The Prosecution argues that the Defence has not met this threshold, insofar as it has not presented empirical evidence of exceptional circumstances necessitating that the Prosecution staff give statements or testify before the Chamber. The Prosecution further argues that submissions made by Prosecution witnesses have already been disclosed to the Defence, pursuant to Rule 67 (D), and that the Chamber will evaluate any inconsistencies between these written submission and in-court testimonies in its Judgement of the case.

8. The Prosecution argues that the Defence has not established any prejudice the Accused may suffer if Prosecution staff members are not called to give evidence on the statement-taking process. The Prosecution also asserts that, according to established jurisprudence, merely raising doubt as to the credibility of a witness is not sufficient to establish that a witness knowingly gave false testimony.[1]

9. The Prosecution also cites the standards set forth by the United Nations to interview UN staff and asserts that the Defence has failed to provide information to meet those standards.[2]

The Defence Second Reply to the Prosecution Rejoinder

10. The Defence submits that the purpose of its Motion relates only to disclosure and does not relate to the right to conduct interviews of members of the Prosecution staff. The Defence asserts that the proposed interviews will be limited and clearly related to the denials of particular witnesses referenced in the Defence Motion.[3] The Defence also argues that, contrary to the Prosecution's assertions, there is no Rule 54 issue of subpoena in the present case.

Deliberations

11. By way of the present application, the Chamber is being moved to order the Prosecution to provide names and addresses of members of its staff so that they can be interviewed and eventually called as defence witnesses primarily in order to challenge the credibility of the several Prosecution witnesses who have given testimony which, in the Defence view, contradict statements given to investigators. In the alternative, the Defence suggests that the Prosecution make a "from-the-Bar" declaration affirming the integrity of the statement recording process, and re-affirm that the contents of each statement accords with the information given to the investigators. According to the Defence, this declaration by the Prosecutor should be followed by a declaration by the Chamber stating that it is satisfied with the Prosecutor's affirmations on the integrity of the process. The application is premised on the disclosure obligations of the Prosecution, under Rules 66, 67 and 68.

(i) breach of duty or perpetration of fraud in the performance of their duties;

[3] Prosecutor v. Protais Zigiranyirazo, Defence Motion for Disclosure of Exculpatory Information with Respect to Prior Statements of Prosecution Witnesses, 19 April 2006, par 12 ("Defence Motion").

12. The Defence contends that an Order by the Chamber, of the kind being requested, is necessary to allow the Defence to interview members of the Prosecution to test the credibility of Prosecution witnesses whose testimony in court was markedly different from their written statements. The Defence also contends that the integrity of the process is in question, because witnesses frequently explained the discrepancies between their written statements and oral testimonies in court as being the result of poor recording by the interviewers. By interviewing the interviewers, therefore, the Defence asserts that it would able to both test the credibility of the witnesses in question and ascertain the propriety and integrity of the statement-taking process.

13. The Chamber considers the application of the Defence to be misconceived in law. There is no legal basis upon which a party, by calling the recorder of a witness's statement, can test the credibility of this witness or cast doubt on the integrity of the process.

14. Where a witness has signed a statement, accompanied by a declaration that the contents thereof are true and correct, there is a presumption flowing from such declaration – as well as declarations made by recorders or interviewers – that the statement was recorded pursuant to the Rules. This presumption can be challenged by evidence that shows failure to comply with the Rules.

15. Any challenge to the integrity of the statement-taking process should be underpinned by a prima facie showing of misfeasance. A witness's denial of the contents of a statement or the assertion that the witness said something different from what is recorded in the statement, cannot, in and of itself, provide justification for allowing the challenging party to interview and/or summon to testify the recorder or interviewer.

16. On the facts of the present application, two elements need to be satisfied, prima facie, to justify an inquiry. Firstly, the Defence must show that the alleged inaccurate recording of the statement materially affects its case in that the guilt or innocence of the Accused hinges on the wrongly recorded statement so that serious prejudice has been caused. Secondly, the Defence must show that there was malice on the part of the recorder in so doing.

17. The Defence submissions do not contain the slightest suggestion or showing that any misfeasance existed or that there was an error in the taking of the statements which are the subject of the challenge.

18. Had there been such a showing, it would have been appropriate to request a voir dire to try the conduct of the interviewers in the statement-taking process so as to establish any resultant inaccuracy or impropriety. It is important to note that proof of such impropriety would result in the exclusion of the impugned statement. Such proof of misfeasance in the statement-making process would not serve to challenge the credibility of the witness. A statement once recorded stands as a statement. If alleged to be untrue, a determination as to the credibility of the witness would ultimately be a matter for the Chamber to decide. Where a statement has been shown to be tainted, the Chamber will have to assess the witness's credibility without the advantage of a corroborative or contradictory prior written statement.

19. The Chamber is of the view that the time to challenge the accuracy of a statement, or to impugn the process of recording a statement, is when the statement is tendered in evidence. At this time, a challenge to the admissibility of a statement may be made, as can the process of determining its admissibility. The impugned statement must then be exhibited in the proceedings.

20. Finally, the Chamber considers that the Defence's alternative remedy deserves comment. In the event that the Chamber was not inclined to make the requested Order for the production of names and contact details of the relevant OTP staff, the Defence had suggested a two part remedy – (i) a declaration from the Prosecutor as to the integrity of the process, and (ii) a statement from the Chamber that it is satisfied with the said declaration, which would suffice. The Chamber is perplexed by the suggested alternative. The Chamber does not agree that such an affirmation by the Prosecutor can be legitimately made. As a matter of law, the Chamber takes the view that any submission from the Prosecution would not, in and of itself, serve to authenticate the statement-taking process nor would it serve to test a witness's credibility.

21. With regard to the second part of the suggested remedy, the Defence does not advance the legal basis upon which a Chamber could be called to make such a determination at this interim stage of the proceedings. The Chamber is not minded to, and will not, make any declaration or pronouncement of its view on any aspect of the testimony, or credibility, of witnesses testifying before it at this stage of the proceedings. It is clear and settled practice that such determinations are made at the end of the trial when the Chamber comes to deliberate on the totality of the evidence before it.

22. For the reasons stated above, the present application is dismissed. The Chamber wishes to record its concern at the very nature of the application, which it considers to be frivolous and possibly vexatious. The Chamber is also concerned that this is the second occasion in which it considers an application of the Defence to be frivolous.[4] The Chamber recalls that the Defence was warned that sanctions could attach if a similarly frivolous application was to be brought. For the purposes of the present application, however, the Chamber will not impose any of the stipulated sanctions; but reiterates its warning that frivolous applications will, in future, meet with the full force of sanctions as stipulated in Rule 73 (F) of the Rules.

Introduction

1. Having closed its case against the Accused on 28 June 2006, the Prosecution, pursuant to Rules 4, 54, 73, and 89 (b) and (c) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), now requests that the Chamber conduct a site visit in the Republic of Rwanda. The sites requested are listed in the Prosecution Motion, Annex A.[1]

2. The Defence stresses that it has no objection in principle to an eventual site visit but submits that the Prosecution Motion is premature as the Defence case will narrow the issues for which a site visit may be essential to determine the truth. It therefore requests that the Chamber suspend its decision until the Defence case is well advanced and the issues in the case have been clarified.[2] Once its case proceeds, the Defence will have additional submissions concerning the sites to be visited.[3]

Deliberations

3. Rule 4 of the Rules provides that "[a] Chamber or a Judge may exercise their functions away from the Seat of the Tribunal, if so authorized by the President in the interests of justice".

4. In accordance with the jurisprudence of the Tribunal, the need for a site visit must be assessed in view of the particular circumstances of this case. A request to carry out a site visit should be granted when the visit will be instrumental to the discovery of the truth and determination of the matter before the Chamber.[4] Chambers of this Tribunal have granted site visits at different stages of the proceedings, such as at the end of the Prosecution and Defence cases, and during the presentation of evidence by the Defence.[5]

5. In view of the circumstances of this case, the Chamber does not consider that the Prosecution Motion is premature. To assist it in ruling on the matter, the Chamber orders the Defence to provide it with any submission it intends to make on the sites presented by the Prosecution, as well as listing sites that the Defence may wish to add to the itinerary. Upon receipt of these submissions, the Chamber will decide the Prosecution Motion.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER ORDERS the Defence to make submissions on the sites presented in the Prosecution Motion and sites that the Defence may wish to add to the itinerary not later than 30 October 2006.

Introduction

1. The Prosecution's case against the Accused closed on 28 June 2006. The Defence will start the presentation of its case on 30 October 2006. On 1 September 2006 the Defence filed a Pre-Defence Brief (the "Pre-Defence Brief") pursuant to Rule 73 ter of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules").

2. The Prosecution moves the Chamber to sever and exclude parts of the Pre-Defence Brief as outside the scope of Rule 73 ter of the Rules[1] and as contravening the Chamber's Decision of July 2006.[2] The Defence Response was filed on 7 September 2006.[3] The Prosecution Reply followed on 8 September 2006.[4]

Submissions

3. The Prosecution requests that the Chamber sever and exclude paragraphs 55-62 of the Pre-Defence Brief on the grounds that these paragraphs are arguments and have no relevance under Rule 73 ter of the Rules. The Prosecution further requests that paragraphs 63-66 be severed and excluded, and that certain Office of the Prosecutor ("OTP") staff be removed from the list of Defence witnesses, because they relate to issues determined in the Chamber's Decision of July 2006. The Prosecution argues that the Defence is attempting to re-argue a motion that has already been decided and calls for sanctions under Rules 73 and 46 of the Rules.

4. To enable it to adequately prepare for trial, the Prosecution also asks that the Chamber order the Defence to file a final witness list and list of exhibits, as well as a summary of the proposed testimony of the Accused.

5. The Defence replies that paragraphs 55-62 of the Pre-Defence Brief inform the Chamber of the status of its trial preparation. Paragraphs 63-66 and witnesses 48-53 are necessary to preserve its right to appeal the Decision of July 2006.

6. The Defence submits that it will be prepared to furnish a list of potential witnesses by 10 October 2006. The Defence states that a summary of the Accused's testimony will only be submitted if a final decision for him to testify is made. Finally, the Defence submits that during the Status Conference of 30 June 2006 the Prosecution accepted the fact that only the Defence exhibits which were ready would be filed.

7. The Prosecution adds that absent of a showing of malfeasance or other irregularities, the Chamber has held that parties to the proceeding may not call as witnesses members of the other party to the proceeding. The Prosecution submits that even if the Accused chooses not to testify he will suffer no harm by filing a summary of his proposed testimony pursuant to Rule 73 ter (B) (iii).

Deliberations

8. The Pre-Defence Brief is relevant only so far as it provides details outlining the Defence's theory of its case. Facts and arguments which are outside that scope are irrelevant to the Chamber, even if they remain within the Pre-Defence Brief. The Chamber, therefore, finds no reason to sever and exclude paragraphs 55-62 of the Pre-Defence Brief, which in no way prejudice the Prosecution or hinder the functions of the Chamber.

9. In its Decision of July 2006, the Chamber found that the Defence had not shown any malice or misfeasance by OTP staff in recording witness statements, and that, therefore, the Defence was not entitled to call them as witnesses.[5] In paragraphs 63-66 of its Pre-Defence Brief, the Defence revives the arguments already rejected by the Chamber. The Defence also lists six OTP staff as witnesses 48-53 in Appendix A. The Defence has not made any showing that these witnesses are relevant to matters other than those previously determined in the Decision of July 2006. Because the inclusion of these witnesses contravenes the Decision of July 2006, the Chamber orders the Defence to remove witnesses 48-53 from its witness list. Moreover, the Chamber will not consider paragraphs 63-66 of the Pre-Defence Brief.

10. The Chamber notes that the Defence filed a final witness list on 9 October 2006.[6] The Prosecution's arguments related to this list are, therefore, now moot.

11. The Prosecution filed many exhibits that were not annexed to its Pre-Trial Brief. The Chamber notes that during the Status Conference, the Prosecution acknowledged that only those exhibits which were ready would be filed with the Pre-Defense Brief.[7] The Chamber, therefore, denies the Prosecution's request regarding Defence exhibits.

12. The Chamber will not require the Accused to provide a summary of his proposed testimony.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the Prosecution Motion in part;

ORDERS the Defence to remove witnesses numbered (48) "Me (sic) Stephen Rapp", (49) "Zudhi Janbek", (50) "Rapp's Interpreter", (51) "Gina Butler", (52) "Butler Z Janbek's investigator", and (53) "Butler's interpreter" from the Defence witness list;

DENIES the Prosecution Motion in all other respects.

Introduction

1. Protais Zigiranyirazo (the "Accused") is charged with genocide or in the alternative complicity in genocide and conspiracy to commit genocide pursuant to Article 2 of the Statute of the Tribunal (the "Statute"), and extermination and murder, as crimes against humanity, pursuant to Article 3 of the Statute.

2. After calling twenty-five witnesses, including four investigators and one expert witness, and entering 75 exhibits during a 46 trial day period, the Prosecution closed its case on 28 June 2006. The Chamber granted the Defence request for extension of time to file its motion for acquittal pursuant to Rule 98 bis. The Prosecutor was likewise granted a similar extension to respond. The Defence Motion was filed on 13 July 2006.[1] The Prosecution Response was filed on 31 July 2006.[2] The Defence Reply was filed on 2 August 2006,[3] and the Prosecution Rejoinder was filed on 7 August 2006.[4]

Deliberations

3. Rule 98 bis provides:

> If after the close of the case for the prosecution, the Trial Chamber finds that the evidence is insufficient to sustain a conviction on one or more counts charged in the Indictment, the Trial Chamber, on motion of an accused filed within seven days after the close of the Prosecution's case-in-chief, unless the Chamber orders otherwise, or proprio motu, shall order the entry of judgement of acquittal in respect of those counts.

4. In the Tribunal's jurisprudence, the test under the Rule is whether a reasonable trier of fact could arrive at a conviction if the Prosecution evidence is accepted.[5] Accordingly, where some evidence was adduced and that evidence, if believed, could be sufficient for a reasonable trier of fact to sustain, beyond reasonable doubt, a conviction on the particular count, a motion for a judgement of acquittal shall be denied. Conversely, where no evidence was adduced in relation to a count, such motion shall be granted.[6] The Chamber stresses that Rule 98 bis requires it to consider counts; the Chamber need not engage in a paragraph by paragraph analysis of the Indictment.[7] The Chamber does not assess the credibility and reliability of the evidence unless the Prosecution case "has completely broken down, either on its own presentation, or as a result of such fundamental questions being raised through cross-examination as to the reliability and credibility of witnesses that the Prosecution is left without a case".[8] The Prosecution's evidence should be evaluated as a whole, looking to "the totality of the evidence" and making any reasonably possible inferences.[9] A decision at the Rule 98 bis stage to accept the Prosecution's evidence does not preclude the Chamber from ultimately finding that the Prosecution evidence fails to establish the Accused's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.[10]

5. The Defence has made two types of submissions on the nature of the Prosecutor's evidence, namely: on the sufficiency of the evidence in relation to the crimes alleged in the counts of the Indictment,[11] and on the sufficiency of the evidence in relation to individual paragraphs of the Indictment.

6. The Defence requests an acquittal on Count 5 (murder as a crime against humanity). For the remaining counts of the Indictment, the Defence requests the Chamber to take a paragraph by paragraph approach with a view to striking out those paragraphs of the Indictment for which insufficient evidence has been adduced. The Chamber will therefore begin its analysis of the sufficiency of the Prosecution evidence with Count 5.

Count 5: Murder as a Crime Against Humanity

7. The Defence contends that there is insufficient evidence to prove any of the acts alleged and charged under Count 5. The Defence recognizes that, if proven, each of the murder allegations in the Indictment[12] could sustain a conviction on this count.[13] Therefore, if the Chamber finds that there is sufficient evidence of any of the murders, the Defence requests that the Chamber either acquit the Accused for the remaining murders; or, "in the alternative, find that the Accused has no case to answer on the remaining murders and strike out or indicate that the Chamber will not consider those allegations during final deliberations."[14]

8. The Indictment charges the Accused with the killings of the three gendarmes, Stanislas Sinibagiwe ("Sinibagiwe"), and the killings of members of two Tutsi families.[15] The Prosecution concedes that no evidence has been adduced in respect of the murder of the Sekimonyo and the Bahoma families,[16] but contends that there is sufficient evidence on the record to prove the killing of the three gendarmes and Stanislas Sinibagiwe ("Sinibagiwe").[17]

9. Murder is the intentional killing of a person, or the intentional infliction of grievous bodily harm in the knowledge that such harm will likely cause the victim's death or with recklessness as to whether death will result, without lawful justification or excuse.[18]

10. In order to qualify as a crime against humanity, these offences must satisfy two conditions under the Statute: the crime must be committed as "part of a widespread or systematic attack"; and, the attack must be against "any civilian population on national, political, ethnic, racial or religious grounds".

11. "Widespread" is defined as massive or large-scale, involving many victims; "systematic" refers to an organized pattern of conduct, as distinguished from random or unconnected acts committed by independent actors.[19] These requirements inform the mens rea element unique to crimes against humanity: the perpetrator must, at a minimum, know that his action is part of a widespread or systematic attack against civilians on discriminatory grounds, though he or she need not necessarily share that discriminatory intent.[20]

12. The Chamber reiterates that counts are the proper focus for an enquiry under Rule 98 bis and therefore will not enquire whether evidence has been adduced in support of each paragraph of the Indictment. If there is any Prosecution evidence regarding any of the alleged killings that could sustain the count, then a judgement of acquittal is not appropriate.

13. The Defence asserts that the sufficiency of the evidence adduced from the witness testimonies does not support the charge that the Accused is responsible for the alleged murder of Sinibagiwe, nor does it support the contention that the killing of Sinibagiwe was a crime against humanity, as it was not part of a widespread or systematic attack against the civilian population, on ethnic or racial grounds,[21] nor on political grounds.[22] The Defence therefore argues that Sinibagiwe's murder was an aborted extortion attempt.[23]

14. The Prosecution submits that Sinibagiwe was targeted because he was considered an accomplice of the enemy – Sinibagiwe was considered a Hutu who was opposed to the government then in power – and was therefore killed.[24] The Prosecution refers to Witness AVY to show that there is ample evidence, both direct and circumstantial, from which the Chamber can conclude that the Accused was fully involved in the murder of Sinibagiwe.[25]

15. There is evidence of the Accused being present and participating at a meeting where it was decided that Sinibagiwe would not be allowed to cross La Petite Barrière border post[26] because the latter was believed to be an accomplice of the enemy, which was defined as the Tutsi.[27] After the meeting, Sinibagiwe was detained at La Petite Barrière border post until Omar Serushago, who was allegedly at the meeting with the Accused, retrieved Sinibagiwe from La Petite Barrière border post and drove him in the direction of the Commune Rouge, a local cemetery in Gisenyi. There is also evidence that shots were heard shortly thereafter from the Commune Rouge. The witness later learned that Sinibagiwe had been killed.[28]

16. The Chamber has carefully examined the record and is convinced that there is sufficient evidence, which, if believed, could lead a reasonable trier of fact to conclude that this killing was part of a widespread, if not also systematic, attack against civilians on the basis of one or more of the enumerated grounds of Article 3 of the Statute.

17. The Chamber is of the view that, if believed, the evidence described above could lead a reasonable trier of fact to conclude that the Accused is guilty of murder as a crime against humanity for aiding and abetting the murder of Sinibagiwe.

Count 1: Conspiracy to Commit Genocide, Count 2: Genocide, Count 3: Complicity in Genocide, and Court 4: Extermination as a Crime Against Humanity

18. The Accused is also charged with conspiracy to commit genocide (Count 1 of the Indictment); genocide (Count 2); complicity in genocide (Count 3), all of which are stipulated under Article 2 (3) (b) of the Statute; and extermination as a crime against humanity (Count 4), which is stipulated under Article 3 (a) of the Statute.

19. Rule 98 bis requires the Chamber to determine whether the evidence is insufficient to sustain a conviction. The Chamber is not mandated to consider alleged defects in the Indictment or the sufficiency of notice to the Accused.[29] The Chamber, therefore, will not consider the party's submissions concerning compliance with the Chamber's 15 July 2004 decision requiring modifications to the Indictment.[30]

20. The Chamber declines the Defence's invitation to take a paragraph by paragraph approach regarding the remaining counts of the Indictment. As the Chamber noted above, it will not take a paragraph by paragraph approach because Rule 98 bis requires it to consider the Prosecution evidence as it relates to counts. The Defence does not suggest that the lack of evidence in support of the disputed paragraphs should result in acquittal on any of the remaining counts. On the contrary, it acknowledges that some evidence has been adduced in support of these counts. Therefore, the Defence Motion as it pertains to Counts 1 through 4 of the Indictment is not well founded and must be denied.[31]

Prosecution Concessions Regarding Lack of Evidence on Allegations Contained in Paragraphs 20, 25, 26, 37, 48, 49 and 50

21. The Prosecution concedes that it has led no evidence related to the allegations in paragraphs 20, 25, 26, 37, 48, 49 and 50, of the Indictment. These paragraphs concern the alternative counts of genocide and complicity in genocide, and the counts of extermination and murder as crimes against humanity. The Chamber has examined the Indictment and notes that these paragraphs concern, respectively, the Accused's role in ordering the digging of a mass grave known as "the pit" behind his home; the Accused's role in the deaths of some 30 members of the Sekimonyo clan, a Tutsi family; and the Accused's role in the deaths of some 18 members of the Bahoma clan, another Tutsi family. The Chamber accepts the Prosecutor's admission that no evidence has been tendered in support of these allegations and accordingly finds that the Accused has no case to answer in respect of the allegations contained in these paragraphs.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the Defence Motion.

Background

99. The Appellant submits that the Trial Chamber violated his fundamental right to be tried in his presence, as guaranteed by Article 20 (4) (d) of the Statute of the Tribunal. The Appellant argues that this violation resulted from the decision of the Trial Chamber to hear Michel Bagaragaza[3] testify in person in The Netherlands[4] with the Appellant participating in the proceedings only by video-link from Arusha.[5] He contends that the right to be present at trial cannot be satisfied by video-link and instead requires physical presence.[6] The Appellant requests the Appeals Chamber to quash the Trial Chamber's decision of 5 June 2006, which permitted his participation by video-link, and to strike from the record Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony of 13 through 15 June 2006.[7]

100. The present dispute has its origin in the Prosecution's request to have Mr. Bagaragaza testify in this case by video-link from The Netherlands.[8] Both the Trial Chamber and the Prosecution have described him as a key witness.[9] The Appellant opposed the Prosecution's request to hear Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony by video-link because he wished to confront this witness in person.[10] In addition, the Appellant challenged Mr. Bagaragaza's inability to travel to Arusha, in particular, by disputing the basis of his security concerns and by noting that his agreement with the Prosecution to be heard only by video-link usurped the role of the Trial Chamber in making such decisions.[11]

101. On 31 January 2006, the Trial Chamber denied the Prosecution's request to hear Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony by video-link.[12] In its decision, the Trial Chamber stated that the Appellant had a right to confront this witness in person.[13] In addition, the Trial Chamber expressed concern about its ability "to effectively and accurately assess the testimony and demeanour" of Mr. Bagaragaza if he testified by video-link.[14] The Trial Chamber recognized the potential importance of Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony.[15] In addition, the Trial Chamber accepted the Prosecution's submissions that Mr. Bagaragaza faced increased risk to his security if he travelled to Arusha.[16] Consequently, the Trial Chamber decided to hear Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony in person in The Netherlands in the presence of the parties.[17]

102. However, shortly before the anticipated trial session, the Trial Chamber was informed that the Appellant would not be permitted to enter The Netherlands in the foreseeable future.[18] The Trial Chamber does not explain the reason for this, citing only "external variables", though the Registry's submissions point to the absence of a "treaty basis" for the temporary transfer.[19] Consequently, the Trial Chamber modified its arrangements for the hearing of Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony in a Scheduling Order of 26 May 2006.[20] In that Order, the Trial Chamber decided to proceed to hear Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony in person in The Netherlands, beginning 12 June 2006, in the physical absence of the Appellant, who would participate by video-link from Arusha.[21] The Appellant challenged this decision on the grounds that it violated his right to be present at trial and to personally confront the witness.[22]

103. On 5 June 2006, the Trial Chamber addressed this matter and, after considering various factors, decided that it was in the interests of a fair and expeditious trial to maintain the arrangement for hearing Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony as set forth in the Scheduling Order of 26 May 2006.[23] The Trial Chamber reiterated that its decision to hear Mr. Bagaragaza in person was based primarily on its concern as to its ability to effectively and accurately assess his testimony and demeanour through a video-link.[24] The Trial Chamber decided that the Appellant, however, would be able to follow the proceedings by video-link along with one of his counsel in Arusha.[25] The Trial Chamber's decision also envisioned both parties being represented by counsel in court in The Netherlands.[26] To maintain "procedural equality of arms" between the parties, the Trial Chamber decided that the examination and cross-examination of Mr. Bagaragaza by both parties would be primarily conducted from Arusha via video-link.[27] However, it noted that counsel for both the Prosecution and the Appellant, present in The Netherlands, would also be able to intervene in the proceedings.[28]

104. Following the issuance of the Impugned Decision, the Appellant sought certification to appeal, which the Trial Chamber granted immediately prior to hearing Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony.[29] The Trial Chamber, however, declined to stay the proceedings pending the outcome of the appeal.[30] Accordingly, Mr. Bagaragaza testified from 13 through 15 June 2006. The Prosecution's case closed on 28 June 2006, and the Defence case is set to begin on 30 October 2006.

Discussion

105. Article 20 (4) (d) of the Statute provides that an accused has a right "to be tried in his or her presence." This right has been equated with other "indispensable cornerstone[s] of justice", such as the right to counsel, the right to remain silent, the right to confront witnesses against them, and the right to a speedy trial.[31] The Trial Chamber concluded that, in the circumstances of this case, the Appellant's presence at his own trial, even during the hearing of a key witness, could be facilitated through the use of video-link technology.[32] In the present decision, the Appeals Chamber considers whether the Trial Chamber erred in adopting the procedure for hearing the testimony of Mr. Bagaragaza in person in The Netherlands while the accused, Mr. Zigiranyirazo, participated via video-link from Arusha. In the course of this analysis, the Appeals Chamber confronts three principal questions: (1) whether "presence" within the meaning of Article 20 (4) (d) refers to physical presence in court before the Trial Judges; (2) if so, whether the right to be physically present in court is categorically inviolable; and (3) if the right may be limited in certain situations, whether the Trial Chamber's restrictions were justified under the present circumstances.

challenged decision was based on an incorrect interpretation of governing law, was based on a patently incorrect conclusion of fact, or was so unfair or unreasonable as to constitute an abuse of the Trial Chamber's discretion.[34]

B. Article 20 (4) (d) Provides for Physical Presence at Trial

107. In the Impugned Decision, the Trial Chamber did not directly consider the issue as to what was meant by the term "presence" within the meaning of Article 20 (4) (d). On Appeal, the parties dispute whether the term "presence" refers to physical presence in court. The Appellant argues that this language provides him with the right to be physically present at his trial, before the court and the witnesses testifying against him.[35] The Prosecution counters that Article 20 (4) (d) does not impose such a "stringent" requirement as physical presence.[36] The Prosecution urges a broader reading of the provision, suggesting that it is simply a "compendious subsection" preventing trial only where an accused is unaware that the proceedings are being conducted against him and is therefore unable to mount a defence.[37]

108. The Appeals Chamber considers that the physical presence of an accused before the court, as a general rule, is one of the most basic and common precepts of a fair criminal trial. The language and practical import of Article 20 (4) (d) of the Statute are clear. First, as a matter of ordinary English, the term "presence" implies physical proximity.[38] A review of the French version of the Statute leads to the same conclusion, in particular in the context of the phrase être présente au procès,[39] conveying unambiguously that Article 20 (4) (d) refers to physical presence at the trial.[40]

109. Both the Tribunal's legal framework and practice as well as that of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia ("ICTY") further reflect that Article 20 (4) (d) provides for the physical presence of an accused at trial, as opposed to his facilitated presence via video-link. Initially, the Appeals Chamber observes that such a procedure, over an accused's objection, is unprecedented before the Tribunal and before the ICTY.[41] It is not surprising, therefore, that there are no express provisions in the Statute and Rules of this Tribunal or of the ICTY for the participation of an accused by video-link in his or her own trial.[42] Indeed, Rule 65 bis of the ICTY Rules of Procedure and [41] In the case of Milan Simić before the ICTY, the accused participated in his sentencing hearing towards the end of the trial process via video link because of his health condition. The Trial Chamber expressly noted, however, that during this period Mr. Simic filed a total of twenty-five waivers of his right to be present in court. See The Prosecutor v. Milan Simić, Sentencing Judgement, Case N°IT 95-9/2-S, 17 October 2002, para. 8.

[42] The Tribunal's Rules and jurisprudence only contemplate the use of video-link technology in order to transmit the testimony of a witness to the court, if justified in narrow circumstances for witness protection concerns, or otherwise in the interests of justice. Rule 75 provides in pertinent part (emphasis added): "(A) A Judge or a Chamber may […] order appropriate measures to safeguard the privacy and security of victims and witness, provided that the measures are consistent with the rights of the accused. (B) A Chamber may hold an in camera proceeding to determine whether to order notably: (i)

Evidence illustrates very clearly that participation via video-link is not considered presence.[43] The same distinction between actual presence and constructive presence via video-link, which is evident in Rule 65 bis of the ICTY Rules, also appears in the Statute of the International Criminal Court[44] and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Special Court for Sierra Leone.[45] The Appeals Chamber further observes that other international,[46] regional,[47] and national[48] systems also share the view that the right to be present at trial implies physical presence.

[…] (c) giving of testimony through […] closed circuit television […] (iii) Appropriate measures to facilitate the testimony of vulnerable victims and witnesses, such as one-way closed circuit television." In addition to specific witness protection concerns, the Tribunal's jurisprudence also allows the hearing of a witness by video-link if it is otherwise in the interests of justice. See, e.g., The Prosecutor v. Théoneste Bagosora et al., Case N°ICTR-98-41-T, Decision on Testimony by Video-Conference, 20 December 2004, para. 4 ("Video-conference testimony should be ordered where it is in the interests of justice, as that standard has been elaborated in ICTR and ICTY jurisprudence."). The Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the ICTY authorize this explicitly in Rule 71 bis ("At the request of either party, a Trial Chamber may, in the interests of justice, order that testimony be received via video-conference link.").

[43] Rule 65 bis (C) of the ICTY Rules provides in pertinent part: "With the written consent of the accused, given after receiving advice from his counsel, a status conference under this Rule may be conducted: (i) in his presence, but with his counsel participating either via tele-conference or video-conference; or (ii) in Chambers in his absence, but with his participation via tele-conference if he so wishes and/or participation of his counsel via tele-conference or video-conference."

[44] See Statute of the International Criminal Court, Article 63 ("(1) The accused shall be present during the trial. (2) If the accused, being present before the Court, continues to disrupt the trial, the Trial Chamber may remove the accused and shall make provision for him or her to observe the trial and instruct counsel from outside the courtroom, through the use of communications technology, if required. Such measures shall be taken only in exceptional circumstances after other reasonable alternatives have proved inadequate, and only for such duration as is strictly required.").

[45] The Appeals Chamber notes that Article 17 (4) (d) of the Statute of the Special Court for Sierra Leone is identical to Article 20 (4) (d) of the Tribunal's Statute. Notably, similar to the International Criminal Court, Rule 80 (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence for the Special Court in Sierra Leone envisions an accused's participation in his or her trial by video-link only after he or she has been removed for persistently disruptive conduct. This Rule provides in pertinent part: "In the event of removal, where possible, provision should be made for the accused to follow the proceeding by video-link."

[46] See supra notes 44, 45 (discussing the International Criminal Court and the Special Court for Sierra Leone). The Appeals Chamber further observes that the language of Article 20 (4) (d) of the Statute tracks Article 14 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. Under this provision, the Human Rights Committee has referred to an accused's personal attendance at the proceedings as a component of a fair trial. See Views of the Human Rights Committee under Article 5, Paragraph 4, of the Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, Communication N°289/1988: Panama 8 April 1992, CCPR/C/44/289/1988 (Jurisprudence), para. 6.6 ("The Committee recalls that the concept of a 'fair trial' within the meaning of article 14, paragraph I, must be interpreted as requiring a number of conditions, such as equality of arms and respect for the principle of adversary proceedings. These requirements are not respected where, as in the present case, the accused is denied the opportunity to personally attend the proceedings, or where he is unable to properly instruct his legal representative.") (Emphasis added).

[47] The European Convention on the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms refers in Article 6 (3) (c) to an accused's right "to defend himself in person […]". For the European Court of Human Rights, this implies the personal attendance of a defendant at trial as well as in certain procedures on appeal requiring the court to have personal impression of the defendant. See, e.g., Case of Stoichkov v. Bulgaria, Application N°9808/02, Judgment, 24 March 2005, para. 56 ("It may thus be considered that the duty to guarantee the right of a criminal defendant to be present in the courtroom – either during the original proceedings or in a retrial after he or she emerges – ranks as one of the essential requirements of Article 6 and is deeply entrenched in that provision."); Case of Sejdovic v. Italy, Application N°56581/00, Judgment, 1 March 2006, para. 84; Case of Michael Edward Cooke v. Austria, Application N°25878/94, Judgement, 8 February 2000, paras. 35, 42, 43. ("The Court recalls that a person charged with a criminal offence should, as a general principle based on the notion of a fair trial, be entitled to be present at the first-instance hearing. However, the personal attendance of the defendant does not necessarily take on the same significance for an appeal hearing."); Case of Colozza v. Italy, Application N°9024/80, Judgment, 12 February 1985, para. 27 ("Although this is not expressly mentioned in paragraph 1 of Article 6 (art. 6-1), the object and purpose of the Article taken as a whole show that a person 'charged with a criminal offence' is entitled to take part in the hearing. Moreover, sub-paragraphs (c), (d) and (e) of paragraph 3 (art. 6-3-c, art. 6-3-d, art. 6-3-e) guarantee to 'everyone charged with a criminal offence' the right 'to defend himself in person', 'to examine or have examined witnesses' and 'to have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language used in court', and it is difficult to see how he could exercise these rights without being present."). See also Stefan Trechsel, Human Rights in Criminal Proceedings, pp. 252-253 (2006).

[48] Presence is also equated with physical presence in criminal trials in the United States. See, e.g., Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 43 (a). Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure 5 and 10 envision video-conferencing only, with the defendant's consent, at the initial appearance and arraignment. See also Illinois v. Allen, 397 U.S. 337, 338 (1970) ("One of the most basic of the rights guaranteed by the Confrontation Clause is the accused's right to be present in the courtroom at every stage of his trial"); United States v. Navarro, 169 F.3d 228, 234-239 (5th Cir. 1999) (holding that an accused's participation in his sentencing hearing by video-conference violated his right to be present at trial); United States v. Reynolds, 44 M.J. 726, 729 (United States Army Court of Criminal Appeals 1996)("Consequently, the statutory and [Rules for Court Martial] provisions cited above appear to require that the military judge, accused, and counsel all to be at one location for the purpose of a court-

110. The Appeals Chamber, therefore, confirms that an accused's right to be tried in his or her presence implies a right to be physically present at trial. Applying the foregoing to the present case leads the Appeals Chamber to conclude that by proceeding as it did, the Trial Chamber restricted the Appellant's right to be present at his trial. However, this does not end the necessary inquiry.

C. The Right To Be Physically Present at Trial Is Not Absolute

111. The parties acknowledge that an accused's right to be tried in his or her presence is not absolute.[49] The ICTY Appeals Chamber has observed as much,[50] and this Appeals Chamber agrees. An accused person can waive or forfeit the right to be present at trial. For example, Rule 80 (B) of the Rules allows a Trial Chamber to remove a persistently disruptive accused. Referring to the equivalent provision in the ICTY Rules, the ICTY Appeals Chamber observed that an accused's right to be present for his or her trial can be restricted "on the basis of substantial trial disruptions".[51] In assessing a particular limitation on a statutory guarantee, the Appeals Chamber bears in mind the proportionality principle, pursuant to which any restriction on a fundamental right must be in service of a sufficiently important objective and must impair the right no more than is necessary to accomplish the objective.[52] The explicit exception provided by Rule 80 (B) and the ICTY Appeals Chamber's reference to "substantial trial disruptions" provide a useful measure by which to assess other restrictions on the right to be present at trial.

D. The Present Circumstances Do Not Warrant any Restriction on the Appellant's Right

112. The primary question for the Appeals Chamber is whether the Trial Chamber properly exercised its discretion in its restriction of the Appellant's right to be present at his trial. Because both parties acknowledge that this right is not absolute, the Appeals Chamber does not consider that the Trial Chamber's failure to examine the accused's right to be tried in his presence is of significant consequence. Instead, the primary question for the Appeals Chamber is whether the Trial Chamber properly exercised its discretion in its restriction of the Appellant's right to be present at his trial. The Appeals Chamber recalls that the Trial Chamber's decision was predicated on Mr. Bagaragaza's martial. This interpretation not only comports with custom and tradition, but also is the one that best guarantees justice. For these reasons, we are satisfied that the telephonic procedures utilized in this case, when based on the meager justification of saving time and travel funds between two installations approximately 150 miles apart, did not comport with any reasonable concept of 'presence' anticipated by the [Uniform Code of Military Justice] and [Rules for Court Martial].")(internal citations omitted); Riggins v. Nevada, 504 U.S. 127, 142 (1992)(Kennedy, J., concurring)("It is a fundamental assumption of the adversary system that the trier of fact observes the accused throughout the trial, while the accused is either on the stand or sitting at the defense table. This assumption derives from the right to be present at trial, which in turn derives from the right to testify and rights under the Confrontation Clause. […] At all stages of the proceedings, the defendant's behavior, manner, facial expressions, and emotional responses, or their absence, combine to make an overall impression on the trier of fact, an impression that can have a powerful influence on the outcome of the trial. If the defendant takes the stand, as Riggins did, his demeanor can have a great bearing on his credibility and persuasiveness, and on the degree to which he evokes sympathy. The defendant's demeanor may also be relevant to his confrontation rights […]") (internal citations omitted).

In addition, in England and Wales, the right of an accused to be present in court at his or her trial is a matter of common law. See R. v. Lee Kun (1916) 1 Kings Bench Reports 337, at 341 ("There must be very exceptional circumstances to justify proceeding with the trial in the absence of the accused. The reason why the accused should be present at the trial is that he may hear the case made against him and have the opportunity […] of answering it. The presence of the accused means not only that he must be physically in attendance, but also that he must be capable of understanding the nature of the proceedings.").

In Canada, an accused also has the right to be present in court during the trial. The Canadian Criminal Code envisions the possibility of an accused participating in his or her trial by video-link, but not for the hearing of evidence, unless he or she consents. See Canadian Criminal Code, Title XX, Section 650.

[51] Milošević Appeal Decision, para. 13.

[52] Milošević Appeal Decision, para. 17. The Appeals Chamber further notes that the situation envisioned under Rule 15 bis, allowing inter alia proceedings to continue for a limited period in the absence of one of the judges, does not inform the present dispute which concerns the absence of the accused.

security concerns, the impact of video-link on the assessment of the witness, and logistical concerns preventing the Appellant from traveling to The Netherlands to attend the proceedings.

113. The Appellant contends that the Trial Chamber failed to apply properly the proportionality principle.[53] He disputes that security concerns in fact prevented Mr. Bagaragaza from testifying in Arusha or that the administrative concerns preventing him from traveling to The Netherlands were insurmountable.[54] The Appellant further takes issue with the procedure for hearing Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony, pointing to the inherent difficulties in following the evidence and visually interacting with the Judges.[55] As a result of these arrangements, the Appellant claims that his participation by video-link meant that neither he nor his lead counsel, who remained with him in Arusha, could observe or hear either the judges or the witness unless the camera was pointed on them.[56] In the Appellant's view, this denied them normal visual interaction with the proceedings.[57] The Prosecution submits that the procedure adopted by the Trial Chamber was consistent with a fair trial and that Mr. Zigiranyirazo has not demonstrated any prejudice.[58]

114. The Appeals Chamber agrees that the objectives advanced by the Trial Chamber are of general importance: witness protection, the proper assessment of an important prosecution witness, and the need to ensure a reasonably expeditious trial. Nonetheless, the Appeals Chamber is not satisfied that, in the present circumstances, the Trial Chamber properly exercised its discretion in deciding to impose limitations on the Appellant's right to be present at his trial.

115. First, the Appeals Chamber accepts that, by agreeing to cooperate with the Prosecution, Mr. Bagaragaza could be exposed to an increased risk to his security. However, the record does not reflect that the security concern, alluded to by the Trial Chamber,[59] is in fact related to the location of his testimony, or that injury could only be avoided by having Mr. Bagaragaza testify in The Netherlands.[60] In addition, the record does not show that the Trial Chamber examined the possibility that additional security measures might allay any security threat were Mr. Bagaragaza brought to Arusha to testify.

[56] Zigiranyirazo Appeal, para. 50; Zigiranyirazo Reply, para. 25.
[57] Zigiranyirazo Reply, para. 25. The Appellant notes that he "'saw' the proceedings through the selective eyes of a camera operated by a third party." He adds: "The experience was dizzying and could have been conducted properly if he and his lead counsel had been able to see his judges. He and his attorney could not speak directly to the judges, gauge their reactions, and adjust the arguments and tenor of pleadings as if they were in open court with the members of the bench." Further, the Appellant claims that the arrangements placed his lead counsel, who conducted the cross-examination, in the difficult position of having to choose to either remain in Arusha and receive direct instruction, or travel to the Netherlands and participate in person, but where communication with the accused would be limited to breaks during the proceedings.
[58] Prosecution Response, paras. 2, 13-23. The Prosecution agrees that there was no visual interaction between the bench and the accused unless the camera was pointed at them, but notes that Mr. Zigiranyirazo confirmed each day that he could follow the proceedings. Prosecution Response, paras. 19, 20. Mr. Zigiranyirazo notes, however, that he complained at the beginning of the proceedings and vowed to do his best out of respect for the court. Zigiranyirazo Reply, para. 25.
[59] The Appeals Chamber notes that security concerns presented by the Prosecution to the Trial Chamber involved the witness's general feelings of insecurity due to agreeing to cooperate with the Prosecution. The Prosecution also pointed to threats made to Mr. Bagaragaza's family and the death of another individual, not in the custody of the Tribunal, who was contemplating cooperating with the Prosecution. The Prosecution explained that this led Mr. Bagaragaza to agree to cooperate if he were not brought to Arusha. See generally Impugned Decision, para. 13; Decision on Prosecution's Request for Video-Link, paras. 26, 30, 32. See also The Prosecutor v. Protais Zigiranyirazo, Case N°ICTR-2001-73-T, Prosecution's Confidential Request to Allow Witness ADE to Give Testimony Via Video-Link, 21 December 2005. The Appeals Chamber observes that the agreement between Mr. Bagaragaza and the Prosecution that he not be brought to Arusha is not binding on the Trial Chamber.
[60] The Appeals Chamber considers that the Trial Chamber is best placed to make the assessment concerning the security of witnesses appearing before it. However, in making a determination that impacts a fundamental right of an accused, a Trial Chamber must do more than simply accept the averments of Prosecution counsel. Rather it must, in accord with Rule 75, undertake an independent inquiry, at a minimum for example by conferring with the relevant sections of the Registry concerned with security and protection of witnesses. The Trial Chamber does not appear to have done this. Moreover, the Appeals Chamber notes that reliance on the President's decision to extraordinarily detain Mr. Bagaragaza in The Hague also does not satisfy this duty. Indeed, there is a significant difference in protecting Mr. Bagaragaza, as an accused, during a lengthy period of pre-trial detention and in ensuring his security when he appears as a witness during three days of testimony before the Tribunal.

116. Second, the Appeals Chamber also accepts that the Trial Chamber's general concern over its ability to assess the credibility of a key witness is an important interest. However, the Appeals Chamber considers that if the Trial Chamber had misgivings about its ability to adequately follow the testimony of a key witness through the use of video-link then these same misgivings, if valid, must apply with equal force to the ability of the accused and his counsel to follow the evidence and proceedings.

117. Third, the Appeals Chamber further observes that none of the "external variables,"[61] alluded to by the Trial Chamber, preventing the Appellant's personal attendance at his own trial, resulted from any action on his part. In addition, there is no indication that the Trial Chamber explored an alternative venue for hearing the testimony, other than The Netherlands. A careful consideration of the feasibility of moving the trial to The Netherlands at the earliest opportunity might have identified the logistical barriers that prevented the Appellant from attending his trial in The Netherlands and allowed the Trial Chamber either to overcome the obstacles or to explore alternative venues or solutions, avoiding the present situation.[62]

118. The Appeals Chamber notes that the Trial Chamber endeavored to ensure that the Appellant had legal representation physically present during the proceedings in The Netherlands. In addition, in an effort to give effect to the principle of equality of arms, the Trial Chamber ordered that the Prosecution also to examine the witness from Arusha. However, the Trial Chamber's attempts to give full respect to both the right to counsel and the principle of equality of arms do not compensate for the failure to accord the accused what is a separate and distinct minimum guarantee: the right to be present at his own trial. Although one of the Appellant's counsel was in the courtroom with the Judges and the witness, the Appellant himself was thousands of kilometres away, connected to the proceedings only by means of audio-visual equipment. The Appellant's sense of being wronged in such circumstances is well-understandable. As the Prosecution and Trial Chamber noted, Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony does not cover simply background information or a matter other than the acts and conduct of the accused. According to the Prosecution's own statement and the Trial Chamber's consideration, Mr. Bagaragaza was a key Prosecution witness against the Appellant.[63]

119. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber's restrictions on the Appellant's fair trial rights were unwarranted and excessive in the circumstances and thus fail the test of proportionality. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber committed a discernible error.

E. Conclusion

120. After a careful consideration of the circumstances under consideration in this appeal and giving due regard to the accused's right to be present at his or her trial, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Trial Chamber erred in law in holding that the Appellant's right to be present at his trial during the testimony of an apparently key witness against him could be met by video-link. The Appeals Chamber observes that, after certifying its decision for appeal, the Trial Chamber decided not to stay the proceedings and instead proceeded to hear Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony.[64]

121. The precise consequences of the Trial Chamber's error cannot be determined at this stage. However, it cannot be held that the violation of the Appellant's right to be present constitutes harmless error given the length and purported significance of the testimony to the charges against him. Prejudice therefore can only be presumed, as any attempt to prove or disprove actual prejudice from the record in an ongoing trial before any factual findings have been made would be purely speculative.

[62] The Appeals Chamber observes that other accused persons have previously attended Tribunal proceedings in The Netherlands in connection with appellate proceedings. See, e.g., Jean De Dieu Kamuhanda v. The Prosecutor, Case N°99-54A-A, Variation of a Scheduling Order, 19 August 2005, p. 2.
[63] Impugned Decision, paras. 6, 16; Decision on Prosecution's Request for Video-Link, paras. 26, 32.
[64] Certification Decision, pp. 53-54.

In the view of the Appeals Chamber, allowing the testimony of Mr. Bagaragaza to remain on the record would seriously damage the integrity of the proceedings. In such circumstances, Rule 95 of the Rules plainly requires the exclusion of such testimony. This, however, does not prevent the Trial Chamber from exercising its discretion and allowing Mr. Bagaragaza to testify again in a manner consistent with the Appellant's fair trial rights.[65]

Disposition

122. For the foregoing reasons, the Trial Chamber's decision to hear Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony in person in The Netherlands while Mr. Zigiranyirazo participated by video-link from Arusha is REVERSED and the testimony of Mr. Bagaragaza given in such a manner is EXCLUDED.

1. On 1 November 2006, the Prosecution undertook to file its motion regarding the reopening of the Prosecution case and the recalling of witness Michel Bagaragaza by the end of the day. Following from the undertaking by the Prosecution, the Chamber ordered the Defence to file its submissions in response on 2 November 2006.[1]

2. The Prosecution is now seeking an extension of time until 6 November 2006 to file its submissions.[2] The Defence opposes the Motion for Extension of Time, and submits that the Prosecution should file its motion at the latest 2 November 2006, with a Defence response by 3 November 2006.[3]

3. The Chamber is of the view that an extension of time sought will not prejudice the Accused and is in the interests of justice, and the Prosecution is hereby directed to file its submissions by 9:00AM on Monday 6 November 2006.

THE CHAMBER HEREBY

I. GRANTS the Motion for Extension of Time;

II. AUTHORIZES the Prosecution to file its submissions by 9:00AM, on 6 November 2006 and the Defence to file its response thereto, if any, within 24 hours of service of the Prosecution's filing.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA ("Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber III, composed of Judges Inés Mónica Weinberg de Roca, Presiding, Khalida Rachid Khan, and Lee Gacuiga Muthoga ("Chamber");

BEING SEIZED of the "Prosecutor's Joint Motion for Re-opening of the Prosecution Case (made under Rules 54, 73 and 85 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence and Appeals Chamber Decision dated 30 October 2006) and Requests for Reconsideration of the Trial Chamber Decision dated 31 January 2006 on the Hearing of Witness Michel Bagaragaza via Video Conference (made pursuant to Rule 73 bis (E) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence)", filed on 6 November 2006 ("Motions", or "Motion for the Re-opening of the Prosecution Case" and "Motion for Reconsideration of the Decision of 31 January 2006", respectively);

CONSIDERING the Defence "Response to Prosecutor's Joint Motion for Re-opening of the Prosecution Case (made under Rules 54, 73 and 85 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence and Appeals Chamber Decision dated 30 October 2006) and Requests for Reconsideration of the Trial Chamber Decision dated 31 January 2006 on the Hearing of Witness Michel Bagaragaza via Video Conference (made pursuant to Rule 73 bis (E) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence) and Motion to Continue Trial", filed on 7 November 2006 (the "Response");

RECALLING the events leading to the present applications and the Chamber's previous Decisions in respect of Mr. Bagaragaza:

1. Decision on Defence and Prosecution Motions Related to Witness ADE, 31 January 2006 ("Decision of 31 January 2006");

2. Extremely Confidential Decision on Defence Motion Concerning the Hearing of Witness ADE, 5 June 2006 ("Decision of 5 June 2006");

3. Oral Decision on Protais Zigiranyirazo's Application for Certification to Appeal the Extremely Confidential Decision on Defence Motion Concerning the Hearing of Witness ADE ("Oral Decision on Application for Certification to Appeal");[1]

CONSIDERING the Decision on Interlocutory Appeal of the Appeals Chamber, 30 October 2006 ("Appeals Chamber Decision");

CONSIDERING Article 20 (4) (d) of the Statute of the Tribunal (the "Statute") and Rules 54, 73, 73 bis (E) and 85 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules");

NOW DECIDES the matter based solely on the briefs of the Parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules.

Background

1. On 30 October 2006 the Appeals Chamber excluded the testimony of Mr. Bagaragaza in its entirety. The Appeals Chamber held that the Statute affords the Accused with the minimum guarantee of the right to be tried in his presence; fulfilment of this right required the "physical presence" of the Accused in proceedings against him.[2] In so stating, the Appeals Chamber held that the Chamber had erred in hearing Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony in the Netherlands with the Accused and his lead counsel participating from Arusha via video-link. His "attendance" via video-link was insufficient to constitute the presence guaranteed by the Statute. In excluding the testimony of Mr. Bagaragaza, the Appeals Chamber affirmed that the Trial Chamber remains free to have the witness recalled to testify "in a manner consistent with the Appellant's fair trial rights."[3]

2. The Prosecution closed its case on 28 June 2006 and the Defence commenced the presentation of its case on 30 October 2006. On 31 October 2006, in the course of hearing the second defence witness, the parties, having seen the ruling of the Appeals Chamber moved for an adjournment in order that they may have time to consider the import of the Appeals Chamber Decision on their respective cases and to consider the appropriate action in consequence of it.

Submissions

The Prosecution Motions

3. The Prosecution submits that, in light of the importance of the testimony of Mr. Bagaragaza, serious prejudice will be caused if the Prosecution is not allowed to re-open its case to receive the testimony. The Prosecution therefore prays that the Chamber allow the re-opening of its case so that Mr. Bagaragaza can be called to testify.

4. Should the Chamber be inclined to grant the Motion for the Re-opening of the Prosecution Case the Prosecution moves, secondly, for the Chamber to reconsider its Decision of 31 January 2006 and allow the Mr. Bagaragaza to be heard via video-link.

5. The Prosecution contends that the criteria for reconsideration are met in the instant situation.[4] The Prosecution argues that the Appeals Chamber's finding of error on the part of the Chamber, and the resultant exclusion of Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony, meet the "high criteria set for the Trial Chamber to reconsider their decision."

6. The Prosecution urges the Chamber to reconsider its reservations on hearing Mr. Bagaragaza via video-link, and raises many of the arguments in favour of video-link that it raised in its original motion. Specifically, the Prosecution argues that (i) Mr. Bagaragaza is important to the Prosecution case and severe prejudice will result if the Chamber does not re-hear his testimony; (ii) his security concerns remain unchanged, and (iii) the Accused will suffer no prejudice as a result of hearing Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony via video-link. The Prosecution also argues that whereas the use of video-link testimony was previously considered to be less weighty than in-court testimony, technological developments have improved the quality of video-link testimony, allowing judges to assess credibility without impairment. Moreover, video-link testimony is a permissible exception under Rule 75, and it has been utilized and considered adequate in the jurisprudence of both the ad hoc Tribunals, even for important and sensitive witnesses.[5]

[2] See generally Appeals Chamber Decision.

[3] The Chamber notes that the present application by the Prosecutor stems from the Appeals Chamber's holding that the exclusion of witness Michel Bagaragaza's testimony pursuant to Rule 95 "does not prevent the Trial Chamber from exercising its discretion and allowing [the witness] to testify again in a manner consistent with the Appellant's fair trial rights." Appeals Chamber Decision, para. 24. In its footnote to this statement, the Appeal Chamber notes that the Defence acknowledged "that the Prosecution could seek to re-open its case in the interests of justice pursuant to Rule 85 or alternatively that the Trial Chamber could call the witness proprio motu under Rule 98." Appeals Chamber Decision, para. 24, fn 65.

[4] Motions, para. 17. According to the Prosecution, a Trial Chamber may reconsider its own prior decision (i) when a fact has been discovered that was not previously known to the Chamber; (ii) where new circumstances have arisen since the filing of the impugned decision that affect the premise of the impugned decision; or, (iii) where a party shows an error of law or the Chamber abused its discretion, and an injustice has been occasioned.

[5] Motions, paras. 22, 26.

7. Finally, the Prosecution adds that the "security and legal impediments and concerns of the witness and his counsel are currently being reviewed" and it undertakes to inform the Chamber of any new developments which may entail a change in the modalities surrounding Mr. Bagaragaza's anticipated testimony in this case.

The Defence Response

8. The Defence opposes the reopening of the Prosecution's case and the request for the taking of the testimony of Mr. Bagaragaza by video-link. The Defence argues that the relevant test to determine if a case should be re-opened depends upon the availability of the material sought to be introduced. If the material, through due diligence, could have been obtained, then the case should not be re-opened. If the evidence could not have been obtained through due diligence, then the Chamber must consider: (i) the stage of the trial at the time the application is made; (ii) the delay likely to be caused by re-opening the case; (iii) the probative value of the evidence must be such that it outweighs prejudice to the Accused; and (iv) the effect of re-opening on any co-accused.[6]

9. According to the Defence, the requirements for the Chamber to reconsider a decision have not been met.[7]

10. The Defence submits that the Prosecution has not met the four-part test for authorizing video-link testimony. Although the Defence agrees that the testimony of Mr. Bagaragaza is sufficiently important, it does not agree that taking the evidence by video-link is in the interests of justice; that Mr. Bagaragaza has given sufficient justification for his inability to come to the Tribunal; or that the rights of the Accused will not be prejudiced.

11. The Defence argues that the rights of the Accused will be severely prejudiced by the re-opening of the Prosecution case and the taking of Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony by video-link. The Defence has already (i) presented the testimony of two witnesses, one of whom commented on Mr. Bagaragaza's original evidence; and (ii) filed its pre-trial brief, witness list, and numerous witness statements. Allowing the Prosecution to lead a key witness after the Defence has revealed so much of its case is unfair and prejudicial to the Accused. Moreover, the Prosecution Motions should be denied due to the potentially lengthy delay it may cause in the case.[8]

Deliberations

Motion for the Re-opening of the Prosecution Case

12. The Chamber notes that neither the Statute nor the Rules of this Tribunal or of the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia ("ICTY") provide for the re-opening of a case by either party. Rule 85, which governs the order of presentation of evidence in trial proceedings does not envisage the re-opening of a case by either party to the proceedings and is therefore silent as to a relevant procedure.[9]

---

[6] Response, paras. 6-9.
[7] Response, para. 17.
[8] Response, paras. 40-43.
[9] Rule 85 on the Presentation of Evidence reads as follows:
(A) Each party is entitled to call witnesses and present evidence. Unless otherwise directed by the Trial Chamber in the interests of justice, evidence at the trial shall be presented in the following sequence:
(i) Evidence for the prosecution;
(ii) Evidence for the defence;
(iii) Prosecution evidence in rebuttal;
(iv) Defence evidence in rejoinder;
(v) Evidence ordered by the Trial Chamber pursuant to Rule 98.
(vi) Any relevant information that may assist the Trial Chamber in determining an appropriate sentence, if the accused is found guilty on one or more of the charges in the indictment.

13. While an application for the re-opening of the Prosecution's case has never been brought before a Trial Chamber at this Tribunal, under the jurisprudence of the ICTY a Trial Chamber may grant leave to the Prosecution to re-open its case "in order to present new evidence not previously available to it".[10] This view has recently been adopted by a Trial Chamber of the Special Court for Sierra Leone (SCSL).[11]

14. In their submissions, the Defence and the Prosecution implicitly accept that in a proper case a Trial Chamber would have jurisdiction to permit a party to re-open its case in the interests of justice.

15. The jurisprudence of both the ICTY and the SCSL require the Prosecution to meet a high threshold should it seek to present new evidence after its case is closed. In the Milošević case, the Trial Chamber held that:

> "Trial Chambers retain a general discretion under Rule 89 (D) to deny re-opening if the probative value of the proposed evidence is substantially outweighed by the need to ensure a fair trial. With respect to this weighing exercise, the Tribunal's jurisprudence clearly establishes that "it is only in exceptional circumstances where the justice of the case so demands" that a Trial Chamber should exercise its discretion to allow the Prosecution to adduce 'fresh' evidence after the parties to a criminal trial have closed their case". [Footnotes Omitted][12]

16. Guided by the Celebici Trial Decision and Celebici Appeal Judgement, three factors have been identified as being "highly relevant to the fairness to the accused of admission of fresh evidence":[13]

> (1) the stage of the trial at which the evidence is sought to be adduced;
> (2) the potential delay in the trial that admission of the evidence could cause, including the appropriateness of a possible adjournment in the overall context of the trial; and
> (3) the effect of bringing new evidence against one accused in a multi-defendant case.

17. The Chamber notes that in this case, only the first two factors apply. With regard to the first factor, the tendency has been that "the later in the trial that the application is made the less likely the Trial Chamber is to accede to the request".[14]

18. Having reviewed the relevant jurisprudence, the Chamber finds the instant situation distinguishable on the facts. Whereas the jurisprudence refers to "new evidence not previously available" to the calling party, the Chamber is here confronted with a situation of evidence previously available, but excluded to avoid any "damage [to the] integrity of the proceedings".[15] Protecting the integrity of the proceedings means ensuring fairness in the conduct of the case as far as both Parties

(B) Examination-in-chief, cross-examination and re-examination shall be allowed in each case. It shall be for the party calling a witness to examine him in chief, but a Judge may at any stage put any question to the witness.
(C) The accused may, if he so desires, appear as a witness in his own defence.

are concerned. While the Chamber must be diligent in ensuring that the Accused is not deprived of his rights, the Prosecution must also not be unduly hampered in the presentation of its case.

19. The Chamber acknowledges that the discretion to re-open a case is to be exercised only in the interest of justice. Re-opening must never be used as an opportunity for one party to take an unfair advantage over its opponent. Where re-opening is permitted, a Trial Chamber should conduct the proceedings in a manner that ensures that the opposing party is not unfairly prejudiced. In the instant case the Chamber notes that the Defence has already served its Pre-Defence Brief, and a number of defence witness statements and that two witnesses have already testified; thus providing the Prosecution with information it ought not to have before it closes its case. The Chamber will be mindful of this during the taking of the evidence of Mr. Bagaragaza, and in its assessment of his testimony at the conclusion of the case. Given the putative importance of Mr. Bagaragaza's evidence to the Prosecution's case, the circumstances in which his testimony was excluded and the Chamber's ability to ensure that the Accused is not unduly prejudiced, the Chamber finds that this application is in the interests of justice and therefore grants the Motion for the Re-opening of the Prosecution Case.

Motion for Reconsideration of the Decision of 31 January 2006

20. Having granted the Prosecution's application to re-open its case, the Chamber must now consider the Prosecution's request that the Chamber reconsider its Decision of 31 January 2006, which denied the Prosecution's original motion to hear Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony by video-link.

21. According to the jurisprudence of the Tribunal, a Chamber can reconsider its own Decision (i) when a new fact has been discovered that was not previously known to the Chamber; (ii) where new circumstances have arisen since the filing of the impugned decision that affect the premise of the impugned decision; or (iii) where a party has successfully shown an error of law or that the Chamber has abused its discretion, and this led to an injustice.[16]

22. In its Decision of 31 January 2006, the Chamber stated that it wished to hear Mr. Bagaragaza "uninterrupted and in person." The Chamber expressed concern as to its ability to effectively and accurately assess the testimony and demeanour of a witness via video-link.

23. The Prosecution suggests that the Appeals Chamber Decision is either a new fact or a new circumstance authorizing reconsideration. The Chamber disagrees. Even if the Appeals Chamber Decision excluding Mr. Bagaragaza's testimony could be considered a new fact or circumstance for the purpose of reconsideration, nothing in the Prosecution's submissions has persuaded the Chamber to re-examine its position. Moreover, the Appeals Chamber Decision does not question the Chamber's exercise of discretion denying the original motion to hear Mr. Bagaragaza via video-link. To the contrary, the following excerpts from the Appeals Chamber Decision acknowledge the legitimacy of the Chamber's concerns:

> 17. The Appeals Chamber agrees that the objectives advanced by the Trial Chamber are of general importance: witness protection, the proper assessment of an important prosecution witness, and the need to ensure a reasonably expeditious trial…
> 19. Secondly, the Appeals Chamber also accepts that the Trial Chamber's general concern over its ability to assess the credibility of a key witness is an important interest.[17]

24. Mindful of the general preference that witnesses testify before the Tribunal in Arusha,[18] the Trial Chamber requested the Registrar to submit on whether additional security measures might allow

Mr. Bagaragaza to testify in Arusha.[19] Having reviewed the security threat to Mr. Bagaragaza, the Registrar has submitted that it will be possible to provide a sufficiently high level of security to ensure his safety in Arusha.[20] Based on the Registrar's Confidential and Ex Parte Submissions, the Chamber is satisfied that Mr. Bagaragaza's presence in Arusha could be adequately secured so that it is feasible to bring him to Arusha to testify.

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, THE CHAMBER HEREBY

GRANTS the Prosecution Motion for the Re-opening of the Prosecution case for the re-call of Mr. Bagaragaza;

DENIES the Motion for Reconsideration of the Decision of 31 January 2006 for Mr. Bagaragaza to be heard by video-link and DIRECTS that the witness be heard in Arusha;

Introduction

1. On 27 and 28 June 2006, the Chamber held a voir dire hearing on the admissibility of a hand-written document entitled Curriculum Vitae ("CV") prepared by the Accused.[1] This document was included in a group of records that was tendered by the Prosecution on 3 October 2005 as Exhibit P2.[2] The CV was subsequently referred to during the Prosecution case. On 2 March 2006, the Defence formally raised an objection to the admissibility of the CV when it was referred to by witness Alison des Forges. According to the Defence, the CV, being a statement by the Accused, is not admissible into evidence because certain procedural safeguards have not been met.[3] The Defence does not contest that the Accused is the author of the document, but contend that it was improperly obtained.[4] The Prosecution contends that this document is already in evidence as Exhibit P2, and may therefore be referred to by Prosecution witnesses. Following these oral submissions, the Chamber decided to provisionally admit the document as part of Exhibit P42 and allow reference to it pending a determination of its final status. The Chamber held that a determination as to the admissibility of this document would be made following a voir dire hearing.[5]

Deliberations

Evidence from the Voir Dire Hearing

2. In January of 1998, investigators from the Prosecution received a call from a source, Mr. Pheneas Ruhumuliza, second vice-president of the national committee of the Interahamwe, informing them that the Accused had contacted him with a view to arranging a meeting because he wished to collaborate and shed light on the events surrounding the genocide in Rwanda.[6]

3. The investigators met with the Accused for the first time on the 6 or 7 of February 1998. At that initial meeting, the Accused stated he wanted to clear his name with the ICTR.[7] The Accused further claimed that he was wanted by the Rwandan Government. The investigators asked the Accused to prepare a document of what he knew and what he had done before, during and after the genocide.[8]

4. The investigators next met with the Accused around 12 February 1998, where he turned over the first 14 hand-written pages of the document requested by the investigators, now known as the CV. The Accused presented the completed CV, totaling 36 pages, at a third meeting in March 1998.[9]

5. At the last meeting, which occurred on 26 or 27 March 1998, the Accused requested money to repair his "matatu" bus. The investigators then informed the Accused that the Office of the Prosecutor had analysed the CV and had decided that they were not interested in working with the Accused as there were several contradictions and matters that remained unclear in the CV. The Prosecution was therefore not in a position to assist the Accused.[10]

6. The Prosecution maintains that at the time of the first meeting the Accused was not a suspect or a target. As far as the investigators were concerned, he was the brother of Agathe Kanziga who was the wife of the late President Habyarimana.[11] The investigators testified that the Accused was not on the list of individuals against whom the Prosecution had issued arrest warrants for Operation NAKI (Nairobi-Kigali) which was carried out in Nairobi and in the various regions.[12]

The witness testified that the Accused's statements were discredited by statements made by Kambanda after his arrest during Operation NAKI in July 1997, which was a statement given prior to the investigators first meeting with the Accused. T. 28 June 2006, p. 24. In return for the CV and the meetings, the Prosecution maintains that no offers, threats or inducements were made to the Accused, but the Accused did indicate that he wanted the Prosecution "to shed light on the genocide that took place in Rwanda in 1994, to clarify the conditions under which it arose. And he wanted [the Prosecution] to intervene with the Canadian authorities with regard to the document which led to his expulsion when he was in university - when he was in Canada trying to complete his university studies." T. 27 June 2006, pp. 11-13; T. 28 June 2006, pp. 6, 19-20. One investigator stated that the Accused did not ask for the investigator's assistance with the Canadian government, but that he only informed them that he had been deported from Canada. T. 28 June 2006, p. 23. The investigator's 7 February 1998 report states, as read into the transcript, "[i]n this regard, we inform Mr. Z that it is premature to envisage protection for himself, as well as for members of his family, before the disclosed information is the subject of a - an exhaustive analysis by the authorities of the Tribunal. It is at that moment that we shall be able to envisage various scenarios concerning his implication, his security, and his possible relocation, contingent upon an official, signed deposition made by himself." 7. The Prosecution was investigating the RTLM, however, and was in possession of information that the Accused contributed to its establishment.[13] A Prosecution report of 19 January 1998 described the Accused as "allegedly a member of the Death Squad" and a founder of the RTLM, and reported his exile in April of 1994 with members of the Habyarimana family.[14] Moreover, the name of the Accused appears on a 7 March 1997 tracking list,[15] and on the list of the first category of genocide suspects put out by the Rwandan Government, dated 30 August 1996.[16] Further, Witness SFH, who was interviewed by the Prosecution on 11-12 February 1998, stated that the Accused was involved in the killing of "Stanislaus Libakiwe".[17] He was also allegedly implicated in the murder of "Diana (sic) Fossey" and the growing of cannabis in the Nyurgwe (phonetic) region."[18] After each of the meetings with the Accused, the investigators prepared a report.[19] In the investigators report of 17 February 1998, the Accused is referred to as a "suspect".[20]

The Rights of Suspects

8. Rule 42 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), entitled "Rights of Suspects During Investigation", stipulates that:

> (A) A suspect who is to be questioned by the Prosecutor shall have the following rights, of which he shall be informed by the Prosecutor prior to questioning, in a language he speaks and understands:
> (i) The right to be assisted by counsel of his choice or to have legal assistance assigned to him without payment if he does not have sufficient means to pay for it;
> (ii) The right to have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language to be used for questioning; and
> (iii) The right to remain silent, and to be cautioned that any statement he makes shall be recorded and may be used in evidence.[21]

Rule 42 (B) governs the questioning of a suspect in the absence of counsel, and provides for the possibility of a waiver of the right by the suspect:

> (B) Questioning of a suspect shall not proceed without the presence of counsel unless the suspect has voluntarily waived his right to counsel. In case of waiver, if the suspect subsequently expresses a desire to have counsel, questioning shall thereupon cease, and shall only resume when the suspect has obtained or has been assigned counsel.

9. In order to qualify for the procedural safeguards guaranteed under Rule 42 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), the Accused would have to have been a "suspect" at the time of his meetings with the Prosecution investigators. Rule 2 of the Rules defines a suspect as "[a] person concerning whom the Prosecutor possesses reliable information which tends to show that he may have committed a crime over which the Tribunal has jurisdiction". While the evidence presented during the voir dire is not conclusive, there is evidence that the Prosecution possessed information that the Accused had committed crimes over which the Tribunal has jurisdiction. Given this uncertainty and [21] In addition, Article 17 (3) of the Statute, "Investigation and Preparation of the Indictment", provides: "[i]f questioned, the suspect shall be entitled to be assisted by Counsel of his or her own choice". Article 20 (4) (g) confers on any Accused the right "[n]ot to be compelled to testify against himself or herself or to confess guilt".

mindful of the rights of the Accused, the Chamber finds that the Accused should have been treated as a suspect during the meetings with Prosecution investigators.

10. The Chamber will now determine whether the Rule 42 procedural safeguards have been met. The Prosecution did not advise the Accused of his rights as enumerated in Rule 42 (A) during any of the meetings. Nor do the circumstances suggest that the Accused's behaviour amounted to a knowing and voluntary waiver of these rights as contemplated in Rule 42 (B).

11. The Chamber is of the view that the procedural safeguards of Rule 42 have not been met. Relying on the principles enumerated above, the Chamber is also of the view that the Prosecution has not discharged its burden of showing that the Accused voluntarily waived his right to the assistance of counsel, as required by Rule 42 (B). The Chamber will now decide on the appropriate remedy.

12. Rule 95 requires the exclusion of evidence "if obtained by methods which cast substantial doubt on its reliability or if its admission is antithetical to, and would seriously damage, the integrity of the proceedings".

13. The Chamber notes that Rule 95 does not require automatic exclusion of all unlawfully obtained evidence.[22] Rather, "in applying the provisions of Rule 95, this Tribunal considers all the relevant circumstances and will only exclude evidence if the integrity of the proceedings would indeed otherwise be seriously damaged".[23] As stated by the ICTY Chamber in Delalić et al., it is difficult to imagine a statement taken in violation of the fundamental right to the assistance of counsel which would not require its exclusion under Rule 95 as being "antithetical to, and would seriously damage, the integrity of the proceedings".[24]

14. The Chamber finds that keeping the CV of the Accused on the record would seriously damage the integrity of the proceedings.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER EXPUNGES the CV of the Accused.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA (le « Tribunal »),

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance III, composée des juges Inés Mónica Weinberg de Roca, Président, Khalida Rachid Khan et Lee Gacuiga Muthoga (la « Chambre »),

SAISI de la Requête pour la communication des éléments exculpatoires Re Dossier Le Procureur c. Ephrem Setako et Le Procureur c. Théoneste Bagosora et consorts déposée par la Défense le 7 décembre 2005 (la « Requête »),

VU la réponse du Procureur déposée le 12 décembre 2005 et la réplique de la Défense déposée le 13 décembre 2005,

VU le Statut du Tribunal (le « Statut ») et le Règlement de procédure et de preuve (le « Règlement »), notamment l'article 68 du Règlement, STATUE sur la requête sur la seule base des écritures des parties, en vertu de l'article 73 (A) du Règlement.

1. La Défense demande que lui soit communiquées les déclarations de témoin, notamment la version non caviardée de celles produites comme pièces justificatives, ou les dépositions faites dans l'affaire Setako et l'affaire Bagosora et consorts qui tendent à établir qu'Ephrem Setako et Théoneste Bagosora ne se trouvaient pas à Nyundo (préfecture de Gisenyi) les 7 et 8 avril 1994. Elle demande en outre que ces documents lui soient communiqués avant le 20 décembre 2005 et sollicite l'autorisation d'avoir des entrevues avec tous les témoins cités dans l'affaire Le Procureur c. Ephrem Setako avant l'audition du témoin ATN.

2. Rappelant que selon les dispositions de l'article 68 du Règlement elle doit fournir des éléments suffisants à première vue, pour établir que les informations demandées seraient de nature à disculper l'accusé et qu'elles sont en la possession du Procureur, la Défense affirme que ces deux conditions sont remplies en l'occurrence.

3. La Défense fait valoir que les déclarations de témoin ou les dépositions visées sont de nature à disculper l'accusé en ce qu'elles contredisent la déclaration du témoin à charge ATN selon laquelle les 7 et 8 avril 1994, Ephrem Setako et Théoneste Bagosora étaient à Nyundo où ils ont assisté, en présence de l'accusé, à une réunion qui s'est tenue sur un terrain de football. Selon la Défense, le Procureur a allégué dans l'acte d'accusation établi contre Ephrem Setako que l'accusé se trouvait à Ruhengeri aux mêmes dates, tandis que tout le monde sait que Théoneste Bagosora était à l'époque à Kigali en raison de la guerre. En ce qui concerne l'affaire Setako, la Défense ajoute que le conseil d'Ephrem Setako lui a dit que des éléments de preuve confirmant que celui-ci se trouvait à Ruhengeri les 7 et 8 avril 1994 avaient été communiqués au conseil. La Défense a alors demandé au Procureur de lui fournir ces éléments de preuve, mais le Procureur n'a pas encore répondu à sa demande.

4. Le Procureur répond que le témoin ATN ne se souvient pas de la date exacte à laquelle a réunion s'est tenue en avril 1994 et qu'on ne saurait dès lors considérer qu'un élément de preuve tendant à établir qu'Ephrem Setako et Théoneste Bagosora ne se trouvaient pas ou ne pouvaient pas se trouver à Nyundo les 7 et 8 avril 1994 est de nature à disculper l'accusé. Selon lui, le contre-interrogatoire du témoin est le meilleur moyen de déterminer ce qu'il a dit.

5. Dans sa réplique, la Défense réitère les arguments présentés dans sa requête.

6. La Chambre relève que le témoin ATN a clairement indiqué qu'il ne se souvenait pas de la date exacte de la réunion qui s'était tenue sur le terrain de football de Nyundo sis dans la préfecture de Gisenyi. Comme il n'a pas exactement dit dans sa déclaration que cette réunion avait eu lieu le 7 ou le 8 avril 1994, les informations demandées ne sont pas de nature à disculper l'accusé. Par conséquent, la requête de la Défense doit être rejetée et il n'est pas nécessaire que la Chambre vérifie si les critères prévus à l'article 68 du Règlement sont remplis.

REJETTE la requête de la Défense.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA (le « Tribunal »),

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance III, composée des juges Inés Mónica Weinberg de Roca, Président, Khalida Rachid Khan et Lee Gacuiga Muthoga (la « Chambre »),

SAISI de la requête du Procureur intitulée Prosecutor's Motion for Reconsideration of a Decision, or for Certification of Appeal, in the Alternative, déposée le 25 octobre 2005 (la « requête »),

VU la réponse de la Défense intitulée Reply to Prosecutor's Motion for Reconsideration of a Decision, or for Certification of Appeal, in the Alternative, déposée le 31 octobre 2005, et la réplique du Procureur, déposée le 31 octobre 2005,

RAPPELANT les décisions orales rendues par la Chambre lors des audiences des 5 et 18 octobre 2005[1],

STATUE sur la requête sur la seule base des mémoires des parties, en vertu de l'article 73 (A) du Règlement de procédure et de preuve (le « Règlement »).

Introduction et arguments des parties

1. Le 5 octobre 2005, dans sa déposition, le témoin APJ a évoqué deux réunions qui s'étaient tenues à Giciye en 1992. L'accusé aurait été invité à la première au cours de laquelle il aurait pris la parole pour déclarer que la population devait combattre l'ennemi (la « première réunion »). Tenue entre le bourgmestre et les conseillers, la seconde s'inscrivait dans le prolongement de la première (la « seconde réunion »). La Défense s'est opposée à ce que ces deux réunions soient admises en preuve. Dans sa décision orale du 5 octobre 2005, la Chambre n'a autorisé que la présentation des éléments de preuve relatifs à la première réunion, celle au cours de laquelle l'accusé aurait prononcé un discours, au motif que l'acte d'accusation modifié, le mémoire préalable au procès et la déclaration du témoin ne comportaient qu'une allégation générale faisant état de réunions tenues en 1994[2]. Elle a décidé d'autoriser la présentation des éléments de preuve relatifs à la première réunion parce qu'il était allégué que l'accusé y avait participé.

2. Le 18 octobre 2005, dans sa déposition, le témoin SGP a parlé d'une réunion bien connue convoquée par Léon Mugesera qui s'était tenue le 22 novembre 1992. La Défense a fait une objection qui a été retenue par la Chambre (la « décision orale du 18 octobre 2005 » ou « décision attaquée »), au motif que la réunion en question était bien connue, présentait un intérêt pour la cause et aurait dû être mentionnée dans l'acte d'accusation que le Procureur avait dûment eu l'occasion de modifier plusieurs fois. La Chambre a donné raison à la Défense, le Procureur ayant eu connaissance de l'existence de cette réunion depuis au moins 2001[3].

3. Le Procureur demande à présent à la Chambre de réexaminer la décision orale du 18 octobre 2005, au motif que celle-ci ne cadre ni avec la décision du 5 octobre 2005 ni avec la jurisprudence du Tribunal fondées sur l'article 89 (C) du Règlement. Dans le cas contraire, il sollicite l'autorisation de faire appel de la décision orale du 18 octobre 2005.

4. La Défense s'oppose aux deux solutions proposées dans la requête.

Délibération

5. Selon la jurisprudence du Tribunal, une Chambre peut réexaminer sa décision (i) s'il apparaît un fait nouveau dont elle n'avait pas déjà connaissance[4], (ii) s'il y a eu après la décision attaquée des circonstances nouvelles qui en invalident la motivation[5] ou, (iii) si une partie a réussi à établir que la Chambre avait commis une erreur de droit ou abusé de son pouvoir d'appréciation[6] et il en est résulté une injustice[7]. En l'espèce, il ne ressort pas de l'argumentation du Procureur que l'une des ces conditions est remplie. En conséquence, la Chambre ne réexaminera pas la décision orale du 18 octobre 2005.

6. Aux termes de l'article 73 (B) du Règlement, la Chambre peut accorder l'autorisation d'interjeter appel si (i) la décision contestée touche une question susceptible de compromettre sensiblement (a) l'équité et la rapidité du procès ou (b) son issue, et (ii) son règlement immédiat par la Chambre d'appel pourrait, de l'avis de la Chambre de première instance, concrètement faire progresser la procédure.

7. Ayant examiné les arguments du Procureur, la Chambre estime qu'aucune des conditions fixées à l'article 73 (B) n'a été remplie. En conséquence, elle doit rejeter la requête.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

REJETTE la requête du Procureur dans son intégralité.

Arusha, le 31 janvier 2006.

VU le Statut du Tribunal (le « Statut ») et le Règlement de procédure et de preuve (le « Règlement »), et plus particulièrement ses articles 46, 66, 68 (D), 73 (F), 75 (A) et 75 (B), STATUE à présent sur les requêtes, uniquement sur la seule base des mémoires déposés par les parties, conformément à l'article 73 (A) du Règlement.

A. Jonction des requêtes

1. La Chambre est d'avis que ces requêtes sont liées et qu'il convient de les examiner ensemble. Elle statuera sur elles dans l'ordre suivant : requête en retrait des mesures de protection, requête pour sanctions, requête en communication de la Défense et Requête fondée sur l'article 66 (C) du Règlement, requête en vue d'une déposition par vidéoconférence et Requête demandant à la Chambre de statuer sur les requêtes pendantes.

B. Requête en retrait des mesures de protection

2. La Défense prie la Chambre de déclarer que son ordonnance prescrivant des mesures de protection n'est plus applicable au témoin ADE. À l'appui de sa demande, elle fait valoir que malgré l'interdiction faite par le Tribunal de divulguer l'identité du témoin ADE, son nom a été révélé au public, par la négligence, soit du Procureur, soit du témoin lui-même, soit de sa famille, soit d'autres personnes.

[9] Décision sur la requête du Procureur en prescription de mesures de protection des victimes et des témoins de crimes allégués dans l'acte d'accusation (Chambre de première instance), 25 février 2003.

3. L'ordonnance prescrivant des mesures de protection demeurera en vigueur, la Chambre n'étant pas convaincue que la Défense a démontré que la situation a évolué au point de justifier la révocation de ladite ordonnance.

C. Requête pour sanctions

4. Le Procureur fait valoir que la déclaration caviardée du témoin ADE a été communiquée à des parties et diffusée sur Internet en violation des mesures de protection ordonnées par la Chambre. Par ailleurs, la Défense a déposé sa Requête en communication comme document public le 6 décembre 2005 alors qu'elle aurait dû être déposée à titre confidentiel ou strictement confidentiel, étant donné que ses annexes contenaient des éléments d'information identifiant le témoin ADE.

5. De l'avis du Procureur, ces initiatives ne se justifiaient pas, elles n'ont servi qu'à révéler l'identité du témoin ADE au public. Le Procureur prévient en outre que ces actions risquent à la fois de compromettre les efforts qu'il a déployés pour obtenir que vienne déposer le témoin ADE et de dissuader les témoins potentiels de coopérer, car elles créent l'impression que le Tribunal est incapable de protéger les témoins ou les victimes.

6. Le Procureur demande à la Chambre d'enjoindre à la Défense d'attribuer à sa Requête en communication le statut de « document confidentiel » et non plus celui de « document public », de dire que l'ajout injustifié des photographies à cette requête constitue un abus de procédure, d'ordonner le non-paiement des honoraires relatifs aux trente et une pages d'annexes et d'avertir le conseil de la Défense que des actes similaires pourraient à l'avenir entraîner les sanctions prévues à l'article 46 du Règlement.

7. En réponse, la Défense soutient que la Requête pour sanctions du Procureur devrait être rejetée, celui-ci n'ayant pas établi que le conseil de la Défense était responsable de la divulgation des informations relatives au témoin ADE et le conseil n'ayant pas commis d'erreur pouvant justifier des sanctions. La Défense précise qu'elle n'avait pas exigé de sanctions contre le Procureur, responsable, selon elle, de ne pas avoir correctement caviardé certaines des déclarations communiquées.

8. La Chambre déplore que la déclaration caviardée du témoin ADE ait été révélée à des parties en violation de l'ordonnance prescrivant des mesures de protection et que la Défense ait déposé sa Requête en communication comme document public alors que celle-ci aurait dû être déposée à titre confidentiel ou strictement confidentiel. Dans le but de limiter la diffusion de ces informations confidentielles, la Chambre invitera le Greffier à attribuer à cette écriture le statut de document confidentiel. Elle n'imposera pas de sanctions à l'encontre du conseil de la Défense, mais elle tient à rappeler aux deux parties qu'elles doivent faire preuve de la diligence voulue lorsqu'elles déposent des documents contenant des éléments d'information confidentiels.

D. Requête de la Défense en communication et requête fondée sur l'article 66 (C) du Règlement

9. La Défense demande à la Chambre d'ordonner la communication de tous les avantages dont a bénéficié le témoin ADE depuis 1995, de même que toutes les nouvelles informations fournies par celui-ci en novembre 2005.

10. La Défense fait valoir que le témoin ADE a bénéficié de nombreux avantages de la part du Procureur. Deux demandes de la Défense pour obtenir des informations à ce sujet sont restées sans réponse. Étant donné que ces avantages pourraient porter atteinte à la crédibilité des éléments de preuve à charge ainsi qu'il est dit à l'article 68 (A) du Règlement, la Défense demande la communication de tous les avantages et paiements dont a bénéficié le témoin ADE[10].

[10] Le Procureur c. Édouard Karemera et consorts, affaire N°ICTR-98-44-I, Décision sur la requête de la Défense en communication de moyens de preuve à décharge, 7 octobre 2003, par. 16.

11. En réponse, le Procureur se réfère aux arguments avancés dans sa Requête fondée sur l'article 66 (C) du Règlement, qu'il a déposée après la Requête en communication de la Défense et dans laquelle il demande à la Chambre de rejeter cette dernière requête. Il y demande aussi à la Chambre de le dispenser, en vertu des articles 66 (C) et 68 (D) du Règlement, de communiquer à la Défense certaines informations relatives aux paiements et avantages qu'il reconnaît avoir accordés au témoin ADE et à sa famille. De l'avis du Procureur, ces informations ne sont pas visées par l'article 68 du Règlement car elles ne sont pas de nature à disculper l'accusé. Tout en admettant que les informations ou les pièces relatives aux avantages consentis ou promesses faites aux témoins ou aux victimes au-delà de ce qui est raisonnablement nécessaire devraient être communiquées en ce qu'ils pourraient porter atteinte à la crédibilité des témoins, le Procureur invoque la jurisprudence pour soutenir que certains défraiements, comme pour les déplacements liés aux enquêtes et aux auditions, ne tombent pas sous le coup de l'article 68[11]. Selon le Procureur, tous les paiements et avantages consentis au témoin étaient raisonnablement nécessaires : d'abord pour pouvoir l'interroger à temps plein pendant une longue période et compenser la perte de revenus dont il avait pourtant besoin pour faire vivre sa famille. Il fallait ensuite procurer à la famille les ressources nécessaires pour permettre sa réinstallation, pour assurer sa sécurité et pour contribuer à sa réinsertion sociale dans un nouveau pays. Enfin, il fallait avancer au témoin ADE les fonds nécessaires pour passer les appels téléphoniques nécessaires à la poursuite des enquêtes. En bref, tous ces avantages et paiements lui ont été consentis ainsi qu'à sa famille afin de le replacer dans la situation qui aurait été la sienne s'il n'avait pas aidé le Procureur à s'acquitter de sa mission.

12. Toujours selon le Procureur, ADE est un témoin disposant d'informations privilégiées qui, du fait de sa coopération, assume un risque accru : celui d'être considéré comme traître et de s'exposer à des représailles. Il pourrait donc être amené à refuser de témoigner ou à cesser sa coopération avec le Bureau du Procureur.

13. Le Procureur soutient encore que, des informations ayant été communiquées irrégulièrement comme il l'a relevé dans sa Requête pour sanctions, il communique à la Défense des informations respectant les normes énoncées dans la décision Karemera relative aux témoins rémunérés : il a ainsi communiqué le texte d'une déclaration sous serment d'un enquêteur, où sont indiquées les indemnités de subsistance versées et les crédits d'appel avancés au témoin ADE. Il fait également observer que des fonds ont été engagés pour des billets aller simple en faveur de la famille du témoin, mais sans en indiquer les montants ni les dates. Le Procureur précise qu'il a aussi fourni le budget approuvé pour la réinstallation de la famille du témoin ADE, en conformité avec une autre décision rendue en l'affaire Karemera, où la Chambre avait indiqué qu'il n'était pas nécessaire de connaître les montants dépensés pour la réinstallation d'un témoin et de sa famille pour décider de la crédibilité de celui-ci[12]. Le Procureur craint également que leur lieu de réinstallation puisse être identifié par la révélation des montants engagés. Il affirme qu'il est prêt à remettre aux juges, en mains propres, le budget approuvé, dans sa version non caviardée si on le lui demande. Il s'engage en outre à fournir, à huis clos, conformément aux articles 66 (C) et 68 (D) du Règlement, tous les détails non communiqués à la Défense, si la Chambre le souhaite.

14. En réponse, la Défense rappelle les conditions énoncées à l'article 68 (D) du Règlement, qui ne sont pas remplies en l'espèce. En particulier, le Procureur n'a pas fourni à la Chambre, siégeant à huis clos, toutes les informations pertinentes, comme il aurait dû le faire. Par conséquent, la requête n'a pas de fondement en droit et devrait être rejetée.

15. Le Procureur réplique qu'il a effectué des recherches approfondies dans tous ses dossiers et qu'il a fourni à la Défense tous les documents en sa possession concernant les sommes versées au témoin ADE. Il maintient qu'il n'existe pas d'autres décomptes ou de nouvelles informations et qu'il n'a pas en sa possession de nouveaux relevés d'appels téléphoniques passés par le témoin ADE, la seule exception étant l'achat de cartes téléphoniques dont les détails ne seront fournis qu'aux seuls juges.

16. Le Procureur prévient que la mort récente de Juvénal Uwilingiyimana, ancien haut cadre rwandais avec qui des entretiens avaient débuté, montre à suffisance les risques qu'encourent les témoins disposant d'informations privilégiées qui coopèrent avec le Tribunal. Le Procureur affirme que des membres de la famille du témoin ADE ont été contactés en vue de décourager celui-ci de venir témoigner.

17. La Défense rétorque que les informations communiquées dans le document intitulé « Prosecutor's Supplemental Information »[13], déposé à titre confidentiel et inter partes le 15 décembre 2005, sont incomplètes. Elle fournit des exemples du type d'informations complémentaires qu'elle cherche à obtenir du Procureur[14]. Elle précise qu'à son avis, les avantages énormes consentis au témoin ADE fournissent, de par eux-mêmes, une bonne incitation à mentir et qu'il est donc important de déterminer la totalité des paiements et avantages en jeu.

18. La Chambre rappelle qu'en application des articles 66 (C) et 68 (D) du Règlement, le Procureur peut être dispensé de l'obligation de communiquer des informations ou des pièces si une telle communication « pourrait hypothéquer des enquêtes en cours ou ultérieures, ou pourrait, pour toute autre raison, être contraire à l'intérêt public ou porter atteinte à la sécurité d'un État ».

19. La Défense demande que lui soient communiquées deux principales catégories d'informations. En premier lieu, elle demande à connaître tous les paiements et avantages dont a bénéficié le témoin ADE depuis 1995. Deuxièmement, elle cherche à obtenir davantage de détails, notamment tous les documents et autres éléments d'information concernant la réinstallation de la famille du témoin, tous les relevés des appels téléphoniques effectués par le témoin, ainsi que d'autres renseignements.

20. La Chambre estime que les détails concernant les paiements et les avantages perçus devraient être communiqués, dans l'intérêt de la justice. Cependant, elle garde aussi à l'esprit que le témoin ADE est un proche des milieux du pouvoir et qu'il encourt de plus grands risques en acceptant de coopérer.

21. Le Procureur affirme qu'en communiquant le budget caviardé comme il l'a fait, il s'est conformé à une décision rendue en l'affaire Karemera citée plus haut[15]. Le Procureur a fourni à la Chambre, en audience à huis clos et sans débat contradictoire, un document complet et non caviardé du budget consacré au témoin ADE.

22. La Chambre tient à distinguer les circonstances de l'espèce de celles de l'affaire Karemera. Dans cette dernière affaire, le bénéficiaire ne recevait pas les paiements directement du Tribunal mais par le biais d'un programme de protection de témoins, géré par un État donné. En d'autres termes, le Tribunal prenait à sa charge les prestations mais celles-ci étaient versées et contrôlées par les autorités nationales.

23. Compte tenu de toutes les informations dont elle dispose, la Chambre considère que, dans l'intérêt de la justice et de la transparence et vu l'ampleur des décaissements, le montant total des paiements et des avantages devrait être communiqué à la Défense, même si « la valeur monétaire libellée, en quelque monnaie que ce soit, des dépenses effectuées par le Gouvernement intéressé, dépend du coût de la vie dans le pays en question, du taux de change et de divers autres facteurs économiques exogènes[16] ». Sans révéler le lieu où se trouve la famille du témoin ADE et sans indiquer le coût de chacun des services et des biens fournis ou tous autres détails qui pourraient compromettre les mesures de protection en vigueur, la Chambre a pu apprendre que le montant total des paiements et des avantages prévus au budget s'élève à deux cent mille dollars des États-Unis. En conséquence, le Procureur doit certifier ce montant, en prenant en considération les sommes déjà décaissées et les dépenses à venir. La Chambre souligne cependant que le Procureur ne doit vérifier et certifier que le montant total des dépenses déjà effectuées et à venir. Il ne s'agit pas de dresser l'inventaire des dépenses engagées en faveur du témoin.

24. La Chambre aborde maintenant les autres questions, notamment la communication de tous les documents, de tous les détails concernant la réinstallation de la famille du témoin ainsi que de tous les relevés des appels téléphoniques faits par ce dernier. La Chambre rappelle que la charge de la preuve incombe à la Défense, celle-ci étant la partie qui allègue une violation de l'article du Règlement[17]. Comme elle l'a indiqué au paragraphe 23 plus haut, la Chambre considère qu'il n'est pas nécessaire de communiquer à la Défense d'autres documents en rapport avec les paiements et les avantages dont a bénéficié le témoin.

E. Requête en vue d'une déposition par vidéoconférence

25. Le Procureur demande que la déposition du témoin ADE soit recueillie par vidéoconférence. La deuxième session du procès a débuté le 23 janvier 2006 et il est prévu que le témoin ADE soit appelé à la barre du 27 février au 3 mars 2006. Se fondant sur les articles 75 (A) et 75 (B) du Règlement, le Procureur soutient que les impératifs de sécurité commandent que la déposition du témoin ADE soit entendue par vidéoconférence.

26. Le Procureur invoque la jurisprudence du Tribunal en la matière[18] pour affirmer que les circonstances de l'espèce satisfont aux critères établis pour autoriser une déposition par vidéoconférence. Tout d'abord, celle-ci est suffisamment importante car le témoin ADE témoignera sur les cinq chefs de l'acte d'accusation. En deuxième lieu, cette mesure est dans l'intérêt de la justice étant donné que le témoin ADE est le seul qui soit en mesure de révéler des éléments de preuve à la fois sur la conspiration de l'Akazu et sur les agissements de l'accusé avant et après le 6 avril 1994. En troisième lieu, le Procureur indique que le témoin ne souhaite pas se rendre à Arusha par crainte pour sa sécurité, compte tenu de son appartenance au cercle fermé de l'Akazu. Des événements récents, notamment la publication sur Internet d'une de ses déclarations, le fait que Juvénal Uwilingiyimana ait été probablement assassiné et les menaces reçues par la famille du témoin ont exacerbé son sentiment de vulnérabilité. C'est pourquoi il a signé un accord avec le Procureur dans lequel il précise qu'il n'acceptera de déposer devant le Tribunal qu'à condition qu'il ne soit pas obligé de se rendre à Arusha. Enfin, le Procureur fait valoir que le droit de l'accusé à un procès équitable ne sera compromis en aucune manière si la demande est acceptée, car il s'engage à se conformer aux critères établis en matière de déposition par vidéoconférence[19].

27. La Défense oppose une différente interprétation du droit en la matière. Elle avance trois exigences essentielles pour qu'une déposition par vidéoconférence soit autorisée : l'importance de la déposition, l'incapacité ou le refus du témoin de se présenter à l'audience et la question de savoir si des raisons valables ont été fournies pour justifier cette incapacité ou ce refus. De plus, c'est à l'aune de ces mêmes critères que doit s'apprécier la question de savoir si une telle autorisation serait dans l'intérêt de la justice.

[19] Le Procureur se réfère aux critères établis dans Le Procureur c. Duško Tadić, affaire N°IT-94-1-T, Décision relative aux requêtes de la Défense aux fins de citer à comparaître et de protéger les témoins à décharge et de présenter des témoignages par vidéoconférence (« Décision Tadić relative au recueil de témoignages par vidéoconférence »), 25 juin 1996, par. 22, décision qui a été approuvée dans des affaires ultérieures, notamment dans Le Procureur c. Delalić et consorts, Décision relative à la requête aux fins de permettre aux témoins K, et M de témoigner par voie de vidéoconférence, 28 mai 1997.

28. Cela étant, la Défense réplique à chacun des quatre critères énoncés par le Procureur. Premièrement, la déposition du témoin ADE sera sans importance étant donné qu'il s'agit principalement de témoignages de seconde main qui seront pour la plupart inadmissibles. Deuxièmement, en ce qui concerne le refus du témoin de se rendre à Arusha, la Défense soutient que l'accord conclu entre lui et le Procureur n'est pas valable dans la mesure où celui-ci usurpe le rôle de la Chambre lorsqu'il prétend garantir au témoin que sa déposition sera entendue par vidéoconférence. Selon la Défense, cela risque de discréditer l'administration de la justice. La Défense nie également que la déposition du témoin ADE ait été diffusée sur Internet. Elle relève par ailleurs qu'aucun des témoins à charge s'étant rendu à Arusha n'a été inquiété. Troisièmement, elle fait valoir que le droit de confronter directement l'accusateur est un principe fondamental en droit et que l'accusé subira un préjudice considérable s'il n'a pas l'occasion de confronter le témoin en audience publique. Enfin, la Défense considère l'intérêt de la justice comme indissociable de la nécessité pour les Rwandais de panser leurs plaies, ce qui exige un débat public où les témoins sont présents en personne.

29. La Défense conteste énergiquement l'interprétation que fait le Procureur des circonstances du décès de Juvénal Uwilingiyimana, elle laisse entendre que ce témoin potentiel n'a pas été assassiné pour l'empêcher de témoigner, mais qu'il pourrait s'agir d'un suicide. Toujours selon la Défense, Juvénal Uwilingiyimana a subi des pressions de la part du Procureur en vue de l'amener à mentir et elle accuse en outre le Procureur d'avoir fabriqué des preuves.

30. En réponse, le Procureur soutient que la mort de Juvénal Uwilingiyimana tend à confirmer le bien-fondé de sa requête en faisant ressortir les risques que courent les personnes disposant d'informations privilégiées qui acceptent de témoigner. Il ajoute que la vidéoconférence n'empêchera nullement l'accusé de confronter l'accusateur, seul changera le moyen de communication utilisé.

31. La norme applicable pour autoriser les dépositions par vidéoconférence a été examinée de manière approfondie dans la décision intitulée Decision on Prosecution Request for Testimony of Witness BT Via Video-Link[20]. Il y a lieu d'ordonner le recours à la vidéoconférence lorsque celle-ci est dans l'intérêt de la justice comme l'a précisé la jurisprudence du Tribunal. La Chambre tiendra compte en particulier de l'importance de la déposition, de l'incapacité ou du refus du témoin de se présenter à l'audience et de la validité des motifs invoqués pour justifier cette incapacité ou ce refus[21].

32. La Chambre est consciente de l'importance que pourrait revêtir la déposition du témoin ADE pour la cause du Procureur. Elle est également convaincue par les arguments de celui-ci selon lesquels le témoin encourrait un risque accru s'il devait se rendre à Arusha pour y être entendu. Cependant, elle garde aussi à l'esprit que la Défense tient à confronter ce témoin en personne et qu'elle a parfaitement le droit de confronter l'accusateur. Pour sa part, la Chambre se préoccupe de savoir s'il est possible ou non d'évaluer réellement et correctement la déposition et l'attitude d'un témoin entendu par voie de vidéoconférence. Compte tenu de l'importance que revêt la déposition de ce témoin pour la cause du Procureur, la Chambre tient à l'entendre en personne et sans interruption.

33. Elle souligne que l'article 90 (A) du Règlement qui dit qu'« [e]n principe, les Chambres entendent les témoins en personne » énonce un principe général. Ainsi qu'il a été indiqué dans la Décision Tadić relative au recueil de témoignages par vidéoconférence, « …un témoignage présenté par voie de vidéoconférence… est moins probant qu'un témoignage présenté dans le prétoire. Les témoignages par voie de vidéoconférence doivent, par conséquent, être évités autant que possible »[22]. La Chambre fait également observer, ainsi qu'il a été dit dans la Décision Bagosora relative au recueil d'un témoignage par vidéoconférence que « les témoignages recueillis par des moyens électroniques risquaient d'être moins probants que ceux qui sont présentés dans le prétoire si la qualité de la transmission gêne la Chambre dans son appréciation de la déposition du témoin[23] » [traduction]. Étant donné que le souci de la Chambre est d'éviter qu'une transmission de mauvaise qualité ne vienne perturber la déposition d'un témoin aussi important, elle estime qu'il est de son intérêt de bénéficier de la présence physique du témoin au procès.

34. C'est pourquoi la Chambre conclut qu'il convient d'ordonner dans l'intérêt de la justice que toutes les dispositions utiles soient prises pour que le témoin ADE soit entendu à La Haye, en présence de toutes les parties, à la date que fixera le Tribunal en application de l'article 4 du Règlement.

F. Requête demandant à la Chambre de statuer sur les requêtes pendantes 35. Dans cette requête, la Défense demande à la Chambre de statuer sur toutes les requêtes pendantes devant elle. Point n'est besoin de l'examiner puisque la Chambre a statué sur toutes les requêtes concernant le témoin ADE.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

I. REJETTE la Requête en retrait des mesures de protection ;

II. REJETTE la requête pour sanctions et INVITE le Greffier à redonner à la Requête en communication de la Défense la classification « confidentiel » ;

III. FAIT DROIT en partie à la Requête en communication de la Défense et INVITE le Procureur à communiquer à la Défense le montant total certifié de tous les paiements et avantages visés plus haut ;

IV. REJETTE la Requête en vue d'une déposition par vidéoconférence présentée par le Procureur ;

V. INVITE le Président du Tribunal, en application de l'article 4 du Règlement, à autoriser la Chambre à siéger à La Haye, à la date qui sera fixée en consultation avec les parties et le Greffe, pour entendre la déposition du témoin ADE.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA (le « Tribunal »),

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance III, composée des juges Inés Mónica Weinberg de Roca, Présidente de Chambre, Khalida Rachid Khan et Lee Gacuiga Muthoga (la « Chambre »),

SAISI de la requête du Procureur intitulée Prosecutor's Urgent Video Link and other Reliefs Motion for Witness BPP (made under Rules 58, 73, 75 and 92 bis of the Rules of Evidence and Procedure and Article 28 of the Statute of the Tribunal), déposée le 15 mars 2006,

VU les actes de procédure suivants : la réponse et la contre-requête de la Défense intitulées Interlocutory Defense Response to Prosecutor's Public Urgent Video Link and other Relief Motion for Witness BPP - Interlocutory Motion to Suspend the Prosecution Motion Temporarily, déposées le 20 mars 2006 ; la réplique du Procureur, intitulée Prosecutor's Response to Defence Interlocutory Motion, déposée le même jour ; la réponse et la contre-requête modifiées de la Défense, intitulées Amended Interlocutory Defense Response to Prosecutor's Public Urgent Video Link and other Relief Motion for Witness BPP - Interlocutory Motion to Suspend the Prosecution Motion Temporarily, déposées le 21 mars 2006 ; la réplique du Procureur intitulée Prosecutor's Reply to Defence Amended Interlocutory Motion, déposée le 22 mars 2006,

RAPPELANT la décision de la Chambre autorisant le Procureur à retirer certains témoins de sa liste et à y ajouter le témoin BPP[1], STATUANT sur la base des conclusions écrites des parties comme l'y autorise l'article 73 (A) du Règlement.

Introduction

1. Le procès de Protais Zigiranyirazo s'est ouvert le 3 octobre 2005. Au cours des deux premières sessions consacrées à la présentation des moyens à charge[2], la Chambre a entendu 19 témoins à charge, dont un témoin expert. La troisième et dernière session du procès consacrée aux moyens du Procureur doit s'ouvrir le 5 juin 2006[3]. Le 19 janvier 2006, la Chambre a accordé au Procureur l'autorisation de modifier la liste de ses témoins en y ajoutant le témoin BPP et en en retirant certains autres. Le Procureur demande à présent à la Chambre d'autoriser le recueil de la déposition du témoin BPP par liaison vidéo depuis la Belgique et de solliciter la coopération des autorités belges à l'effet de contraindre le témoin à déposer selon cette formule. A titre subsidiaire, le Procureur demande à la Chambre que la déclaration écrite du témoin BPP soit versée au dossier au lieu de son témoignage oral, comme le prévoit l'article 92 bis du Règlement.

2. En réponse, la Défense sollicite une suspension de la procédure pour ce qui concerne la requête du Procureur, au motif que celui-ci n'a pas communiqué certaines annexes confidentielles dont elle a besoin pour répondre pleinement à la requête. Le Procureur réplique que les annexes visées ont été envoyées à la Défense par télécopie et il joint la preuve de notification. Accusant ensuite réception des annexes, mais maintenant que le refus du témoin BPP de comparaître à Arusha n'a pas été établi par le Procureur, la Défense réitère sa contre-requête en suspension de la procédure jusqu'à ce que le Procureur fournisse les éléments qu'elle réclame.

3. La Chambre procédera à l'examen de la contre-requête de la Défense avant de passer à celui de la requête du Procureur.

A. Contre-requête aux fins de suspension de la procédure

4. La Défense attend du Procureur la preuve que BPP refuse de comparaître à Arusha. Elle demande également que lui soit communiqué le procès-verbal auquel le Procureur a fait référence à l'audience à huis clos du 7 mars 2006. Dans sa réplique, le Procureur précise que le procès-verbal en question n'est autre que le « pro justitia » daté du 17 février 2006, lequel a déjà été communiqué à la Défense.

5. La Chambre rappelle que, compte tenu des règles déontologiques auxquelles ils sont tenus, les conseils qui comparaissent devant elle sont réputés agir de bonne foi et présenter véridiquement les faits. La Chambre rappelle également que, dans sa déclaration du 25 novembre 2005, BPP a indiqué qu'elle n'était pas disposée à déposer à Arusha. Le Procureur dit avoir tenté en vain d'obtenir de celle-ci qu'elle vienne à la barre. Le témoin craint pour sa sécurité après la mort récente d'un témoin à charge en Belgique. Dans ces circonstances, la Chambre retient les circonstances présentées par le Procureur, sauf à modifier sa position en cas de preuve contraire. La contre-requête ne saurait donc être accueillie. La Chambre examine à présent les mesures alternatives sollicitées par le Procureur.

B. Déposition par liaison vidéo

6. S'appuyant sur l'article 75 (A) du Règlement, le Procureur demande, à titre de mesure exceptionnelle, que BPP dépose par liaison vidéo. Selon lui, elle devrait déclarer qu'au petit matin du 7 avril 1994, elle se trouvait dans la résidence présidentielle à Kanombe en même temps que l'accusé.

7. Le Procureur affirme par ailleurs que BPP déposera depuis la Belgique, par liaison vidéo, si les autorités belges lui en donnent l'ordre. Il fait valoir qu'en application de l'article 28 (2) du Statut et de l'article 58 du Règlement, considérés à la lumière de la résolution 955 (1994) du Conseil de sécurité de l'ONU et de la législation belge, le Tribunal est habilité, pour obtenir des témoignages et des éléments de preuve, à solliciter l'assistance du Gouvernement belge et à lui demander, en l'occurrence, de délivrer à l'intéressée une injonction à comparaître aux fins de ladite déposition.

8. La Défense n'a pas répondu à cet argument, déclarant ne pas disposer d'informations quant au refus du témoin de se présenter devant la Chambre à Arusha.

9. Conformément à la jurisprudence établie du Tribunal pénal international pour l'ex-Yougoslavie et du Tribunal de céans, la déposition par liaison vidéo est une mesure de protection qui est prescrite compte tenu de l'importance du témoignage prévu, de l'incapacité ou du refus du témoin de se présenter à la barre et du juste équilibre à réaliser entre l'intérêt de la justice et les droits de l'accusé. Dans une décision rendue en la matière le 25 juin 1996, la Chambre de première instance saisie de l'affaire Tadić a rappelé la règle générale selon laquelle le témoin devait comparaître en personne, la déposition par liaison vidéo ne se justifiant que dans des circonstances exceptionnelles, lorsque certains critères étaient remplis[4]. Une autre Chambre de première instance, statuant le 28 mai 1997 en l'affaire Delalić et consorts, a réitéré la règle en y ajoutant la nécessité de tenir compte de l'intérêt de la justice et des droits de l'accusé[5]. Le Tribunal a suivi ces précédents dans plusieurs affaires[6].

Duško Tadić,* affaire N°IT-94-1-T, Chambre de première instance, Décision relative aux requêtes de la Défense aux fins de citer à comparaître et de protéger les témoins à décharge et de présenter des témoignages par vidéoconférence, 25 juin 1996. « 19. On ne saurait trop souligner que le principe est qu'un témoin doit être physiquement présent au siège du Tribunal. Par conséquent, la Chambre de première instance n'autorisera le témoignage par voie de vidéoconférence que si certains critères sont observés, à savoir la démonstration que le témoignage d'un témoin est suffisamment important pour que son absence entache les poursuites d'iniquité et que le témoin n'est pas en mesure ou refuse de venir au Tribunal international ».

[5] Le Procureur c. Delalić et consorts, Chambre de première instance, Décision relative à la requête aux fins de permettre aux témoins K. L et M de témoigner par voie de vidéoconférence, 28 mai 1997. « 15. Nous devons souligner ici de nouveau

10. En l'espèce, le témoignage visé est important puisqu'il porte sur la présence alléguée de l'accusé à la résidence présidentielle de Kanombe, c'est-à-dire sur un fait directement lié aux allégations portées dans l'acte d'accusation. Le Procureur a également fait état du refus du témoin de comparaître à Arusha.

11. Comme il est question de la présence de l'accusé à la résidence présidentielle de Kanombe et qu'il est possible que l'accusé plaide l'alibi, l'intérêt de la justice commande que le témoin soit entendu à ce sujet. La Chambre est d'avis que la déposition sollicitée ne portera pas atteinte aux droits de l'accusé puisque celui-ci aura la possibilité de contre-examiner le témoin et de contester les éléments de preuve qu'il présentera.

12. Pour ces raisons, la Chambre conclut que la requête tendant à ce que BPP dépose par liaison vidéo doit être accueillie. A cet égard, elle sollicitera la coopération des autorités belges pour ce qui est d'assurer la comparution du témoin et de fournir une assistance technique aux fins de sa déposition depuis la Belgique.

C. Admission de la déclaration écrite de BPP en application de l'article 92 bis du Règlement

13. Le Procureur, se fondant sur la décision rendue en la matière par la Chambre d'appel en l'affaire Galić, fait valoir que la déclaration écrite de BPP répond aux conditions suivantes: (i) elle ne tend pas à établir les actes et le comportement reprochés à l'accusé dans l'acte d'accusation, (ii) elle tombe sous le coup de l'article 89 (C) puisqu'elle se rapporte aux crimes imputés dans l'acte d'accusation, et (iii) elle fournit des éléments de preuve qui portent sur les actes et le comportement l'importance de la règle générale exigeant la présence du témoin au prétoire, destinée à garantir la confrontation entre témoin et accusé et à permettre aux Juges d'observer l'attitude du témoin durant son audition. Cependant, chacun sait que les vidéoconférences ne permettent pas seulement aux Chambres d'entendre les personnes se trouvant dans l'impossibilité de venir témoigner devant la Chambre de première instance à La Haye ou ne le souhaitant pas; ce moyen permet aussi aux juges d'observer l'attitude du témoin à la barre. De plus, point important, il convient de souligner que le Conseil de la Défense peut ainsi mener son contre-interrogatoire du témoin et que les Juges ont tout loisir de poser des questions pour clarifier les faits sur lesquels porte le témoignage. En fait, une vidéoconférence n'est que l'extension de la Chambre de première instance au lieu où se trouve le témoin. Donc, ce moyen ne prive pas l'accusé du droit de confronter le témoin, et il ne perd rien de substantiel du fait de l'absence physique de celui-ci. En fin de compte, on ne saurait soutenir que les dépositions par vidéoconférence lèsent le droit de l'accusé de confronter le témoin. L'article 21 (4) (e) n'est enfreint d'aucune manière ». 17. Le recueil d'un témoignage par vidéoconférence constitue une exception à la règle générale. La Chambre de première instance aura donc soin d'éviter tout recours abusif à cet expédient. La Chambre de première instance (composée de son Président, Mme le Juge McDonald, et des juges Stephen et Vohrah) a déclaré, dans la Décision Tadić, que le témoignage par liaison vidéo ne sera autorisé que si (a) ladite déposition est suffisamment importante pour que son absence entache les poursuites d'iniquité, et (b) le témoin n'est pas en mesure ou refuse, pour de bonnes raisons, de venir au Tribunal international à La Haye (paragraphe 19). La présente Chambre retient les conclusions de cette Décision et rappelle que, étant donné les circonstances particulières entourant ce Tribunal international, « il est dans l'intérêt de la justice que la Chambre de première instance fasse preuve de souplesse et s'efforce de fournir aux parties la possibilité de présenter des témoignages par liaison vidéo » (Décision Tadić, paragraphe 18). La Chambre de première instance estime opportune d'ajouter une troisième condition, à savoir : (c) le droit de l'accusé de confronter le témoin ne sera pas lésé de ce fait ».

[6] Voir Le Procureur c. Nahimana et consorts, Chambre de première instance, Décision sur la requête du Procureur aux fins d'ajouter le témoin X à sa liste de témoins et de se voir accorder des mesures de protection, 14 septembre 2001 (par. 35. « Il ressort de précédents jurisprudentiels auxquels la Chambre adhère, que certaines conditions doivent être remplies pour que la déposition par vidéoconférence puisse être utilisée en l'espèce. La Chambre est d'avis que le témoignage recherché est tellement important qu'il serait dans l'intérêt de la justice de faire droit à la demande tendant à utiliser un système de vidéoconférence et qu'il ne sera nullement porté atteinte au droit de l'Accusé d'affronter le témoin. La question cruciale à laquelle on doit répondre consiste à savoir si le témoin acceptera ou non de venir devant le Tribunal ». Voir aussi *Le Procureur c. d'autres personnes à un moment précis et sont utiles à l'établissement de l'état d'esprit de l'accusé. Le Procureur affirme que la déclaration écrite permettrait également de contrer l'alibi annoncé par l'accusé relativement aux faits qui se sont produits à la résidence présidentielle. Le Procureur fait également valoir que l'admission de la déclaration permettrait d'économiser le temps et les ressources du Tribunal, surtout si le témoin n'est pas tenu de comparaître aux fins de son contre-interrogatoire ; et de plus, elle épargnerait au témoin les perturbations propres à un témoignage oral.

14. La Défense s'oppose à l'admission de la déclaration de BPP au motif qu'elle porte directement sur les actes de l'accusé.

15. Dès lors qu'elle a décidé d'autoriser BPP à déposer par liaison vidéo, la Chambre estime ne pas devoir délibérer de l'opportunité d'admettre la déclaration écrite de ce témoin.

PAR CES MOTIFS.

I. REJETTE la contre-requête en suspension de la procédure ;

II. FAIT DROIT à la requête tendant à ce que BPP dépose par liaison vidéo depuis la Belgique ;

III. SOLLICITE la coopération des autorités belges aux fins de la comparution de BPP par liaison vidéo depuis la Belgique ;

IV. INVITE le Greffier (i) à communiquer la présente décision aux autorités belges, (ii) à coopérer avec lesdites autorités en vue de la mise en œuvre de la mesure prescrite, compte tenu du calendrier de la prochaine et dernière session du procès consacrée à la présentation des moyens à charge, et (iii) à prendre les dispositions nécessaires pour que la déposition par liaison vidéo puisse avoir lieu à un moment opportun au cours de la prochaine session du procès.

LE PRESIDENT DU TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SAISI DE la requête de la Chambre de première instance III, dans sa décision relative aux requêtes de la Défense et du Procureur concernant le témoin ADE, en date du 31 janvier 2006, tendant à ce qu'il autorise la Chambre à siéger à La Haye pour recueillir la déposition dudit témoin,

CONSIDÉRANT les observations déposées par le Greffier en vertu de l'article 33 (B) du Règlement de procédure et de preuve (le « Règlement »), le 17 février 2006 ainsi que le mémorandum de la Chambre du 21 février 2006,

CONSIDÉRANT les observations supplémentaires produites par le Greffier en vertu de l'article 33 (B) du Règlement, le 24 avril 2006,

DECIDE DE CE QUI SUIT :

Introduction

1. Le 31 janvier 2006, la Chambre de première instance a rejeté la requête du Procureur tendant à autoriser le témoin ADE à déposer par voie de vidéoconférence, estimant que l'intérêt de la justice commandait plutôt de prendre toutes dispositions nécessaires pour entendre le témoin à La Haye en présence de toutes les parties. La Chambre a par conséquent en application de l'article 4 du Règlement, demandé au Président du Tribunal de l'autoriser à siéger à La Haye à cette fin, à une date à arrêter en consultation avec les parties et le Greffe[1]

[1] Affaire Zigiranyirazo, Décision relative aux requêtes de la Défense et du Procureur concernant le témoin ADE, 31 janvier 2006 (Chambre de première instance) en particulier le par. 34.

2. Le 17 février 2006, le Greffier du TPIR a, dans ses observations au Président du Tribunal, indiqué que le Greffier du Tribunal pénal international pour l'Ex-Yougoslavie («TPIY») avait fait savoir que le TPIY ne serait pas en mesure de donner suite à la demande de la Chambre de première instance du TPIR du fait de l'indisponibilité d'une salle d'audience. Le Greffier du TPIR a aussi fait valoir que le coût estimatif initial d'une audience serait prohibitif et obérerait les finances du TPIR.

3. Par la suite, le Greffier du TPIR saisira son homologue de la Cour pénale internationale (« CPI »), pour qu'il mette une salle d'audience de la CPI et d'autres moyens connexes à la disposition de la Chambre. Le Greffier de la CPI acceptera de mettre à la disposition du TPIR une salle d'audience et des moyens de détention moyennant remboursement pour une période de cinq jours, soit entre le 5 et le 9 juin 2006 aux fins de l'audition du témoin ADE. Dans ses observations du 24 avril 2006, le Greffier du TPIR a estimé que le coût total que l'opération occasionnerait au TPIR serait de l'ordre de 80 000 à 120 000 dollars des Etats-Unis d'Amérique, indiquant qu'il avait entrepris de dégager les ressources budgétaires nécessaires à cette fin.

4. Aux termes de l'article 4 du Règlement une Chambre ou un juge peut, avec l'autorisation du Président, exercer ses fonctions hors du siège du Tribunal, si l'intérêt de la justice le commande.

5. La Chambre s'est prévalu de l'article 4 du Règlement parce qu'elle doutait de l'adéquation et de la qualité de la déposition par voie de vidéoconférence et aussi parce qu'elle estimait que ce type de déposition était incompatible avec le droit de l'accusé à confronter son accusateur[2]. Il est vrai que, les précédentes dépositions par vidéoconférence étaient refondées comme moins probantes que le témoignage fait dans le prétoire[3]. Plus récemment cependant, les Chambres ont, dans plusieurs décisions, autorisé notamment plusieurs témoins importants et sensibles[4] à déposer par voie de vidéoconférence. L'expérience a montré que la transmission électronique peut fournir aux juges et aux parties qui sont dans le prétoire une image très claire du témoin ainsi qu'une transmission sonore de sa déposition de très bonne qualité et que l'aptitude de la Chambre à statuer sur la crédibilité du témoin ne l'en pas trouvée entamée[5]. Le témoignage par voie de vidéoconférence est donc un outil important, nécessaire et fiable pour le Tribunal.

6. En l'espèce, la Chambre de première instance souligne les risques accrus auxquels le témoin ADE s'exposerait s'il venait témoigner à Arusha et l'importance que le Procureur attache à la déposition de ce témoin, qui expliquerait qu'elle veuille l'entendre en personne et sans interruption[6]. Au regard de cette appréciation de la Chambre de première instance et des conclusions du Greffier selon lesquelles des fonds suffisants sont disponibles à ce stade, le Président du Tribunal fait exceptionnellement droit à la requête formée par la Chambre de première instance, en application de l'article 4 du Règlement. Le Greffier a cependant fait observer qu'il s'agit là de dépenses additionnelles imprévues et de nature à gêner dans le courant de l'année des activités déjà budgétisées du Tribunal, concluant qu'il serait difficile d'envisager une autre opération de cette nature du fait des contraintes budgétaires actuelles[7]. Le Président invite donc la Chambre à poursuivre ses consultations avec le Greffe afin de réduire autant que possible les dépenses occasionnées par la présente autorisation[8].

PAR CES MOTIFS, LE PRESIDENT

Protais Zigiranyirazo, Décision relative à la requête de la Défense intitulée « Decision on the Defence Motion for Disclosure of Exculpatory Information with Respect to Prior Statements of Prosecution Witnesses », 6 juillet 2006 (ICTR-2001-73)

Introduction

1. Le Procureur a conclu la présentation de ses moyens le 28 juin 2006. La Défense présentera les siens à partir du 30 octobre 2006. Le 1er septembre 2006, elle avait déposé un mémoire préalable à la présentation des moyens à décharge (le « Mémoire de la Défense »), en application de l'article 73 ter du Règlement de procédure et de preuve (le « Règlement »).

2. Le Procureur prie la Chambre d'exclure certains passages du Mémoire de la Défense, au motif que ceux-ci n'entrent pas dans le champ d'application de l'article 73 ter du Règlement[1] et vont à l'encontre de la décision rendue par la Chambre en juillet 2006[2].La Défense a déposé sa réponse le 7 septembre 2006[3]. Le Procureur a déposé sa réplique le 8 septembre 2006[4].

Arguments des parties

[1] Requête du Procureur tendant à faire exclure certains passages du mémoire de la Défense déposé en application de l'article 73 ter du Règlement de procédure et de preuve, déposée le 4 septembre 2006 (la « Requête du Procureur »).
[2] Décision relative à la requête de la Défense intitulée Decision on the Defence Motion for Disclosure of Exculpatory Information with Respect to Prior Statements of Prosecution Witnesses, rendue le 6 juillet 2006 (la « Décision de juillet 2006 »).
[3] Réponse de la Défense à la requête du Procureur tendant à faire exclure certains passages du mémoire de la Défense, déposée le 7 septembre 2006 (la « Réponse de la Défense »).
[4] Réplique du Procureur à la réponse de la Défense concernant la requête du Procureur tendant à faire exclure certains passages du mémoire de la Défense déposé en application de l'article 73 ter du Règlement de procédure et de preuve, déposée le 8 septembre 2006 (la « Réplique du Procureur »).

3. Le Procureur prie la Chambre d'exclure les paragraphes 55 à 62 du Mémoire de la Défense, car ils ne comportent que des arguments et n'ont aucun rapport avec les dispositions de l'article 73 ter du Règlement. Il demande que les paragraphes 63 à 66 soient également exclus et que certains membres du Bureau du Procureur figurant sur la liste des témoins à décharge en soient écartés, les questions ainsi évoquées ayant été tranchées dans la Décision de juillet 2006. Il soutient que la Défense cherche à faire valoir de nouveau les arguments d'une requête qui a déjà fait l'objet d'une décision. II demande que soient appliquées les sanctions prévues aux articles 73 et 46 du Règlement.

4. Pour lui permettre de bien préparer le procès, le Procureur prie également la Chambre d'inviter la Défense à déposer une liste définitive de ses témoins, une liste de pièces à conviction et un résumé de la déposition que doit faire l'accusé.

5. La Défense répond que les paragraphes 55 à 62 de son mémoire visent à informer la Chambre de l'état d'avancement de sa préparation au procès. Quant aux paragraphes 63 à 66 et aux témoins 48 à 53, ils doivent lui permettre de préserver son droit d'interjeter appel de la Décision de juillet 2006.

6. La Défense dit qu'elle sera prête à fournir une liste de témoins potentiels d'ici au 10 octobre 2006. Elle déclare aussi qu'un résumé de la déposition attendue de l'accusé ne sera fourni que si celui-ci décide de déposer. Elle fait valoir enfin qu'à la conférence de mise en état, le 30 juin 2006, le Procureur avait accepté que la Défense ne dépose que les pièces à conviction qui étaient prêtes.

7. Dans sa réplique, le Procureur ajoute que, selon la Décision de la Chambre, faute d'établir une infraction aux règles en vigueur ou d'autres irrégularités, les parties au procès ne peuvent citer à la barre les membres de la partie adverse. Il affirme que même si l'accusé choisissait de ne pas déposer, il ne subirait aucun préjudice en fournissant un résumé de la déposition attendue de lui, en application de l'article 73 ter (B) (iii) du Règlement.

8. Le Mémoire de la Défense n'est pertinent que dans la mesure où il définit les grandes lignes de la thèse de la Défense. Les faits et arguments qui sortent de ce cadre sont sans intérêt pour la Chambre, même s'ils sont maintenus dans ledit mémoire. La Chambre estime donc que rien ne justifie d'exclure du Mémoire de la Défense les paragraphes 55 à 62, qui ne portent en aucune façon préjudice au Procureur ni n'empêchent la Chambre d'exercer ses fonctions.

9. Dans sa Décision de juillet 2006, la Chambre a estimé que, la Défense n'ayant pas établi que des membres du Bureau du Procureur avaient commis une infraction aux règles en vigueur ni qu'ils étaient animés de l'intention de nuire à autrui lorsqu'ils avaient recueilli les déclarations des témoins, elle n'était donc pas fondée à appeler ces fonctionnaires à la barre[5]. Aux paragraphes 63 à 66 de son mémoire, la Défense reprend des arguments que la Chambre avait déjà rejetés. À l'annexe A dudit mémoire figurent également les noms de six membres du Bureau du Procureur présentés comme étant les témoins 48 à 53. La Défense n'a en rien établi que ces témoins présentaient un intérêt pour des questions autres que celles qui ont déjà été tranchées dans la Décision de juillet 2006. L'inscription desdits membres sur la liste des témoins à décharge allant à l'encontre de la décision susmentionnée, la Chambre ordonne à la Défense d'écarter les témoins 48 à 53 de ladite liste. En outre, la Chambre ne tiendra pas compte des paragraphes 63 à 66 du Mémoire de la Défense.

10. La Chambre relève que la Défense a déposé une liste définitive de témoins le 9 octobre 2006[6]. Les arguments du Procureur à ce sujet sont donc désormais sans objet.

11. Le Procureur, pour sa part, a déposé plusieurs pièces à conviction qu'il n'avait pas annexées à son mémoire préalable au procès. La Chambre relève qu'à la conférence de mise en état, le Procureur avait accepté que seules les pièces à conviction déjà prêtes seraient déposées avec le Mémoire de la

[5] Décision de juillet 2006, par. 13 à 17.

Défense[7]. En conséquence, elle rejette la demande du Procureur relative aux pièces à conviction à décharge.

12. La Chambre n'exigera pas de l'accusé qu'il fournisse un résumé de la déposition attendue de lui.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

FAIT DROIT en partie à la requête du Procureur ;

ORDONNE à la Défense d'écarter de la liste des témoins à décharge les témoins apparaissant aux numéros 48) « Me (sic) Stephen Rapp », 49) « Zudhi Janbek », 50) « Interprète de [...] Rapp », 51) « Gina Butler », 52) « Enquêteur de [...] Butler Z. Janbek » et 53) « Interprète de [...] Butler ».

REJETTE la requête du Procureur pour le surplus.

Introduction

1. Protais Zigiranyirazo (l'« accusé ») est accusé de génocide, ou subsidiairement de complicité dans le génocide, et d'entente en vue de commettre le génocide, en application de l'article 2 du Statut du Tribunal (le « Statut »), ainsi que d'extermination et d'assassinat constitutifs de crimes contre l'humanité en application de l'article 3 du Statut.

2. Après avoir appelé à la barre 25 témoins, dont quatre enquêteurs et un témoin expert, et versé 75 pièces à conviction au dossier en 46 jours d'audience, le Procureur a achevé la présentation de ses moyens le 28 juin 2006. La Chambre a fait droit à la demande formée par la Défense aux fins d'obtenir la prorogation du délai dont elle disposait pour déposer sa requête en acquittement en vertu de l'article 98 bis du Règlement. Le Procureur a également obtenu la prorogation du délai de réponse imparti. La requête de la Défense a été déposée le 13 juillet 2006[1], la réponse du Procureur, le 31 juillet 2006[2], la réplique de la Défense le 2 août 2006[3] et la duplique du Procureur le 7 août 2006[4].

Délibérations

3. L'article 98 bis du Règlement se lit comme suit :

> Si, à l'issue de la présentation par le Procureur de ses moyens de preuve, la Chambre de première instance conclut que ceux-ci ne suffisent pas à justifier une condamnation pour un ou plusieurs des chefs visés dans l'acte d'accusation, elle prononce, sur requête de l'accusé déposée dans les sept jours suivant la fin de la présentation des moyens à charge, à moins que la Chambre n'en décide autrement, ou d'office, l'acquittement en ce qui concerne lesdits chefs.

4. Pour appliquer cet article, la jurisprudence du Tribunal recherche si un juge des faits raisonnable pourrait prononcer une déclaration de culpabilité au cas où les éléments de preuve produits par le Procureur seraient retenus[5]. Il s'ensuit que si une Chambre est saisie d'éléments de preuve pouvant autoriser un juge des faits raisonnable qui y ajoute foi à prononcer une déclaration de culpabilité pour le chef d'accusation considéré sans laisser subsister le moindre doute raisonnable dans son esprit, toute demande d'acquittement doit être rejetée. En revanche, si aucun élément de preuve n'a pas été produit à l'appui d'un chef d'accusation, la demande doit être accueillie[6]. La Chambre souligne que l'article 98 bis lui fait obligation d'examiner les chefs d'accusation ; il n'est pas nécessaire qu'elle analyse chacun des paragraphes de l'acte d'accusation[7]. Elle n'apprécie la crédibilité et la fiabilité des témoignages que « lorsque la cause de l'Accusation s'est totalement effondrée, soit lorsqu'elle interrogeait ses propres témoins, soit à l'issue d'un contre-interrogatoire ayant soulevé des questions si fondamentales sur la fiabilité et la crédibilité des témoins que l'Accusation se retrouve privée d'arguments »[8]. Il convient d'apprécier les éléments de preuve à charge dans leur ensemble, en s'appuyant sur « la totalité des témoignages » et en faisant toute déduction raisonnablement possible[9]. Si la Chambre décide au stade visé par l'article 98 bis d'admettre les éléments de preuve produits par le Procureur, rien ne lui interdit de conclure à la fin que ces éléments ne permettent pas d'établir la culpabilité de l'accusé au-delà de tout doute raisonnable[10].

5. La Défense a présenté deux types d'arguments sur la valeur des éléments de preuve à charge, les uns concernant l'administration de la preuve des divers chefs retenus dans l'acte d'accusation[11] et les autres celle de la preuve des faits énoncés dans chacun des paragraphes de l'acte d'accusation.

6. Elle demande que l'accusé soit acquitté du chef 5 (assassinat constitutif de crime contre l'humanité). S'agissant des autres chefs, elle demande à la Chambre d'analyser les paragraphes de l'acte d'accusation l'un après l'autre pour écarter ceux qui ont été étayés par des éléments de preuve insuffisants. Pour rechercher si les éléments de preuve à charge dont elle a été saisie sont suffisants, la Chambre commencera donc par le chef 5.

Chef 5 : Assassinat constitutif de crime contre l'humanité

7. Selon la Défense, aucun des actes incriminés allégués au chef 5 n'a été dûment établi. La Défense reconnaît que si chacune des allégations de meurtre figurant dans l'acte d'accusation était établie[12], elle serait suffisante pour déclarer l'accusé coupable de ce chef[13]. Cela étant, au cas où la Chambre estimerait que la preuve de l'un des meurtres allégués a été dûment apportée, la Défense lui demande soit d'acquitter l'accusé des autres meurtres, soit de conclure qu'il n'a pas à répondre de ceux-ci et les supprimer ou préciser qu'elle n'en tiendra pas compte dans ses délibérations finales[14].

8. Dans l'acte d'accusation, il est reproché à l'accusé d'avoir tué trois gendarmes, Stanislas Sinibagiwe (« Sinibagiwe ») et des membres de deux familles tutsies[15]. Le Procureur reconnaît qu'aucun élément de preuve n'a été produit à propos du meurtre des membres des familles Sekimonyo et Bahoma[16], mais soutient qu'il en existe suffisamment dans le dossier pour prouver le meurtre des trois gendarmes et de Stanislas Sinibagiwe[17].

9. Le meurtre est le fait de donner volontairement la mort à une personne ou de porter volontairement une atteinte grave à son intégrité physique en sachant que cette atteinte est de nature à entraîner la mort de la victime ou en faisant peu de cas de ce que sa mort pourrait en résulter, sans faits justificatifs ni excuse[18].

10. Selon le Statut, ces infractions doivent remplir deux conditions pour être qualifiées de crimes contre l'humanité : le crime doit s'inscrire « dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée ou systématique » et l'attaque doit être dirigée « contre une population civile quelle qu'elle soit, en raison de son appartenance nationale, politique, ethnique, raciale ou religieuse ».

11. Une attaque est « généralisée » lorsqu'elle est de grande envergure ou est perpétrée sur une grande échelle et se solde par un grand nombre de victimes ; elle est « systématique » lorsqu'elle constitue une ligne de conduite organisée, par opposition à des actes fortuits ou sans aucun rapport entre eux commis par des acteurs indépendants[19]. Ces conditions que l'attaque doit remplir caractérisent l'élément moral propres aux crimes contre l'humanité : l'auteur doit, au minimum, savoir que son acte s'inscrit dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée ou systématique dirigée contre des civils pour des motifs discriminatoires, qu'il partage cette intention discriminatoire ou non[20].

12. La Chambre souligne à nouveau que tout examen qu'il convient de faire pour statuer sur une requête formée en vertu de l'article 98 bis ne doit normalement porter que sur les chefs d'accusation. En conséquence, elle ne recherchera pas si des éléments de preuve ont été présentés à l'appui de chacun des paragraphes de l'acte d'accusation. S'il existe des éléments de preuve à charge tendant à établir l'un des meurtres allégués qui pourraient étayer le chef d'accusation, il n'y a pas lieu de prononcer l'acquittement.

13. Selon la Défense, les informations fournies par les témoins dans leurs dépositions ne suffisent ni pour conclure que l'accusé est responsable du meurtre de Sinibagiwe ni pour soutenir que ce meurtre était un crime contre l'humanité, puisqu'il n'a pas été commis dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée ou systématique dirigée contre la population civile en raison de son appartenance ethnique ou raciale[21] ou des motifs d'ordre politique[22]. Dans ces circonstances, la Défense estime que le meurtre de Sinibagiwe est une tentative d'extorsion de fonds qui a mal tourné[23].

14. Le Procureur répond que Sinibagiwe était visé parce qu'il était considéré comme un complice de l'ennemi – il passait pour être un Hutu opposé au gouvernement de l'époque – et que c'est pour cette raison qu'il a été tué[24]. Le Procureur rappelle la déposition du témoin AVY pour montrer qu'il y a suffisamment d'éléments de preuve, tant directs qu'indirects, permettant à la Chambre de conclure que l'accusé a pleinement participé au meurtre de Sinibagiwe[25].

15. Il est établi que l'accusé a assisté et participé à une réunion lors de laquelle il a été décidé que Sinibagiwe ne serait pas autorisé à franchir le poste-frontière de la Petite barrière[26], Sinibagiwe étant considéré comme un complice de l'ennemi et l'ennemi étant le Tutsi[27]. Après la réunion, Sinibagiwe a été retenu au poste-frontière de la Petite barrière jusqu'à ce qu'Omar Serushago, qui aurait assisté à la réunion avec l'accusé, l'en retire et le conduise en voiture en direction de la commune rouge, un cimetière local de Gisenyi. Il est aussi établi que peu de temps après, on a entendu tirer des coups de feu à la commune rouge. Par la suite, le témoin a appris que Sinibagiwe avait été tué[28].

16. Ayant minutieusement examiné le dossier, la Chambre est convaincue qu'elle a été saisie d'éléments de preuve qui, si on y ajoute foi, pourraient conduire un juge des faits raisonnable à conclure que ce meurtre s'inscrivait dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée, voire systématique, dirigée contre des civils pour un ou plusieurs des motifs énumérés à l'article 3 du Statut.

17. Elle estime que les éléments de preuve susvisés, pourraient conduire un juge des faits raisonnable qui y ajoute foi à conclure que l'accusé est coupable d'assassinat constitutif de crime contre l'humanité pour avoir aidé et encouragé à tuer Sinibagiwe.

Chef 1 : Entente en vue de commettre le génocide, chef 2 : génocide, chef 3 : complicité dans le génocide et chef 4 : extermination constitutive de crime contre l'humanité

18. Le Procureur a également retenu contre l'accusé les chefs d'entente en vue de commettre le génocide (chef 1 de l'acte d'accusation), de génocide (chef 2) et de complicité dans le génocide (chef

3) prévus à l'article 2 (3) du Statut, ainsi que celui d'extermination constitutive de crime contre l'humanité (chef 4), prévu à l'article 3 (b) du Statut.

19. L'article 98 bis du Règlement fait obligation à la Chambre de rechercher si les éléments de preuve versés au dossier ne suffisent pas à justifier une condamnation. Il ne lui demande pas d'examiner les vices de l'acte d'accusation ni de vérifier si l'accusé a été suffisamment informé des faits qui lui sont reprochés[29]. Par conséquent, la Chambre ne tiendra pas compte des arguments de la Défense concernant le respect de sa décision du 15 juillet 2004 qui prescrit de modifier l'acte d'accusation[30].

20. La Chambre refuse de faire droit à la demande de la Défense qui l'a invitée à analyser paragraphe par paragraphe le reste des chefs retenus dans l'acte d'accusation. Comme elle l'a souligné plus haut, elle n'adoptera pas cette démarche parce que l'article 98 bis lui demande d'examiner les éléments de preuve à charge qui se rapportent aux chefs d'accusation. La Défense n'a nullement dit que le défaut de preuves étayant les paragraphes mis en question doit conduire la Chambre à acquitter l'accusé de l'un des chefs restants. Au contraire, elle reconnaît que des éléments de preuve ont été présentés à l'appui de ces chefs. Il s'ensuit que le volet de la requête relatif aux chefs 1 à 4 de l'acte d'accusation n'est pas bien fondé et doit être rejeté[31].

Concessions du Procureur relatives au défaut d'éléments de preuve tendant à établir les allégations figurant aux paragraphes 20, 25, 26, 37, 48, 49 et 50

21. Le Procureur reconnaît qu'il n'a pas produit d'élément de preuve tendant à établir les allégations figurant aux paragraphes 20, 25, 26, 37, 48, 49 et 50 de l'acte d'accusation. Ces paragraphes concernent les chefs alternatifs de génocide et de complicité dans le génocide, ainsi que les chefs d'extermination et d'assassinat constitutifs de crimes contre l'humanité. Il ressort de l'examen de l'acte d'accusation qu'ils portent respectivement sur le fait que l'accusé a donné l'ordre de creuser un charnier appelé la « Fosse » derrière sa maison ainsi que sur son rôle dans la mort d'une trentaine de membres du clan des Sekimonyo, une famille tutsie, et dans celle de quelque 18 membres du clan des Bahoma, une autre famille tutsie. La Chambre admet la concession du Procureur selon laquelle aucun élément de preuve n'a été présenté à l'appui de ces allégations et en conclut que l'accusé n'a pas à répondre des faits qui lui sont reprochés dans les paragraphes visés.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

Décision portant prorogation d'un délai de dépôt d'écritures Article 73 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve 2 novembre 2006 (ICTR-2001-73-T)

(Original : Anglais)

Chambre de première instance III

Juges : Inés Mónica Weinberg de Roca, Président; Khalida Rachid Khan; Lee Gacuiga Muthoga

Protais Zigiranyirazo – prorogation d'un délai – Absence de préjudice pour l'accusé – Intérêt de la justice – Dépôt d'écritures par le Procureur – Requête acceptée

Instrument international cité :

Règlement de procédure et de preuve, art. 73

1. Le 1er novembre 2006, le Procureur s'est engagé à déposer avant la fin de la journée sa requête en réouverture de la présentation des moyens à charge et en rappel du témoin Michel Bagaragaza. À la suite de cet engagement, la Chambre a ordonné à la Défense de produire ses conclusions en réponse le 2 novembre 2006[1].

2. Le Procureur sollicite à présent une prorogation de délai allant jusqu'au 6 novembre 2006 pour déposer sa requête[2]. La Défense s'oppose à la requête en prorogation de délai, estimant que le Procureur doit déposer sa requête tendant à faire rouvrir la présentation des moyens à charge et rappeler le témoin le 2 novembre 2006 au plus tard et la Défense sa réponse le 3 novembre 2006 au plus tard[3].

3. La Chambre juge que la prorogation de délai sollicitée ne portera pas préjudice à l'accusé et sert l'intérêt de la justice. Cela étant, elle invite le Procureur à déposer ses écritures d'ici le lundi 6 novembre 2006 à 9 heures.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

I. FAIT DROIT à la requête en prorogation de délai ;

II. AUTORISE le Procureur à déposer ses écritures le 6 novembre 2006 à 9 heures au plus tard et la Défense à y répondre, s'il y a lieu, dans les vingt-quatre heures suivant la notification desdites écritures.

Fait à Arusha, le 2 novembre 2006.

Select bibliography / Éléments bibliographique

The select bibliography reproduced below brings together the titles of articles and books devoted, in whole or in part, to the ICTR or to its jurisprudence. The list was compiled by searching the decisions of the Chambers, the Bibliographie trimestrielle du TPIR (ICTR Quarterly Bibliography) prepared by the Tribunal's library service, as well as Public International Law and the Index to Foreign Legal Periodicals. Only articles and books published prior to 2006 are included in the list, with the exception of articles given over to commentaries on decisions published in the previous Reports. The latter are mentioned, regardless of their date of publication, at the beginning of the respective files. It is also worth drawing attention to the initiative of the organisation Avocats sans Frontières, which ensures the circulation of certain judgments handed down by the Rwandan courts and tribunals regarding persons accused of participation in the genocide. These judgments and cases are available, in French only, and for the most part in pdf format, from the ASF website, at http://www.asf.be/AssisesRwanda 2/fr/ justice.htm.

Les éléments de bibliographie reproduits ci-dessous reprennent les titres d'articles et d'ouvrages consacrés en tout ou en partie au TPIR ou à sa jurisprudence. Cette liste a été établie sur la base du dépouillement des décisions du tribunal, de la Bibliographie trimestrielle du TPIR (ICTR Quarterly Bibliography) préparée par les services de la bibliothèque du Tribunal, ainsi que de Public International Law et de l'Index to Foreign Legal Periodicals. Seuls les articles et ouvrages antérieurs à 2006 sont repris dans cette liste, à l'exception des articles consacrés à des commentaires de décisions publiées dans les éditions précédentes du Recueil. Ces derniers sont mentionnés, indépendamment de leur date de publication, au début des dossiers concernés. Par ailleurs, il convient également de signaler l'initiative de l'organisation Avocats sans Frontières, qui assure la diffusion de certaines décisions rendues par les cours et tribunaux rwandais à l'encontre de personnes accusées d'avoir participé au génocide. Ces jugements et arrêts sont disponibles, en français seulement, et pour la plupart en format pdf, sur le site internet d'ASF, à l'adresse suivante : http://www.asf.be/AssisesRwanda2/fr/ justice.htm.
